KIDS LAUNCH CANDY BOYCOTT

PORT COQUITLAM (CP)—All members of an elementary class have decided to boycott candy bars because "we're just paying too much."

The youngsters have written a letter to the Anti-Inflation Board protesting increases in candy bars to 25 cents from 20 cents. They also plan to lecture other classes on the need for the boycott.

The group's letter to the Anti-Inflation Board says the pupils hope adults will join the protest.

Chocolate bars aren't particularly healthy, says Robin McGregor, 12, but they are a treat.

"But no one will get any treats if the prices are like that."

Class teacher Jim Polomerk said he had nothing to do with launching the protest.

Cheap Birds Seized By B.C. Board

VANCOUVER (CP) — Super-Valu will challenge the British Columbia Broiler Marketing Board's authority in British Columbia Supreme Court following board seizure of about 1,000 imported chickens, company spokesman Shirley Anne Brown said Friday.

Ms. Brown said it was the company's understanding that the board "has no authority over imported chickens."

The supermarket company began selling Missouri-grown birds on Wednesday at its 45 Vancouver-area stores as an "in-store special."

The imported chickens cost the store about 55 cents a pound, compared with a wholesale cost of 75 cents a pound from B.C. processors, and were to sell at 59 cents a pound.

Martin McNeil, a marketing board inspector, entered several stores Thursday and placed seizure tags on the birds, forbidding anyone to move them.

"We are simply carrying out our job as the consumers' buying agent," said Ms. Brown, reading from a statement Friday. "Our first responsibility is to our customers."

She said the chickens, which were cleared by federal health and agriculture authorities, are fresh, whole, U.S. department of agriculture grade A chickens.

Ms. Brown, noting that imported chickens have been sold in Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta, said the entire 20-cent saving Super-Valu made on the U.S. purchase was being passed on to consumers.

Bruce McAninch, a chicken farmer and chairman of the marketing board, said Kelly Douglas Co. Ltd. asked the board in November for permission to import U.S. chicken and was refused. The wholesaler is part of the Weston Food Group which owns Super-Valu.

McAninch said the board agreed to a joint study with the food industry of high B.C. chicken prices in December and understood the supermarkets would continue selling B.C. chicken while the study was being carried out.

The chicken seizure was followed Friday by local chicken farmers setting up picket lines at Super-Valu stores at two area shopping centres.

McAninch said Super-Valu's action could jeopardize the jobs of 1,000 workers in the B.C. processing industry, in addition to the 230 chicken-meat producers in the province.

"They (Super-Valu) are supposed to be a Canadian company doing something for the Canadian economy," said McAninch.

SOCCER FAN STABBED

LONDON (Reuter) — A policeman was stabbed outside the Chelsea soccer ground today before the start of Chelsea's Second Division league match against Millwall.

Inside the ground, 12 mounted policemen were called into action to quell fighting in the crowd.

Police also had to move in to break up fights among spectators at two other London grounds, Charlton Athletic and Tottenham Hotspur.

No Dead Heroes, Please

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is interested in good citizens, not dead heroes.

Manager Brian Small said Friday the chamber doesn't have a pot of gold available "for anyone who's done the hero bit."

And it certainly isn't suggesting anyone grapple with an armed holdup man in an effort to earn a reward.

He was commenting on a reward fund announced earlier, suggested by businessman Sidney Kovnats as a way of increasing public interest in catching robbers, or helping police to track them down.

There have been 18 holdups or attempted holdups in Greater Victoria so far this year.

Chamber president Alan Emery endorsed the idea of the reward fund and said members would be canvassed.

Small said the chamber has rewarded acts of good citizenship in the past, paying $50 rewards to three boys several years ago after they caught vandals damaging gravemarkers in Ross Bay cemetery.

Emery said the first to benefit from the newly-established fund would be three boys who caught a would-be holdup man in Colwood Tuesday night.

Small said one of the three phoned him Friday, looking for his money. But the usual way for such matters to be handled is for a recommendation to be debated by the chamber's executive committee first, he said.

Meanwhile, one donation of $50 has come in toward the reward fund.

NEWS BRIEFS

Price Inquiry Urged

The rapidly rising price of food has caused the B.C. Government Employees Union to call for a public inquiry, and to urge the Canadian Labor Congress to call for a national inquiry. See story on Page 21.

Death Threats

OTTAWA — The four Quebec MPs who refused to stand for God Save the Queen in Parliament have received anonymous death threats, RCMP reported in Ottawa. See story on Page 3.

Extra Gas to U.S.

OTTAWA (CP — An additional three billion cubic feet of natural gas has been approved for export to meet emergency fuel needs in the United States, the National Energy Board said Friday.

Man Murdered

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — An elderly man who lived alone was found brutally murdered in his home Friday by a postman. Police say the home was forcibly entered and the man had been stabbed several times. His name was being withheld.

ICBC Land Sale

VANCOUVER (CP) — Parcels of land at Haney, Richmond and Kelowna, originally slated for Insurance Corporation of British Columbia claim centres, are for sale to the highest bidder, an ICBC spokesman said Friday. The land is no longer needed because of a substantial drop in claims.

Lumber Sales Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lumber shipments from British Columbia ports in 1976 increased 70 per cent over the previous year — the first increase in nine years, Pacific Lumber Inspection Bureau figures show.

Pigs for Queen

APIA, Western Samoa (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth sipped a potent local brew and was ceremonially presented with pigs when she stepped ashore in Western Samoa today on her jubilee tour of the South Pacific.

Non-Metal Boats Get Reflectors

WINNIPEG (CP) — Non-metallic pleasure boats in Canada will be required to carry radar reflectors after Jan. 1 of next year, members of the Canadian Yachting Association were told Friday.

Michael O'Dowd of Toronto, a senior marine surveyor for the Ministry of Transport, told the group's annual meeting that exemptions would be available in cases where installation of reflectors is impractical and not essential for safety.

Radar reflectors would allow vessels equipped with radar to spot non-metallic boats. Sails, fibreglass and wood do not reflect radar signals.

EVEN THE QUEEN AFFECTED

Massive Copter Fraud

By BILL RICHARDS
Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Millions of dollars in potentially-substandard helicopter parts have been sold to foreign military helicopter fleets a knowledgeable industry informant has told authorities here.

These fleets provide, among other duties, NATO anti-submarine defence and personal transportation to heads of state such as the Queen of England, the Shah of Iran and Egyptian president Anwar Sadat, the informant has said.

The parts were sold with forged identification and misleading inspection documents in identifying them as top-quality, brand-name components, the source added.

Senior helicopter industry officials have called the allegations "serious" and "alarming" and investigations are under way here and in England to determine if they are true.

If the charges are accurate, officials say, they could cause the grounding of hundreds of European military helicopters.

Correcting the problem might cost as much as $100 million, experts say. In extensive interviews recently, the informant repeated his story to The Washington Post.

The Post also interviewed other officials familiar with all or part of the alleged scheme, and they confirmed the informant's story.

Two of the informants expressed fears for their personal safety because of the story, and all requested anonymity.

According to the allegations, company names or federally issued identification numbers have been forged on the parts indicating they came from — and met the standards of — the Bell Helicopter Co. of the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corp.

Actually, neither company made or inspected the parts, which were manufactured by other firms working without critical processing specifications, according to the allegations.

The parts were given what appeared to be U.S. Federal Aviation Administration airworthiness certification.

However, the certifications came from several FAA-licensed helicopter repair stations which were not equipped to give them full inspections nor authorized to issue the certifications.

Officials at one such station admitted to The Washington Post that they were not in a position to vouch for the parts' airworthiness even though they issued the certifications.

Misleading certification also was supplied by Bell-licensed inspection stations in Southern California.

The stations were licensed by Bell to install pre-tested Bell parts, but they were not equipped to do sophisticated testing on their own to prove the parts could meet Bell stress, metal-fatigue or heat-testing requirements.

Nor were the certifications authorized by Bell, according to a Bell official.

The suspect parts have allegedly ended up in at least 608 helicopters in the military fleets of Britain, West Germany, France, Belgium, Norway, Australia, Egypt, Qatar and Pakistan, and they also may have been sold to the military helicopter fleets of Iran and Holland.

A Bell official and a British military official in Washington said that if the charges are accurate they could require the grounding of virtually all of England's military helicopter fleet.

British and West Germany helicopters play a major role in NATO anti-submarine warfare defences, according to U.S. Defence Department officials.

The parts allegedly have also been installed on the personal helicopters of Queen Elizabeth and Egyptian President Sadat and on a military helicopter owned by the shah, according to the allegations.

In addition, the parts may

GOV'T GRABS A 'FORTUNE'

VANCOUVER (CP)—At the time, Bob Neumann thought the $300 he got from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board was a small fortune.

It was for the bruises, broken glasses and torn, blood-stained clothing that was a result of a mugging six months ago.

"Now, it seems like a helluva lot more money because (Provincial Human Resources Minister Bill) Vander Zalm is going to take it out of my handicapped allowance," Neumann said in an interview Friday.

Neumann, a construction laborer disabled by a back injury, lives on $265-a-month handicapped allowance and another $50 he earns hooking rugs.

His social worker told him this week he would probably miss one month's allowance and part of another to make up for the $300.

Neumann said he'll try to get by on his $100 renter's grant from the provincial government, the $40 he has in the bank and his rug money.

"I'll ask my landlord to trust me for a while and go round to the missions for some of my food."

Neumann got the $300 in January, five months after "two young punks punched me out twice in one night."

First, they banged on the door of his two-room shack in the city's skid road district. Killer, Neumann's mongrel dog, went barking after them and was kicked by the hoodlums.

"I went out and they worked me over."

When Neumann went out later to look for his dog, the youths drove by and pummelled him while he was writing down their car licence number.

Neumann said he spent his $300 this way: $75 on overdue rent for his $150-a-month dwelling; $65 owed to B.C. Hydro on a light and heat bill that averages $30 a month; $50 on clothes; $40 into the bank, and the rest on an improved diet.

"I ate shoulder steaks, chuck roasts, pork picnics and other stuff I can't usually afford."

Neumann said he applied for the criminal injuries payment last September after his social worker said it wouldn't be deducted from his allowance.

"Now she tells me the law has been changed and I'll have to pay it back."

A spokesman for the Human Resources Department in Victoria said the $300 "would probably be recoverable."

"This is, after all, taxpayers' money we are talking about," she said.

Sudden Thaw Threat to East

Times News Services

A sudden thaw coupled with rain threatened to set the eastern United States awash in melted snow and ice this weekend.

A flood watch was posted for western New York state, where Mayor Stanley Makowski of blizzard-shocked Buffalo cautioned: "There's a real potential for another disaster: flooding. There must be some massive preparations now."

But, in the West, the problem is lack of water. Wells and reservoirs are drying up. California is considering state-wide rationing. Grain and feed crops in the Midwest may shrivel, and some farmers are selling animals for slaughter because they can't water them.

Temperatures Friday were from four to 10 celsius through most of the East, in contrast to record-setting lows at the beginning of the month.

Major rivers are still well below flood levels because of ice buildups, but continued warm weather will melt that ice.

Ice still chokes a 63-mile stretch of the Mississippi above Cairo, Ill., where commercial river traffic has been stalled for nearly a month. Sunken barges are hampering tugs trying to punch through ice as thick as nine feet in some spots.

Temperatures above freezing were forecast for most of the U.S. throughout the weekend, with rain likely as well late today and Sunday. More showers are considered likely for Monday and Tuesday.

"This will cause continuous melting of snow and river ice through the weekend, and as a result the potential for movement and jamming of the ice will increase during the next several days," the U.S. weather service said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais Friday accepted a challenge to determine if newspapers can be delivered faster by pony express than by mail.

The challenge was initiated by the Manitoba Community Newspapers Association and conveyed to the minister in the Commons by Brandon MP Walter Dinsdale.

Blais said he is confident the mail will win despite association claims that pony express is faster than the current speed of mail delivery.

"The post office has no competition from pony express," Blais said in a lighthearted exchange with Dinsdale.

Although no date was set for the contest, Blaise said he understands the association prefers to wait until spring when snow would not hamper efforts by the four-footed mail carriers.

Soviet Static Is 'Bent' Radar

COPENHAGEN (WP) — A high-powered radio beam disrupting short-wave broadcasts all over northern Europe has been identified here as a new Soviet radar system that "bends" with the curvature of the earth.

According to Danish military intelligence, the system appears to have been designed to pick up and target incoming low-flying aircraft or missiles that elude conventional radar screens. Two such targets, according to the Danes, would be the U.S. cruise missile and B-1 bomber, both still under development.

Danish technicians have established that the beams emanate from a radar system and the device is essentially defensive, according to military sources. They rule out speculation that the transmissions are part of an offensive aimed at giving the Soviets a strike capability after a nuclear attack.

The Danes, however, readily acknowledge they are able to make only a limited examination of the Soviet beams. The United States, with its satellites and other technically advanced equipment, is relied upon by Denmark and other NATO allies to deliver a definitive analysis.

The Danish Postal and Telegraph Administration first picked up the signals in August, according to Borge Nielsen, the chief engineer. Copenhagen sent routine complaints to the Soviet telecommunications authorities. These were ignored. So Denmark with Norway protested formally to the Soviet Foreign Ministry last November. That produced a reply of sorts. The Soviets said they were carrying out experiments and would make an effort to reduce the interference.

Identical messages were given other protesting nations but the signals continue.

The signals continue to this day, appearing irregularly on different frequencies and at odd hours.

Nielsen said so far the interference has not caused any accidents involving planes or ships using radio for communication and navigation. He added, however, he feared some disaster might occur if the experiments are not brought under control.

One-Man Probe Into CS Bargaining

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government has appointed a one-man committee to review the public service collective bargaining structure and make recommendations for possible changes.

Carrying out the study is Richard Higgins, a retired government employee, who headed the five-man committee which recommended in late 1972 that public service employees be given collective bargaining rights.

The committee was appointed by the former NDP government and its recommendations resulted in the Public Service Labor Relations Act, passed by the legislature in the fall of 1973.

The legislation gave the employees the right to strike for the first time and established a two-tiered system of collective bargaining.

Higgins has been asked to determine whether the legislation has been properly implemented and whether further changes are necessary.

He has received briefs on the issue from five interested groups and next week those involved are to comment on the submissions of the other parties.

The groups involved are the B.C. Government Employees Union, the Professional Employees Association, the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association, acting as a unit, the Public Service Commission and the Government Employee Relations Bureau.

A source said Higgins is expected to have all the submissions by the end of the month and will likely have submitted his recommendations to the government by the middle of March.

If there are to be changes, both parties would like to see them brought in during the current legislative session, the source said.

Some dissatisfaction with the existing bargaining system was expressed by both sides following the end of negotiations last December for a contract for 33,000 public service employees in 13 components.

Under the two-tiered system, bargaining takes place for a master agreement on matters common to all groups and then there is a separate level of negotiations for wages and matters peculiar to each of the 13 occupational groups.

Mike Davison, vice-chairman of the Government Employee Relations Bureau, said in December he would like to see the two-tiered system scrapped because there is potential for strikes at 14 different levels — the one master agreement and the 13 component agreements.

Judge and General Rescued in Spain

MADRID (AP)—Spain's interior minister says the police rescue of a general and a royal adviser from the hands of leftist kidnappers removed an "obstacle" to granting amnesty to more political prisoners.

Lt.-Gen. Emilio Villaescusa, Spain's top military judge who was kidnapped on Jan. 24, and Antonio Maria de Oriol, a member of King Juan Carlos's council of the Realm who was abducted Dec. 11, were found by police who stormed two apartments hideouts on opposite ends of the capital on Friday.

The rescue bolstered Premier Adolfo Suarez's reform-minded government which had been shaken by political violence that left 10 persons dead last month. Announcing the arrest of the ringleaders of the kidnappers, Interior Minister Rodolfo Martin Villa indicated the government might act soon on amnesty.

"As has been said, amnesty is in the government line," he told reporters Friday.

"Now that Oriol and Villescusa are free, this supposes the removal of an obstacle that would oppose amnesty."

An estimated 171 Spaniards accused of political crimes are still behind bars. King Carlos granted a pardon to some political prisoners in late 1975 and gave limited amnestry last summer to 450 others.

The First of October Anti-Fascist Resistance Group identified by police as a leftist group, said it kidnapped Oriol and Villescusa and demanded amnestry for political prisoners for their release.

Martin Villa said the government refused to negotiate with the kidnappers and officials said previously that the demands made it difficult to proceed with its plans for amnesty.

Martin Villa said the government is not revealing full details of the kidnap case because the leftist band had not been completely broken.

He said police "demoralized" the kidnappers by picking up their toughest members one by one this week.

Members of the 100-member special police squad assembled under Suarez's orders to investigate the case gave this account:

Four policemen burst through an apartment door and rescued the general before GRAPO leader Abelardo Collazo could fire a submachine gun he had nearby.

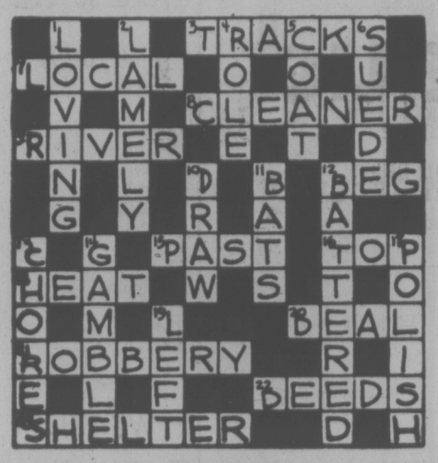
Police said Collazo was so shocked he fell to the floor. He was the only kidnapper guarding the general.

At first, the general believed the plain-clothes police were a killer squad and demanded to see their identification.

Police said a total of 28 persons were arrested in cracking the case, including the four top leaders of the leftist organization.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

8. CLEANER not cleaned. Arguably, clothes that still show stains, although CLEANER, have not really been cleaned.
9. RIVER not rivet. A RIVER "has a head" or source. A rivet in quite a typical condition (i.e., used) has one end flattened to make a second head and, in that form is not notably of a "long" shape.
12. BEG not bet. The clue suggests something repugnant to do, favoring BEG rather than bet.
15. PAST not fast or vast. The tentative wording "may feel it should be safe enough" lacks the enthusiasm appropriate to fast or vast.
18. HEAT not head. The question of ventilation links up more convincingly with oppressive HEAT than with an aching head, which has no particular connection with the state of the atmosphere.
20. DEAL not meal. A good DEAL of food, etc., yes; but not an actual good meal (cooked and finished).
21. ROBBERY not robbers. The clue's detached reference to no conscience being "involved" suits ROBBERY better. It's more directly a question of robbers simply having no conscience, rather than of there being no conscience involved in connection with them.
22. DEEDS not weeds. It is morally appropriate to view bad DEEDS with due seriousness, but there is no harm in being cheerful about a weed problem. Also, the clue's implied warning not to be tempted to gloss over such things, seems more called-for in the case of bad DEEDS.
23. SHELTER not swelter. The word "something" is the guide to the solution. A SHELTER is a "thing" while sweltering is a "condition." Besides, you always need SHELTER in a storm but you need not always swelter during it.

CLUES DOWN:

1. LOVING not moving. LOVING, certainly, but not moving in a universal sense (even to the unresponsive).
2. LAMELY not gamely. Since gameness makes a better impression than of merely being pathetic, LAMELY is more apt than gamely.
4. ROLE not roll. ROLE is the more considerable answer: a single drum roll is hardly an undertaking worthy of mention.
5. COAT not coal. The open nature of the clue favors that which "people" in general are concerned with, or buy or obtain; in this respect, COAT is more apt than coal.
6. SUEDE not Swede. Trying to characterize all the Swedes as of high quality is too ambitious a generalization. It's different with "real SUEDE" leather.
10. DRAW not drag. Since the clue is concerned with effortlessness, DRAW is more apt. To "drag" implies toil and difficulty, etc.
11. BATS not cats. Notwithstanding the expression "cat nap," it is doubtful if cats in general are linked up in the popular mind with a particular mode of sleeping, as BATS are.
13. CHORES not shores. After long absence, for instance, one may be quite excited when again approaching familiar shores. routine CHORES are always dull.

Williams, WCB Meet

Labor Minister Allan Williams will meet Monday with representatives of 1,200 employees for the Workers Compensation Board as the threat of a strike draws nearer.

The union claims it is being pushed to the brink by the "unrealistic attitude of the board."

Chuck Calhoun, union vice-president, said Friday there will be no walkout before the meeting with Williams, scheduled for 1:30 p.m. But the union will be in a positiion to strike by Monday if mediator Clark Gilmour has submitted his report to the labor minister as requested by the union, Calhoun said.

Gas Lead Danger

DETROIT (UPI) — The chemicals in leaded gasoline may be eating away part of the emission control systems on 4.4 million late model Ford cars and light trucks, including 784,000 in Canada.

As a result, the Ford Motor Co. Friday began notifying the owners of the 1973 and 1974 model year vehicles that they might be eligible for a $35 refund if the problem has been fixed or for warranty service if the system fails.

The automaker said the problem involves the cars and trucks equipped with V8 engines and using leaded gasoline, the chemicals in which could eat away part of the exhaust gas recirculation system that controls emissions of nitrogen oxides.

About 880,000 of the cars and light trucks built in the two years may experience rough idling and high exhaust noise and possibly lower fuel economy as a result of the problem, which Ford said is covered by the five-year or 50,000-mile emissions system warranty.

Ford said it was not recalling the vehicles or asking the owners of all the affected cars and trucks to bring them to their dealers immediately, because there is no safety problem involved.

Death Threats Sent Anti-Queen MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Anonymous death threats were made this week against four Quebec Liberal MPs who recently refused to sing God Save the Queen in Parliament, one of the MPs said Friday.

Serge Joyal of Maisonneuve-Rosemont said the RCMP informed him Thursday that death threats had been received against himself, Claude-Andre Lachance of Lafontaine-Rosemont, Jacques Olivier of Longueuil and Louis Duclos of Montmorency.

Both Joyal and Lachance said the RCMP had told them to be careful, especially when using their cars, because of the possibility of a bomb or other form of sabotage.

Joyal said the threats might be a joke, "but I can't judge."

He said that since the four MPs refusal to sing God Save the Queen he has received considerable mail from English-Canadians on his anti-monarchist stand.

Some of the mail was insulting, he said, while other letters were polite but firm in a pro-monarchist stand.

Joyal said he did not join in singing God Save the Queen last week during a tribute to the 25th anniversary of the Queen's ascension to the throne because "the people who elected me don't think the Queen is a symbol of Canadian identity."

When Prime Minister Trudeau says Canada can choose its own destiny, it can be done without a queen, he said.

JOYAL
. . . wrong symbol

Joyal said he would like to see a national debate on the future of the monarchy in Canada and Parliament would be the best place for such a debate.

However, most politicians would be reluctant to enter such a debate because of the emotional responses by some people toward the monarchy.

MP Olivier says he was unnerved at first when the RCMP told him of the threats, but he shrugged it off and chose not to make a big issue out of it.

Olivier said in a interview he had also received hate mail on the matter calling him things like "goddamn frog," but he dismissed that as being the work of "nuts."

FIVE QUEBEC FIRMS EYED MOVE TO B.C.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Friday the British Columbia Development Corp. received five inquiries from Quebec companies following the election of the Parti Quebecois government, asking about possible assistance in moving their operations to B.C.

Phillips told the legislature in response to a question by Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace that three of the five companies have subsequently turned to the United States in their search for economic help.

He told reporters the number of inquiries since the elction of the separtists PQ government has been running at about the same rate as prior to the election.

Black Priests Planned For White S. Africans

PRETORIA (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church announced Friday it intends to appoint black priests to white parishes as part of major church reforms in racially-divided South Africa.

The new policy is outlined in a 21-point Declaration of Commitment to mark the church's opposition to the government's race policies of apartheid or separate racial development.

Later Friday, two senior police officers visited the Roman Catholic secretariat in Pretoria requesting evidence to back up church allegations of police prutality against blacks, a church spokesman reported.

On Thursday, the church sharply criticized alleged police brutality during last year's riots and charged there had been reports of "seemingly systematic beatings and unjustifiable shootings during disturbances and of cold-blooded torture of detained persons."

Friday's declaration was issued after a weeklong meeting of the Southern African Catholic Bishop's Conference here, which ruled that "the Catholic church in South Africa is lagging behind in witness to the Gospel in matters of social justice."

The church also said it would promote equal pay for equal work and would try to eliminate racially-derogatory language such as calling blacks "bantus" and adults "boys" and "girls."

The church also said it would move to promote blacks within the church, noting that while 80 per cent of South Africa's 1.8 million Catholics are black, the clergy is 80 per cent white.

Recent census figures show that Catholics make up about 300,000 of South Africa's four million whites and about 1½ million of the almost 18 million non-whites.

The church pledged "strenuous efforts" to help black workers, squatters, political prisoners, detainees, persons under legal bans, their dependents and other groups.

The statement said the church would urge Christians to promote literacy campaigns, tutorial services, self-help associations and advisory bodies to help blacks.

WIRED FOR DEATH

RICHMOND (CP) — An RCMP bomb squad was called out Friday after six sticks of dynamite were found wired to the engine of a courtesy car at a car dealership in this Vancouver suburb.

The dynamite was noticed by a service shop worker as the vehicle was about to be serviced for an apparent miss in the engine.

RCMP said the dynamite was wired to the car's ignition and that there was enough explosive power to destroy the vehicle and anyone inside had the charge gone off.

There was no explanation why the dynamite did not explode.

Police said they know who brought the car back to the dealership but they were not releasing any names.

The three-man bomb detail checked all the other cars at the dealership — but nothing else was found.

Workers at the service shop were evacuated while the bomb squad dismantled the dynamite.

Alaska Highway Paving Settled

OTTAWA (CP) — Reconstruction of part of the Alaska Highway in the Yukon was authorized Friday with an exchange of diplomatic notes between Canada and the United States.

The U.S. will finance reconstruction and paving of the dirt highway between Haines Junction, Yukon, and the Yukon-Alaska border. Haines Junction is about 75 miles west of Whitehorse.

Also included in the highway between Haines Junction and Haines on the Alaska panhandle. In total the reconstruction covers 322 miles.

Royal Britain

A Royal Silver Jubilee comes once in a lifetime. Which is one reason why 50 million Britons will be making this a year to remember.

Festivals! Fireworks! Processions! Celebrations in every corner of the land, from Penzance to Pitlochry.

Jubilee will be British pageantry and history at its unforgettable best. And British friendliness; that special warmth that says 'welcome' wherever you go, and which you'll remember long after you're gone.

London–where else?

Where else to enjoy Jubilee than in London, where pageantry is a daily affair?

The Horseguards at Whitehall, motionless as statues; the vivid tunics of Beefeaters at the Tower; the daily ceremony of the Changing of the Guard.

Come to London and marvel at the magnificence of St. Paul's, or walk, wondering, through the echoing history of Westminster Abbey.

Try to be there in June for the Royal Progress up the river Thames. Or the heart-stirring ceremony of Trooping the Colour held annually to celebrate the Queen's official birthday. Surely in Jubilee Year it will take on a special significance.

London. Truly, what better setting for a Royal Silver Jubilee? And where better to spend your holiday?

Sleep easy for $12

Your Jubilee Special flight entitles you to special savings reserved for British Airways Holidays passengers.

We can put you in the middle of Jubilee festivities with a hotel room for only $12 each, based on double occupancy. That's with private bathroom and continental breakfast.

Distortions and Exaggerations

This week we printed a letter from Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy chastising the Times for getting some of the facts wrong on the story concerning pay raises up to 51 per cent over three years for management-level civil servants. She objected to calling the pay raise order a "secret document" since it was part of an order-in-council passed last July.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers said recently that the reporting of his controversial 180-day rule on provincial court cases was exceedingly shallow.

When the NDP released the so-called blacklist of civil servants in the environment department, Premier Bill Bennett's only reaction was to condemn whoever leaked the memo and attached letter. He announced an investigation of this breach of government confidentiality.

These three events are linked in the way they illustrate the concern of the government with secrecy. It's hard to take the government's complaints seriously about inaccurate reporting, exaggeration and distortion when its own information policy makes that sometimes inevitable.

In the incident of the 180-day rule, for example, the order was issued from the A-G's department on Dec. 6 to judges and crown counsels. But was there any announcement to the people centrally affected, those members of the public charged with offences?

No. The news got out only through a leak five weeks after the fact to the Vancouver Sun.

The provincial secretary is angry at the misplaced emphasis in news stories on the pay and fringe benefit increases awarded senior managers in the bureaucracy. She points out that the order-in-council establishing the increase was passed last July, and was certainly not secret.

Yes, but those familiar with the system know there are ways of getting public attention when you want it, and ways of sliding something under the carpet, only figuratively speaking of course, Ms. McCarthy. If the provincial secretary was eager to let the public know about the new pay rates for civil servants that would come out of its taxes she could have easily held a press conference.

A similar case involved the firing of Arthur Weeks, the man at the centre of the Grizzly Valley scandal. Cabinet met and decided to fire him on Dec. 22. The very same day Premier Bennett met reporters in an informal news conference to discuss his government's first year in office. Did he volunteer a word or two about Weeks' firing and the reasons why? No, and we had to wait another week while the order-in-council drifted slowly through the system.

Or take MEL Paving. The $2.5 million out of court settlement was announced Christmas Eve. The only time and place better calculated to slip something over would be a press conference at midnight midsummer eve on Mount Waddington, held of course, without notifying anyone.

And the indignation over leaks and broken confidentiality is a fine bit of hypocrisy. Did the premier wax wroth and announce a probe of the leak of papers to the Vancouver Province last month which put former premier Dave Barrett in a bad light on the MEL Paving-BCR issue? The government would look rather silly investigating itself, because indications are that's who did the leaking in that case.

These examples demonstrate the basic inconsistencies of information policy and practices of the government. It leaks things itself, but condemns anonymous individuals who leak unfavorable information. There's no law that says politicians have to be consistent, of course, but they could make things much easier for themselves and for the public by being more forthcoming.

Secrecy is ingrained in government. Information is power of a type if others don't know what you know. But these days people demand to know more about their governments. They aren't satisfied to vote every three or four years and leave the elected politicians in peace until next time.

People are more involved. Political parties themselves have encouraged the trend. Today the major parties in B.C. are real mass movements, no longer the preserve of the specialists and fixers and backroom boys. You can't involve thousands of people in the drive for power, then after the election cut off everyone but the elected members from involvement in the processes of government.

Governments can try — and this one is with its loyalty oaths and security checks and confidentiality probes — to keep the lid on but the controversial reports and documents and decisions are going to get out eventually.

To complain of misrepresentation or exaggeration or sensationalism in the treatment the press accords such things when they do leak out is hard to understand, since the government "top secret" and "confidential" stamps on its documents automatically confer such status.

Level with the people and the result is more often a rational informed discussion of issues. Try to keep something secret, and bits and pieces leak out. These are invariably sensationalized because they appear in an information vacuum.

Why not reverse the present situation, where everything is secret unless an overwhelming need to make it public can be demonstrated? Make everything public except that which for a legitimate reason should be kept confidential. That is if the government is really serious about eliminating distortions, exaggerations and misrepresentations. The best way is to let everyone see for themselves. It's time for a freedom of information law in B.C.

The Socred Switchmen Ice the B.C. Railway

Royal commissions are the classic government response to issues that might prove embarrassing or damaging to those who wield power. And it is significant in British Columbia today that the provincial regime has been forced to call seven inquiries of one kind or another in the space of a month.

Yet the calling of this latest commission into the machinations of the British Columbia Railway is so utterly transparent, it is unbelievable, even in a province where rudiments of modern government are barely understood.

After months of delicate negotiations last December the B.C. Labor Relations Board ordered BCR's eight unions to form a joint bargaining unit to help resolve fragmented bargaining that all too often brought the railway to a halt.

Six months ago the government appointed a new board of directors—"a blue chip board" as it was described at the time—with Economic Development Minister Don Phillips as temporary chairman. The board, which includes such notables as E. C. Hurd, chairman of Trans-Mountain Pipeline and Don Watson, former president of Pacific Western Airlines and now chairman of the board of Canadian Cellulose, was chosen for its expertise in solving the very questions posed to the new royal commission.

It is no secret the board was discussing new systems of accounting, viable new rail lines and further refinement of labor-management relations. Now all of a sudden a three-man royal commission has been appointed to "inquire into all aspects of the management and development of the B.C. railway," including accounting procedures and labor problems.

Where does that leave the "blue chip" board? Suddenly the directors become caretakers as yet another royal commission goes over the same old right of way. And what about all the work of the LRB? It will be sidetracked as another commission comes up with new solutions.

A government that flies in the face of its own appointed directors and the Labor Relations Board has more than efficiency on its mind.

Members of the royal commission are also worthy of study. Sydney Welsh admits to be a card-carrying Social Credit member. David Chapman, the labor representative, has not endeared himself to his brothers and sisters by working on the federal Anti-Inflation Board. And Mr. Justive Lloyd McKenzie in 1963 was counsel for another commission looking into the highways department under former Premier W. A. C. Bennett. No one questions the integrity of these honorable men but the government might have found fresher faces, or at least excluded Socreds.

It is also interesting that McKenzie said on Wednesday that he is doubtful the MEL Paving case involving construction overuns on the BCR will come before the commission. The following day Garde Gardom indicated in the legislature that the commission should have a look at the controversial case. The government and its commission should get together and define their terms of reference before the public is thoroughly confused.

Timing is also important in this sudden royal commission. First we had the announcement of an in-house inquiry into fraud allegations in the MEL Paving case.

Last Monday deputy attorney-general David Vickers said a review of the evidence presented in the MEL Paving court case does not support charges of criminal fraud. In a letter to Gardom Vickers added: "As other evidence may be available relating to these matters the investigation continues."

It will be remembered that Vickers said at the outset of his investigation that departmental lawyers might interview former BCR board members, including W. A. C. Bennett.

On Tuesday, the day after Vickers' letter was publicized, Premier Bennett announced the BCR royal commission as he flew off to Ottawa.

Incredible.

Any more commissions or studies into the BCR and the public will need a complicated train schedule to chronicle the comings and goings of the investigators. The MEL Paving inquiry we know about. Then Labor Minister Allan Williams announced a three-man commission last week to examine labor-management relations. Now we have a full fledged royal commission.

The upshot of all this scrutiny will effectively put every aspect of the railway on ice for a year or more. Very clever. When the eventual reports come in they will probably be thicker than the roadbed on the Dease Lake extension.

Meanwhile, information on this Toonerville Trolley railway will be very thin, at a time when cabinet ministers are saying it will take up to $1 billion to put it in shape.

Twenty years ago such tactics might have been judged cute political acumen. Today they show a lack of imagination and a deviousnes we have come to expect from this administration. How long can the government keep drawing the curtains on inept farces?

Much of this administration's economic thrust, including development of northeastern coal deposits depends on the BCR. Is Ottawa going to enter into an agreement with a government forever ordering autopsies on its twitching transportation tool? What hardnosed financial firm is going to lend money to a diseased railway still undergoing diagnosis?

Perhaps the government will order another commission to consider these questions. It would not be out of character for this regime of switchmen riding the evasive express — G.R.O.

RICHARD GWYN

Alberta's Cherished Myths

EDMONTON — The sources of Alberta's alienation from eastern Canada go back to the depression and the drought of the 1930s. To prairie farmers the explanation for these horrors, and for the humiliations they suffered because they were helpless, had to be the CPR, the banks and the Ontario and Quebec-centred politicians in Ottawa.

Today, those old grievances and myths have been appropriated by the new Albertans, "an ascendant class of indigenous business entrepreneurs, urban professionals and state administrators," in the words of University of Alberta political scientist Larry Pratt.

History is repeating itself. Between the dirt poor farmer of the 1930s, and today's oilman who is outraged at being treated as a cowboy when he tries to raise capital in Toronto, or the Edmonton bureaucrat determined to expand his empire at the expense of Ottawa, or the Calgary car dealer who wants more local autonomy, or the Alberta professor resentful because he is not on the academic grand tour, or the Alberta CBC producer who rails against the "Toronto-centred" networks, there is no significant difference. All want to raise their status from branch plant employee to regional head office decision-maker.

Resentful

To anyone in Toronto, or Ottawa, or Montreal, this phenomenon should be familiar. It's a replication, but within a country rather than across national borders, of the struggle of Canadian cultural and economic nationalists, starting in the early 1960s, to gain their freedom from New York, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles and Washington.

The parallels, however, are not exact.

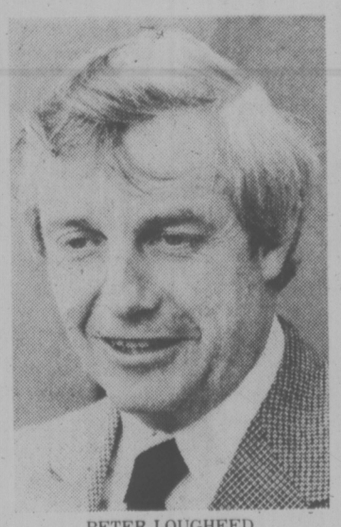
Canadian nationalists have had to contend with a vocal and influential continentalist opposition. Here, in contrast to British Columbia, where opinion-makers in the press communicate a sense of pan-Canadianism, antagonism toward the east has become an unchallenged cliche.

Federalists exist, like Calgary Mayor Rod Sykes, New Democratic Party leader Grant Notley, Liberal leader Nick Taylor, Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig, and a small number of academics like Pratt. They are, though, almost a local lunatic fringe, vulnerable to the accusation of being anti-Albertan.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, in contrast to his B.C. colleague Bill Bennett, both articulates Alberta's legitimate complaints (in Ottawa, Lougheed says, "we are seen almost as an enemy, as if they were resentful of our new-found strength") but also capitalizes upon Alberta's siege-mentality for his own political purposes.

The time has come, as they say, to review the facts. Albertans are being fed, and feed themselves, mostly baloney.

• First the charge that Alberta is, as they like to say here, an "exploited colony." Some exploitation. In 1975, according to the Economic Council of Canada, Alberta's gross provincial product was $8,871. Judged as a "country," Alberta's wealth was $2,000 a person greater than Sweden, the U.S. or Ontario. Alberta, indeed, was the wealthiest "country" in the industrialized west, and enjoyed also the lowest taxes in the western world — no sales tax, no property tax, no estate tax and rates of income tax about 20 per cent below the Canadian average.



PETER LOUGHEED
. . . fostering Canadianism

• Second, the charge that Ottawa has "frustrated," as Lougheed puts it, Alberta's growth. Consider the alternative — that nature had put Alberta south of the border and so a state rather than a province within the Confederation it complains so much about.

Alberta today would be about on the same level as Montana. No oil company would have bothered to transplant a head office north from Houston. Alberta's meat processing industry (15 per cent less productive and with wage rates 10 per cent higher than comparable plants in California) would disappear. Edmonton's burgeoning provincial civil service would be cut in half, and its population accordingly shrunk.

• Third, the "Crow or go" complaints about freight rates. Alberta politicians haven't got round to telling their constituents that grain rates are subsidized by the east, to the tune of at least $100 million a year. It's this loss on grain that forces the railways to jack up rates on all other goods and which, a much more serious consequence, makes it profitable to ship raw grain out of the prairies rather than keeping it here as feedstock for an indigenous industry for processing rape or meat or hogs.

• Fourth, the charge that "eastern tariffs" are responsible for the high cost of living in Alberta. There is truth to this accusation. As the Alberta Independence Association points out, a toilet seat costs $4.99 in Calgary and only $3.89 in Seattle. But tariffs to protect Ontario manufacturers don't explain why steaks from cattle bred, reared, slaughtered and dressed in Alberta cost more in an Edmonton supermarket than in a Toronto one. (Nor incidentally, why salmon caught off the British Columbia coast and canned onshore cost more in Vancouver than in Toronto.)

Effete

"The problem," as Kenneth Norrie of the University of Alberta has written, "lies in being small and isolated rather than with discriminatory treatment."

The fact that there is little reality to Alberta's grievances does not make them any the less real. The east knows little about Alberta, cares less, and when it does look westward, looks down its nose. Albertans know this, and are infuriated by it.

A recent survey by Roger Gibbons of the University of Calgary found that Albertans, by a margin of 71-14 per cent believed that "Alberta politicians are not taken seriously in the east" and believed, by a 74-9 per cent margin that Ottawa's economic policies "help Quebec and Ontario at the expense of Alberta."

This alienation won't disappear quickly. The most effective remedy—this isn't a prescription but a diagnosis — would be the election of the federal Conservatives to office in Ottawa. Liberal here is the ultimate four-letter word. The other change would be one of attitude. Easterners had better get used to the fact that Albertans know little about the east, care less, and when they do look at the east, look down their noses at it as effete.

Best Costs Money

I hesitate to write again about the hospital crisis but J. B. Cumming's letter of Feb. 4 must be answered. His points were:

Since 77 per cent of Canada's "acute" hospitals were under 200 beds the new Victoria General need be no larger.

Here he fails to distinguish between the small community hospital with limited services and the metropolital general hospital which provides a wide range of services.

Since the population of Delta is (he claims) the same as Greater Victoria and since Delta is satisfied with an "under 50-bed" hospital, the same should satisfy Victoria.

A new "under 50-bed" facility to replace the Victoria General would make as much sense as a single seat transatlantic jet liner. VGH alone has 50 extended care type patients at any one time occupying acute beds for lack of extended care facilities.

Larger hospitals cost more to build and run than small hospitals so we should only build small hospitals.

A Volkswagen costs less than a B.C. Hydro bus but if you have to provide service for a lot of people you buy a bus. Unlike Mr. Cumming I have had first hand experience over the past 30 years working in hospitals with from 50-1500 beds and it is clear to me that around 500 beds give the sick the best standard of care for their tax dollar.

Of course larger hospitals cost more than small ones because they provide more services. It is more expensive to repair a retinal detachment or a cataract with a Zeiss operating microscope than the old-fashioned magnifying glass but the improvement in results is worth the extra cost to the patient threatened with blindness.

Specialized equipment is expensive and must be kept in constant use to justify its purchase. Likewise staff in a unit must care for an adequate number of patients to maintain their expertise. Mr. Cumming totally ignores the fact that VGH is not only caring for the local sick but also the referral problems from the rest of Vancouver island. Mr. Cumming displays a remarkable 18th century approach to hospitals, viewing them as expensive luxuries and frills built only to fulfill the "grandiose ideas" of doctors. His obvious partisanship for one hospital over another and his ignorance of regional and Island health needs may explain in part why we now have a hospital crisis. For too many years the local politicians have sat on their assets (the money long since voted for hospital construction and paid in sales tax) while they tried to score political gain at the cost of the worst hospital obsolescence problem in any provincial capital in Canada. First class health care is not cheap but third class is even more expensive in the long run. — H. H. MaCartney M.D., F.R.C.P. (C), 2809 Burdick Avenue.

Teacher Campaign

As a former teacher myself and a parent of two school-age children, it distressed me to see that some teachers have found it necessary to protect the "goals of the core curriculum" which the department of education has recently distributed to the schools. Apparently they feel threatened by a universal testing proposed by the department of education. Should the department not test the curriculum which they themselves have set forth to be taught? How are they to know the effectiveness of a teacher if not by testing?

Certainly there are going to be differences in each child's capacity to learn, but the core curriculum is just that—a "core." It is the bare bones of a general education which a teacher can extend and enhance for an average or above-average student. A gifted child will need vast enrichment of this program to challenge him to reach his potential.

I trust that the department will not be intimidated by such a campaign.—Glenna McNaught, Victoria.

Community

We live in the Fernwood-Springridge community and have watched it grow, sometimes awkwardly, but always sensitively, into a coherent, creative expression of future hopes for the neighborhood, hopes that will soon materialize through the NIP grant into a community centre, a mall, parks, etc.

The young people who have guided this program have grown rich in experience — not in wealth—but have left their mark in their concern for human relationships, that will hopefully influence the future growth of this Community.

The centre, at 1294 Gladstone, is now open to senior citizens to drop in for free tea and coffee, from Monday to Friday, from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. The schedule includes a film on Tuesday afternoons, the public health nurse, or speakers, or discussions on Wednesday afternoon, and hobby and craft day Friday.—Rosamund Sorensen, Phyllis Chamberlain, H. H. Sorensen, Hanna Jazlowiecki, Victoria.

VICTORIA TIMES, established 1884 is published every afternoon except Sunday by the Times Publishers, Limited, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. Second class mail registration No. 0625. Feminism and the 'He-She' Dilemma in English

By EDWARD DEVOL

The sexual revolution and the last trace of grammatical gender in the English language are combining to infest the printed page with the ugly and awkward "he or she" and "his or her" forms. They may be only a passing fad, but they offend the traditional eye. They also remind us that no language is perfect.

Feminists object to the old — and indeed never satisfactory — custom of using "he" or "his" to include both sexes when no particular sex is meant. If you translate Karl Marx's slogan as "from each according to his abilities," you risk being accused of implying that women have none.

A really determined feminist logic-chopper might even insist that "every dog has his day" deprives female dogs of opportunity — although there is uncertainty about whether the principle of equality should apply to animals.

Some who detect insults in pronouns apparently believe they grow out of personal bias. Other, more scholarly critics see such insults as a usually unintentional peculiarity of the language itself.

The latter is usually the reason, but the outcry has been loud enough that writers good and bad, anxious to avoid being labelled sexual chauvinists, react with sentences like these:

"Any employee who will not reach his or her 40th birthday before Jan. 1, 1977 . . . is eligible." (State Department bulletin, October, 1976.)

"Nearly one of every five employees here failed to get his or her bi-weekly pay." (Mike Causey, the Washington Post, Dec. 30, 1976.)

Even the elegant classicist Gilbert Highet has been so intimidated that his latest book, "The Immortal Profession," contains this agonized and agonizing paragraph:

"The newly fledged Ph.D. must understand that teaching is really necessary for the students: Active, energetic teaching. Sometimes he or she does not really believe this. He — I wish there were a handy neutral pronoun meaning 'he or she': 'one' does not always fit — he (or she) was often a bookworm or a laboratory wizard from early youth. In his heart he believes that anyone can learn anything by dogged application."

Note the vigor of Professor Highet's struggle to keep in step with the times. He leaps frantically from the timid "he or she" to the bold (but immediately qualified) "he." He then irritably refers to the difficulty he faces, straddles it again with "he (or she)" and in the final sentence returns wearily (or defiantly?) to the old custom of using "he" and "his" to include both sexes.

The he-she problem is more acute in English than in other languages. Hundreds of years ago English abandoned the complexities og grammatical gender that still characterize other languages of Indo-European origin — and provide them with firm guides toward the proper and unambiguous pronoun.

English grammatical gender once was as formidale as any. In Old English, Simeon Potter writes, "woman, queen and wife were synonymous . . . all three meaning "woman,' but they were masculine, feminine and neuter respectively."

Charlton Laird says of contemporary English: "Of gender there remain scraps, such fragmentary scraps that most Americans do not know what gender is. With us it has become a synonym for sex, which it is not, because distinction on the basis of sex is the only bit of gender we have left, and that appears only in the third-person singular pronoun (he, she, it), unless one excepts forms like comedian, comedienne, actor, actress."

I do not know whether feminists in other countries find male chauvinism in their languages. In countries where Indo-European languages other than English predominate, women presumably have less opportunity for complaint about sexual discrimination in personal pronouns, since the use of such pronouns is determined by the gender of the nouns they modify, or for which they substitute.

The sexual chauvinist is not permitted to display his bias in his choice of pronouns in these languages. There is no "sexness" in the German masculine noun for foot, or the French feminine noun for pen, and thus no awareness of sex in using pronouns in their place.

In French and English aphorisms of similar meaning, the difference in the sexness of pronouns become apparent. In "chacun a son gout," the noun "gout" is masculine, hence modified by the masculine possessive pronoun. But "son" does not mean "his." It carries no sexual connotation at all, and it has no relationship to "chacun."

In English we say, "to each his own," and "Everyone to his liking." We could just as logically say, "Everybody to her liking," if custom did not dictate use of the masculine pronoun. Pronouns cannot be selected so whimsically in other Indo-European languages. They are ruled by grammatical gender, not by biological classifications.

It might be argued that English provides more opportunity for sexual discrimination (intentional or otherwise) because there is often no rule determining whether "he" or "she" should be used. When we mean no particular person, we must choose between them. In languages with systems of grammatical gender no such freedom of choice exists: the pronoun is determined by the gender of the noun, and the writer is spared the pain of deciding. Perhaps English-speakers are simply paying a penalty for their freedom of choice. Like other freedoms of which the English-speaking people are so proud, it has problems attached to it.

Another way of avoiding the pronoun dilemma is not to have any separate forms for he or she. Hungarian and Finnish do precisely that, as do most languages outside the Indo-European and Semitic ones. Some Indo-European languages (Spanish, Italian, Polish, Greek) rarely use their personal subject-pronouns except for emphasis. The he-she dilemma has been noticed in the past and has occacionally been reflected in our literature.

Henry Fielding in "Tom Jones" addressed a plea for understanding to "the reader's heart, if he or she have any." But that has the air of an attempt of jocularity, rather than a gesture of appeasement toward females.

Walt Whitman, sturdily all-inclusive as usual, wrote, "he or she is greatest who contributes the greatest original practical example." These were statements made for effect, not automatic reflexes to a noisy outside stimuleous

Professional linguists generally have concluded that English is better off for having abandoned the complications of grammatical gender, but they are sometimes troubled by the awkwardness and ambiguity that result from our personal-pronoun system.

Simeon Potter called it a deficiency: "It might be argued . . that English would be improved as a medium of communication by the adoption of a common or epicene pronoun which might refer clearly to both male and female." Otto Jespersen wrote: "It is at times an inconvenience to have to specify the sex of the person spoken about."

It certainly is, especially when spirited, determined women are poised to complain that they are belittled when a writer refers only to "he" or "his." Even those who stick to traditional usage can feel obliged to apologize or explain.

Wyatt Cooper, in his recent autobiography, "Families," suddenly remarks, in a paragraph appearing with as little warning as a summer squall, and without apparent relevance to what preceded it:

"I would like to state loudly and clearly that when I say 'man' or when I use 'he,' I mean 'man and woman' and I mean 'he and she.' I do not so state each time because the use of the masculine form is an ancient and historical one . . . and it is a literary form with which I think men are stronger, brighter, more worthy, more steadfast, or more promising than women."

That is quite an old-fashioned point of view. One wonders how many angry letters Cooper received in response to it.

CITIZENSHIP 'CODE'

The State in the Bedroom

By PETER HAM
Washington Post

Some funny things happened to me on the way to becoming a U.S. citizen. One was that I found out the government is asking people questions about their private lives that seem rather out of step with an age in which birth control is universal, every hamlet has its own pornographic movie house, and congressmen can get away with using the public purse to pay their secretaries for sex.

I had lived in the United States for seven years as a resident alien when I decided to apply for citizenship. The principal reason was that I was being assigned to Moscow for two years. Since I worked for an American company and I planned to come back to the United States, I felt it would be better to have the protection and facilities of the U.S. government in Russia.

On a more subliminal level, I had also come to respect the United States for its openness and freedom. I had gradually reached the conclusion that it was where I wanted to make my permanent home. The forms that the Immigration and Naturalization Service sent me to fill in did only momentary damage to this feeling. Among the dozens of questions they posed on every aspect of my life, there were some that seemed either simple-minded or outdated. Several eons after Joe McCarthy, they still wanted to know whether I had ever been a Communist, as well as a drug dealer, a prostitute or a pimp. As I wrote "No" I wondered whether anyone, in any era, has ever put down "Yes."

The most unlikely question was one that asked whether the applicant for naturalization had ever committed adultery. In a long list of questions that demanded negative answers, this seemed to me to be no exception. After I had sent back the form, I was called in by the New York INS for a hearing. The hearing officer was Paul D. Shur, a pleasant young lawyer who went through every one of my written answers verbally. He asked me whether I was a Communist, a drug dealer, a prostitute, a pimp, and an adulterer, and I answered "No."

Then he turned to other parts of the questionnaire, spending several minutes trying to pin down in exquisite detail some of the trips I had made to the Caribbean during cold New York winters over the past five years.

In due course, Shur returned to more intimate matters. He checked me on the date of my marriage and ascertained that I had been separated for three and a half years. "Have you been seeing other women since then?" he asked. I said I had. "Have you had relations with any of them?" he wanted to know. I said I had.

At that point Shur looked up from the form and told me that I would have to reapply for citizenship in five years. He said I had the option of applying either five years from the date of the hearing, or five years from the date of any divorce I might get. Frankly, I thought he was kidding. My first reaction was to ask him if he would ask me the question again. Instead he embarked on a definition of adultery and then put some more questions to me.

How soon after my separation, he wanted to know, had I first committed adultery? When had I last seen my wife? Was I living with anyone? How recently had I committed adultery? I told him I had seen my wife, still a good friend, the day before and that I was not living with anyone. But the questions about adultery seemed to me an invasion of privacy. So I told him I did not want to answer them. I also volunteered that I had not committed adultery while I was living with my wife.

Shur ignored one further request on my part to ask me the question about relations with other women again, and repeated that I could reapply in five years. He sent me away with the words that I could get in touch with my congressman if I wanted to — curious advice, since non-citizens do not have congressmen.

After stewing for a week I did in fact get in touch with two congressmen. One was Rep. Philip Burton (D-Calif.), for whom an old friend worked, and the other was Rep. Ed Koch (D-N.Y.), in whose district I live. I also contacted the American Civil Liberties Union, which proved to be sympathetic, but not particularly optimistic about my chances of reversing Shur's decision.

Koch is made of sterner stuff, however, and his extremely capable assistant, Ruth Altman, raised enough fuss to get me another hearing. Next time around, the climate was distinctly different. A new hearing officer, Scott Blackman, said I should not have been sent home before and apologized for any inconvenience I had suffered. He told me there was apparently no reason that I could not become a citizen, and then, with agonizing circumspection, got around to the crux of the matter. We agreed that I had not committed adultery and I signed an affidavit to that effect, explaining that I had understood "relations" with other women to mean normal social relations.

The INS then arranged to waive the normal 30-day waiting period because of my tight schedule and on Dec. 29, after an 11th-hour bureaucratic hitch that was again solved by the remarkable Ruth Altman, I became an American.

The story obviously has a happy ending for me, as I head for Moscow with my Bicentennial passport. But others faced with the same situation are not as fortunate. One of my colleagues based in Washington was telling my tale to two friends in a taxi some weeks ago when a woman they were sharing the cab with broke in to say the adultery question was the reason she was not a citizen.

She had answered "Yes" and was turned down. Another acquaintance intent on naturalization is in a real dilemma. He is married for the second time to a woman with whom he lived before he was divorced from his first wife. The second marriage is a solid success. But he is afraid that when the adultery question comes up, he, too, may be told to come back in five years.

Technically, the INS is within its rights in asking applicants about adultery and turning them down for naturalization if they admit to committing it. But what is such a law doing on the books today? Should the state have the right to pry into the sex lives of citizens — or non-citizens — if no injury is involved? And if it does, should immigration hearing officers — or any other officials — ask those questions without warning of the consequences of the answers? In short, isn't it time for the law to catch up with community standards?

Do We Need Autoplan 'Salesmen'?

By FRED A. MARSHALL
(A letter to the editor of The Sun)

The $27 million plus paid the ICBC Autoplan agents for processing 1976 ICBC applications can only be recognized as a direct government hand-out. Yes, $27 million paid the agents who renewed only a portion of the coverage they issued in 1975 which then netted them approximately $18 million. The government of Premier Bennett permitted increases averaging 80 per cent to possibly 100 per cent in the agent's fees while wage earners' demands and settlements were subject to limitations. Would Premier Bennett please explain why he permitted such hand-out, since he favored and agreed to accept Mr. Trudeau's anti-inflation program?

The chart below illustrates the increases for the same coverage:

ICBC premium	Agent's fee, '76	Agent's fee, '75
$1,400	$120	$32
1,000	80	23

Explain also the special talents and qualifications ICBC agents possess that entitle them to often earn commissions of $80, $100, $120 or more for the two or three minutes they spend processing a single ICBC application. In contrast, B.C. Hydro discontinued the payment of nickels and dimes to department and drug store pay stations for accepting our Hydro and gas bills. Hydro described this as a cost-saving measure. Explain, if possible such diversity in policy between our crown corporations.

ICBC operates, we were told, on a break-even, non-profit basis. On this basis with vehicle insurance being compulsory, how can ICBC justify recognizing the Autoplan agents as salesmen? Tell us too, how to justify rewarding them on a commission basis when seemingly only they would benefit from the issuing of additional coverage?

The Social Credit administration — and I am a party member — has failed to significantly expand, upgrade and publicize the operations of our motor vehicle branch. It has also failed to arrange for the maximum utilization of the premises and facilities of our ICBC claim centres. I have heard more than once that a program to distribute ICBC coverage and decals at the claims centres had been planned but, I was told, this program was scrapped because it would interfere with the Autoplan agent's business.

I regard ICBC's marketing arrangements as being the result of deliberate mismanagement of the public's affairs, rather than the result of free enterprise at work. Our insurance corporation and motor vehicle branch are engaged in practices which the corporate and business world would not tolerate.

It is also a question of fairness. Our government's efficiency experts recognized some ferry workers would have to go. A similar examination of ICBC's operation, no doubt, would indicate that the service provided by the Autoplan agents is an extravaganza we cannot afford.

This has been lengthy so I will close with one question. Why was the public not informed that millions of dollars paid the agents would have remained in ICBC's treasury had they applied for their ICBC coverage from a government motor vehicle branch office?

A 25-Year Dream Now Comes True

The name Hamilton Laing may not ring a bell with you; for most of my life it didn't with me either. But, about 25 years ago, it came my way for the first time — at the head of several newspaper columns I'd found in a pile of old clippings — and ever since it has been cropping up with consistent, and sometimes even mystifying, regularity.

I say mystifying because from this rather inauspicious introduction, and despite no real effort on my part to find the man, Fate had apparently decreed that, given the right time and circumstances, our paths would meet.

There was good reason for Laing's name to find a place in my memory; those old columns of his were on natural history, the natural history of Manitoba — particularly that of Oak Lake, and they were written in the early 20's. I kept them for many years, re-reading them from time to time and revelling in experiencing, through Laing's words, a Manitoba that was gone forever.

But it was my introduction of Oak Lake, also through Laing's words, that was to keep his name before me. I promised myself that someday I would see Oak Lake and maybe relive some of Laing's experiences.

That I eventually did was in large part due to a young birdwatcher, David Hatch, who later made his mark as a professional biologist but who, at that time, was reporting regularly, to all who would listen, on the birds of Oak Lake.

David came from a family who farmed within sight of Laing's beloved lake but, more important, through him I was introduced to Herman Battersby and my first direct link with Hamilton Laing. Battersby had been a field associate of Laing's in those early years and his place in my story stems from that association. He was able to put human dimensions to what, up to then, had been simply a name.

I learned from Battersby that Laing was alive, and well, and living on the west coast — in a place called Comox — on Vancouver Island, he thought.

Even then, while I wasn't conscious of any real desire to track Laing down, that information stuck. During the next few years, while the decision to move my family west began to germinate, Laing's name kept surfacing under unpredictable circumstances.

I discovered that not only had he been a contemporary of Percy Taverner, but worked with him as well. And if the name Taverner doesn't ring a bell either, he holds the distinction, among other things, of having written the first Birds of Canada which was the bible of Canadian birdwatching for more than 30 years.

I also discovered what, to me anyway, seemed like a fateful if distant link between Laing and me. Apparently, six weeks after I was born, Laing had met Allan Brooks in the Okanagan country. I chose to see Fate's hand in that.

The name Brooks should not need an introduction. He was one of Canada's foremost bird artists. More important to me, though I never met him or knew him personally, Brooks had, through his paintings, a lot to do with getting me started birdwatching. And I chose to see Fate's hand in that too.

Well, when the Hosford clan finally heard the call and moved west, I found myself closing in on Laing. But even the realization that most of his contemporaries had departed this vale of tears, plus the thought that Laing might follow them at any time, did not spur me to action. For my first three months out here I lived almost on his doorstep but other things intervened and before I knew it, Victoria beckoned, and Comox and Laing were left behind.

Another six years went by and except for an occasional remark about Laing from people who knew him, for me he had slipped into limbo. Then, unexpectedly, through some work I was doing for the Provincial Museum in Victoria, the opportunity to close in on the old boy arrived and it was an opportunity that could not be ignored.

An exchange of letters later, and this time literally, I found myself on Laing's doorstep with Yorke Edwards of the Museum. A few minutes later — the time it took to penetrate Laing's deafness — the door opened and there he stood, nursing an unruly ticker, but as active and alert as a man half his age.

For the next hour-and-a-half, I mostly listened, but I also remembered because, as Laing talked of Brooks, of the Okanagan, of Taverner, of Battersby and, of course, of Oak Lake, all I could think of was that musty old box of newspaper clippings and that day many years ago when the name Laing had first come my way.

Finning's SOS is as revealing as a blood test

Just as a blood sample reveals the health of a patient, so does an oil sample reveal the health of your Caterpillar equipment.
Finning's Scheduled Oil Sampling (S.O.S.) analyzes oil from various compartments of your machine and measures metals content.
Excessive amounts of specific metal particles indicate trouble that can be diagnosed and cured before premature failure or breakdown.
Just as a blood sample can save your health, so can an oil sample save you thousands of dollars in repair bills and lost production.
The cost of S.O.S. is small and, like most preventive measures, is most effective when done on a regular basis.
Keep all of your Caterpillar equipment in good health

RRSPs . . . No Place to Gamble

By AL FORREST

Getting out of the maze of registered retirement savings plans is a relatively simple business.

For about 95 per cent of the population the only type of RRSP worth considering is one that pays a guaranteed interest, like a bank deposit.

One Victoria doctor experimented with an RRSP based on stock certificates and when he turned 65 he discovered the market was in a slump and his investment had evaporated to a low level. He had to continue working because his retirement plan had failed him.

Retirement funds are not the best place to gamble. Most people need a guaranteed amount, not the chance for great gains or losses.

The only other factor in shopping for an RRSP is to sort out the best deal among the guaranteed plans.

The shortcut to the best deal is to ask for the net yield.

For example, one company may advertise an interest rate of 9.5 per cent but because of administration fees and withdrawal charges is leaving the investor with a net yield of only 9 per cent. Another company advertising 9.5 per cent may leave the investor with a net yield of 9.25 per cent, because of lower charges.

A company selling an RRSP will tell you both the advertised rate and the net yield.

All RRSPs must have a trustee and therefore a trust company gets involved somewhere down the line. Therefore trust companies tend to have the inside track and offer the highest rates.

But this is true only in general terms. Some trust companies offer a very low interest rate. By shopping around, it may be possible to do as well or better at a credit union.

Rates from banks and insurance companies tend to be lower. In addition, large trust companies tend to offer less than smaller ones.

This is based on the principle that an investor should get a lower interest rate if he is taking a minimal risk .This, in turn, assumes that banks and insurance companies are as solid as the Rocky Mountains while investing in small trust companies and credit unions may be a bit more hazardous.

That is the principle behind the varying rates. In practice all financial institutions of Canada have, in the past, been very solid.

In addition, some large, solid companies will offer high interest rates because they are aggressively looking for business.

For most poople, the RRSP should be a guaranteed plan that can be withdrawn at any time and with a fairly attractive net yield.

This year the maximum amount that can go into a registered retirement savings plan is $5,500 for those who are not in a company plan or $3,500 for those who are. And the amount of the company plan must be deducted from the $3,500. For example, someone putting $2,000 into a company plan can buy an RRSP up to a maximum of $1,500 only.

All these numbers assumes the taxpayer is grossing $17,500 or more. If he is earning less than that amount, then the totals are reduced to 20 per cent of the gross salary, which will result in numbers lower than $5,500 and $3,500.

Most people on a company pension plan will find themselves eligible for an RRSP in the range of $1,000 to $1,800.

Deadline for buying an RRSP is Feb. 28 and the taxpayer must wait about three weeks to get his official receipt to include in his tax forms.

Helicopter Parts Fraud

also have been installed on civilian helicopters in Southern California, industry officials here said.

A large California helicopter parts supplier confirmed that his company purchased some of the parts, and said he believed they were resold to operators of civilian helicopter fleets on the West Coast.

Investigators for both Bell and Sikorsky have been working for over a week on the charges. They said it could take some time to determine if the allegations are correct.

"If they are correct, I would say these parts would have to be looked on as bogus and unairworthy," a senior Bell official said. "You can either ground the helicopter and find the parts or take a chance. If it happened in this country I think the helicopters would be grounded."

The FAA began its own investigation into the charges after The Washington Post requested information about unauthorized airworthiness certifications issued for the parts by FAA-licensed repair shops in California.

Copies of the certifications and other documents relating to the allegations were made available by sources to The Post.

The allegations centre around Aviation Sales Corp., a New York City company which manufactures and supplies helicopter parts here and abroad.

According to a number of sources, the alleged scheme followed this pattern:

Westland Helicopters Ltd., a British firm located in Yeovil, England, builds helicopters under license from Bell and Sikorsky and sells spare parts for Bell and Sikorsky helicopters.

Westland received orders for Bell or Sikorsky helicopter parts from the British Ministry of Defence or from other European military fleets which it supplies.

Westland in turn ordered the parts from Aviation Sales, and the U.S. company relayed the order to its Chatsworth, Calif., subsidiary known as Hyfore Manufacturing Corp.

According to the allegations, Hyfore then placed the orders with independent manufacturers, who were not told the parts were to be sold as Bell of Sikorsky material.

The independents — known in the trade as "venders" — worked from technical drawings supplied by Hyfore, but those drawings did not contain the necessary information on heat treatments and stress testing.

According to top Bell and Sikorsky officials, neither company has granted Hyfore the permission for the information necessary to have parts made to their specifications.

The sources said the drawings supplied by Hyfore to the venders were called "assembly drawings." These, they said, contained the dimensions of the parts to be made, but lacked important information on the parts' metal content, their heat treatments and other critical data that determine how long the parts will hold up when they are installed.

Without this critical data, the sources said, the vendors in some cases were forced to "reverse engineer," or work back toward the unknown information from what was on the drawings.

A Sikorsky official called doing this successfully "almost a statistical impossibility."

In other cases, according to the allegations, the venders weren't told they were making helicopter parts and had no way of determining their durability requirements.

After they were manufactured the parts went through a complicated series of transfers through various locations here. During those transfers, according to the allegations, the names or identifications of Bill or Sikorsky were forged on the parts and they received the misleading certifications from the FAA and Bell-licensed repair stations.

So poorly made were some of the parts sent by Aviation Sales to Westland that in one case sources said a shipment of landing gear parts showed visible cracks where the metal had gone brittle during their manufacturing.

The most-evidently cracked parts were removed from the shipment, the sources said, and the rest of the batch was rushed to England because they were needed for the personal helicopter of the Queen.

According to the sources, the alleged scheme allowed Aviation Sales an enormous mark-up on the parts it sent to Westland.

A part that cost Aviation Sales $1 to have manufactured by a non-authorized source could be sold as a certified Bell or Sikorsky part for up to $75, the sources said.

The types of helicopter parts involved in the scheme ranged from tiny metal pins and bearings to whole landing gear assemblies, the sources said. One source familiar with the operation estimated that during the last three years between $20 million and $40 million in phony Bell or Sikorsky parts were shipped by Aviation Sales to Westland.

TOO GREEDY TO BEAR

VANCOUVER (CP) — A greedy thief who broke into the Pandora's Box Boutique in Gastown on Thursday managed to pile $20,875 worth of jewelry, jade and carvings into a trunk, but then couldn't move the trunk itself.

Police said the thief had fled when they arrived but the goods were intact.

Police Trick Hostage-Taker

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A marijuana-smoking gunman, searching for a son he abandoned 20 years ago who held eight persons hostage for nearly 15 hours in a home for unwed mothers, surrendered today after a police officer convinced him he was the son the man put up for adoption.

Police said Jessie Coulter, 39, of Detroit, and his former wife, who was with him throughout the siege, surrendered in the Catherine Booth Salvation Army home in the city's Avondale section where they had been holed up since 8:30 p.m. Friday.

"We tricked him into giving up by having a police officer imitate his son," said police Captain Robert Morgan.

"He stood outside the locked door and pretended to be his son and talked to him for about 20 minutes.

"When the gunman and his ex-wife cace out, one of them, I don't know which one, said is that really my son," Morgan said.

Six of the hostages escaped several hours earlier by jumping Coulter while he was attempting to roll a marijuana cigarette and taking his sawed-off shotgun away from him.

One of the two persons with Coulter until he was taken into custody was his former wife, Rita Gibion, 37, who accompanied Coulter to the home Friday night.

Salvation Army Maj. David Baxendale told how the six took away Coulter's gun and escaped.

"I guess he was smoking pot and he started to roll a cigarette and one of the nurses grabbed his gun and it discharged," Baxendale said, "but no one was hurt."

After the hostages took away his gun, Coulter pulled a pair of scissors and a knife and threatened the other two hostages — a man and a woman.

The Valentine's Mush Has Dried Up

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What happened to all those long syrupy messages that once were in vogue on Valentine cards?

They're still there on the shelves but shoppers' hearts don't appear to be in them.

As one housewife put it as she bought a tersely wirtten card for her husband:

"My husband doesn't go for that mush. He'd think I'd gone bonkers if I gave him one of those."

Watching as shoppers picked the cards that will tell the story of love on Monday, it was obvious that even the young at heart aren't addicted to prolific prating.

Even when the picture on the front is sentimental enough to get imaginary violin strings twanging, inside the prose is short and to the point.

Some examples:

"Thought of something great today . . . you."

"For the most beautiful person I've ever known."

One of the longer ones — "Wishing you always a quiet hillside, the warmth of the sun . . . and time to keep in touch with yourself."

And, as always, there are cards for those men to whom the words moon, June and spoon are as unpalatable as being caught in a women's lingerie department by the boss.

These cards cloak the romantic in ribaldry. But even the sending is an admission of sentiment.

Some examples:

"I'm asking you to please by my Valentine because you are everything I'm looking for in a girl — sexy, intelligent and . . . employed."

"I love you terrible . . . with practice I'll get better."

"Let's be Valentines . . . when we're still young enough to remember how."

"When I think of you I want to go straight to bed . . . thinking makes me tired."

Such messages, perhaps, fail to equate with the traditional trappings of a cherubic Cupid doing his thing in a froth of lace, flowers and butterflies.

Does it matter as long as they help ensure his arrows are still flying dead on target?

Well·Done
The Westport proudly presents a new standard in condominium living.
Each unit has been built with the same kind of solid thinking and quality construction that goes into a fine home.
2 Bedrooms $36,900·$59,900.
For example, the living rooms. They're unusually large. The master bedrooms will take an entire bedroom suite and still have bedroom left over. The kitchens come with spacious eating areas. Nine units have wood-burning fireplaces and nine have natural wood paneling. All have huge picture windows that flood your room with light.

Wood Burning Fireplaces.
But you can really see how well the Westport is done when it comes to the little things. Like built-in wine racks for your private wine cellar. Kitchen cabinets with interior lighting to show off your china. Recessed display shelves for your favourite plants. And wide balconies or private patios for weekends in the sun.
Wide Balconies & Private Patios.
These are just a few of the finishing touches that show the attention to detail. But behind the scenes is insulation that exceeds N.H.A. standards. Top-rated soundproofing over 50 decibels. And the kind of quality construction that pays off in both financial security and personal contentment.

The Westport.
It's well done for you.

NDP SETTLEMENT SAID JUSTIFIED

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) A former New Democratic Party cabinet minister said Friday that a British Columbia Railway settlement with two Edmonton firms in 1975 was justified because it was on a "business-like basis."

Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio in the Dave Barrett government, said a settlement was made with Keen Industries and a subsidiary, K. R. H. Construction, in a meeting with government officials.

Numweiler said Barrett, the former premier and B.C. Rail president, himself and Gary Lauk, the development minister, were present at a meeting with the two firms in Victoria. Nunweiler was a director.

"We carefully went over the books and felt a settlement was justified," Nunweiler said in an interview. "We also agreed to rewrite contract terms."

He did not say what the amount of the settlement was.

Nunweiler, now an employee of the B.C. Rail here, said the meeting with the Edmonton companies took place Dec. 10, 1975, the day before the NDP went down to a stunning defeat at the hands of the Social Credit Party.

Faculty Blasts Salary Curbs

Faculty members at the University of Victoria are unhappy with Education Minister Pat McGeer's suggestion they receive salary increases substantially below expectations.

Faculty association president Dr. Rod Symington said UVic fell behind last year when increases were below Anti-Inflation Board guidelines.

And under a national adjustment factor, the most they can ask for this year is a 6.8 per cent increase, he said.

"And Dr. McGeer wants us to take less than that. Vancouver Island is probably the most expensive place in the country to live."

In a letter to William Armstrong, chairman of the Universities Council of B.C., McGeer said it should be made clear to university staff that "funds cannot necessarily be found for achieving maximum increases allowable under the AIB regulations."

Symington is upset that McGeer took it upon himself to write the letter.

The universities council disburses the funds to the three provincial universities (UVic, University of B.C. and Simon Fraser University) and then it is up to the individual universities to set their priorities, he said.

He said part of the reason for forming the universities council was to create a buffer between government and universities.

"Now the government is interfering. The minister shouldn't have any input on how the funds are used.

"Government is dipping more and more into university business."

Symington called McGeer's statements a "very useful shelter for university presidents to hide behind" when they announce salary increases that might be lower than expected.

He said the faculty association will ask for the full 6.8 per cent and continue to discus forming a union of faculty members.

MLAs Press Attack On Harried Phillips

Boxcar Plant Troubled

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips told the legislature Friday the government's Rail West boxcar plant in Squamish has been unsuccessful in all 12 of its recent contract bids.

Phillips said the plant, established by the former New Democratic Party government, has been building cars solely for the Crown-owned B.C. Railway.

The minister blamed the operation's lack of success in obtaining contracts on high labor costs, high overhead and distance from sources of steel and markets.

Phillips made the statement after Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace pressed the minister for detailed information on the plant's success.

Phillips said the recently-appointed royal commission in the B.C. Rail will investigate the operation of the plant and that other detailed information is not immediately available.

By LIZ HUGHES

After the fifth day of loud debate on the spending estimates of Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, the NDP Friday introduced a non-confidence motion to reduce the minister's salary to $1.

There is every indication the debate will carry on well into next week, and possibly the one after that, as the opposition continues its attack on Phillips, the first minister this session to have his estimates subject to scrutiny.

The non-confidence motion, introduced by MLA Gary Lauk (Vancouver Centre), the most vociferous of Phillips' attackers, was to reduce his ministerial salary from $24,000 to $1.

The traditional non-confidence motion under such circumstances is to reduce the minister's salary by $1, instead of to $1. Lauk said his motion was more serious than the normal token one.

As debate drew to a close Friday, Lauk read off a list of questions he said Phillips had refused to answer during the week's session.

There were 36, and Lauk said the few questions the minister did answer were unsatisfactory and insulting.

After Lauk introduced his motion, there was some question of whether it was in order because he had omitted the number of the estimates vote, but it appears the technical problem will be resolved by Monday when debate will start on the opposition motion.

Asked how long Lauk would keep repeating his questions to Phillips, he said: "Until he answers."

"We will not budge, not one dime of his salary without some answers."

The questions came from nearly all opposition members and covered almost every topic under Phillips' jurisdiction—the B.C. Railway, the Grizzly Valley pipeline controversy, the B.C. Development Corp. and the northeast coal negotiations and others.

At one point in the debate, NDP MLA Alex Macdonald (Vancouver East) congratulated Phillips on the "straightforward way he dodged the questions."

Both sides of the house were forced to withdraw accusations against the other side as the debate neared conclusion.

Lauk said Phillips had accused him of making false accusations and "wallowing in the gutter" and demanded the minister apologize — which he did.

It was the opposition's turn to retreat a short time later when NDP leader Dave Barrett was forced to withdraw his accusation that Phillips had deliberately misled the house.

Much of the argument Friday centred around the B.C. Development Corp. and its handling under first the NDP and then the Socreds.

Phillips charged that under Lauk's administration (when Lauk was economic development minister and in charge of the Crown corporation) the BCDC, which provides loans to small businesses, had allowed only $75,000 during its first year of operation for bad debts.

About twice that amount was actually needed, Phillips charged, and said that during the first two years of operation $450,000 in bad debts on $7.5 $450,000 in bad debrs on $7.5 million worth of loans.

The minister said the "sour" loans given under the NDP could cost the taxpayer $1.4 million and "we will definitely lose $700,000."

Phillips charged the opposition with "smearing me with innuendo and smut."

Lauk, on the other hand, said the BCDC had made a "handsome" profit during its first year and had returned $200,000 of its start-up costs to consolidated revenue of the province that same year.

"You've only made a drop in the bucket," he shouted at Phillips.

Lauk charged that Phillips was not being candid with the house, that "I've had to pin you down like a butterfly before you answer anything."

The debate will continue Monday.

Pay TV Briefs Sought

Cable television companies have until April 15 to elaborate on their submission to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission on the introduction of pay-TV.

Local general manager Len Charlish, of Victoria Cablevision Ltd., said Friday his company will not make an individual statement to the hearing on pay-TV which will take place May 16 in Ottawa, at request of Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve last June 30.

Victoria Cablevision's views will be incorporated in a brief delivered to CRTC last year.

Charlish said the "greatest challenge" to be met will be whether sufficient Canadian material can be drawn upon to satisfy Canadian content and marketability.

"We know we can get American material, but will we be able to attract Canadian material?" he asked.

Three key objectives sought by CRTC before recommending a policy to the government are:

—A range of programming distinct from what is offered by broadcasters, without siphoning off programs now offered by the broadcasting system.

—High quality programs of Canadian origin that will be accepted by Canadian viewers.

—Marketability outside the country of programs produced in Canada.

When 105 submissions were reviewed, the commission concluded that not enough material was addressed to the issue of whether pay-TV will satisfy demands made by the viewing public, consistent with postive benefits to Canada's broadcasting system and the national program production industry.

The commission was left with such unanswered questions as the kind and form of programs; how pay-TV can respond to national and regional demands of subscribers; anti-siphoning restrictions; the form of ownership for the distributing agency; whether cable licensees, broadcasters and program producers should be part of such agency; and what financial arrangements there should be.

Cash For Libraries

The British Columbia education ministry has offered more than $100,000 in an attempt to strengthen community college libraries.

The ministry said in a news release Friday a $58,000 grant has been approved for a six-month project designed to identify books, periodicals and other library resources needed by students at community colleges.

The project will be co-ordinated by Ross Carter, librarian at Vancouver community College.

A second grant of $50,000 will allow B.C.'s three public universities to produce microfiche catalogues of their collections and to distribute the catalogues to the community colleges.

"The grants are the first steps towards the implementation of a full inter-library loan system for all post-secondary institutions in the province," said Education Minister Pat McGeer.

Record Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Space satellites show that 65 per cent of the land on North America was snow-covered in January, more than in any month since the government started using the satellites to keep track of snow in 1966.

FIRED DEPUTY WINS $11,520

Howard Sturrock, former deputy minister of highways who was fired by the Social Credit government twice last year, has received $11,520 as a settlement in lieu of notice.

The settlement was made public in a cabinet order released Friday.

Sturrock, appointed by the former New Democratic Party government, was dismissed shortly after Highways Minister Alex Fraser was sworn in as minister.

His dismissal prompted a number of other deputy ministers to threaten to quit if Sturrock wasn't reinstated.

He was reinstated but fired again last September. The second firing did not cause any visible reaction from senior government officials.

Fraser said in an interview that the settlement represents a month's salary for every year of service.

SPEC Chop Limited

The 80-per-cent cut in the grant to the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society (SPEC) was for a single program, not the organization's operating funds, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Friday.

SPEC had said the cutback to $5,000 for 1976 from $25,000 the previous two years has crippled its activities but Nielsen said he considered the grant a reasonable response to the application.

He said public meetings are all that are involved with SPEC's series of presentations on the Fraser River.

Brotherly Love . . . Then Some

BURY ST. EDMUNDS, — Tom Davey was delighted when, after a 30 year separation, he found his long lost brother, Dennis, with the help of the Salvation Army.

But his joy was shortlived. Dennis, 60, has run off with Tom's 38-year-old wife, Janet, leaving him with six of their seven children.

Tom, 59, said, "I just can't understand how my older brother can turn up after all this time and waltz off with my wife."

"Janet was delighted when Dennis turned up. They were very close," Tom said. "I put that down to their happiness for me because I had found my brother. Now I just want her to come home as soon as possible."

There's No Ford in Firm's Future

DETROIT — Ford Motor Co. chairman Henry Ford II said Friday he will name a successor sometime this year, putting control of the firm outside his family for the first time in its 74-year history.

Ford, who will be 60 on Sept. 4, has been chief executive for 32 years. At age 28, he took hold of the firm from his aging grandfather after the Second World War and engineered one of the most dramatic corporate comebacks in the history of U.S. industry.

Ford was in hospital for treatment of a heart ailment last year and has been cutting back outside activities although he has told associates he feels fine.

Ford would not speculate on who might succeed him or how it would be handled or even if he will step down before his mandatory retirement at 65.

He said he had someone prepare the number of possibilities and they came up with "1,500 options."

Ford's only son, Edsel, who is 29, is an assistant area manager for the Lincoln-Mercury division in Boston.

While Edsel is a year older than his father was when he took the reins, the elder Ford says Edsel — named after the original Ford's only son — is not ready.

Another contender is Lee Iacocca, at 52 the president of the Ford Motor Co.

While there is a chance that someone outside the family could become the chief executive, Ford says someone named Ford has to be near the top.

"The family has 12 per cent of the equity of the company and 40 per cent of the vote in the company and there has got to be somebody called Ford in the top echelons," he said, "But I don't know how it's going to work out."

Asked how the firm would run without Henry Ford II calling the signals, Ford said, "It's going to run very well. We've got darn good people."

'You'll Never Cheat Anyone Else'

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — "You'll never be able to cheat anyone else," the woman told the man who had just beaten her in a civil suit over a house.

Police said she then pulled a gun from her purse and shot him to death in the courtroom.

Elizabeth Duncan, 58, was being held without bail today on an open charge of homicide in the death of George Kissak, 62. He was struck in the abdomen.

"I told him I'd kill him. I told him I'd kill him," Mrs. Duncan, a widow, yelled as she was led to a police car after the Friday night shooting in the Broward County courthouse.

Court officials said Kissak made a down payment on a $42,000 house in the exclusive Imperial Point section of Fort Lauderdale. He had the deed listed in the name of Mrs. Duncan. She moved in and settled down.

Later, for reasons that weren't made clear, Kissak had the deed altered to substitute his name for hers and began proceedings to force her out.

In his suit, Kissak asked that she be ordered to leave the house and reimburse him for the mortgage payments.

'Ma Perkins' Dies

CINCINNATI — Actress Virginia Payne, who for 2 years was the voice of Ma Perkins in the daily radio show which ended in 1960, died this week still keeping her age a secret. She was believed in her 70s.

DENVER, Colo—Joan Kennedy, wife of Senator Edward Kennedy, was taken to hospital here today after suffering a minor head injury in a fall. "She's here overnight for observation," a spokesman at Denver General Hospital said early today. Mrs. Kennedy slipped and fell at Stapleton International Airport here. She was brought to the hospital by ambulance and treated for an abrasion to her forehead.

MAIDENHEAD, England — Princess Anne was arrested for speeding last month. Now it's her husband's turn. Police stopped Capt. Mark Phillips Friday night on the superhighway from London to the West Coast and charged him with speeding. Phillips was driving the same car in which his wife was stopped last month.

PARIS — Ballet dancer Rudolf Nureyev said Friday he has tried in vain for 15 years to get a visa for his aged mother to visit him from the Soviet Union. Nureyev, appearing here, said he has not seen his 72-year-old mother since seeking political asylum in Paris 16 years ago.

CHICAGO — Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel said Friday he has sued the Chicago Sun-Times for $200 million for publishing remarks indicating he is anti-Semitic. A spokesman for Knievel said the newspaper published stories Jan. 27 and Jan. 28 saying "among other things that Mr. Knievel was sick and tired of dealing with Jews." Knievel said the statements are malicious and untrue.

DUBLIN — Actor Stephen Rea was released by police Friday after six hours of questioning under the Irish republic's anti-guerrilla laws. Rea, 30, born in Northern Ireland, arrived here two days ago on holiday and was due to return to London on Friday to begin work on a new play. Police declined to say why they had questioned Rea, who was held under the Irish republic's emergency powers legislation, drawn up mainly to combat the IRA.

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's latest plea for a new trial on bank robbery charges has been rejected by a federal judge. Judge William Orrick Friday turned down a request for reconsideration of his Nov. 19 denial of a new trial. The newspaper heiress was found guilty last March 20 of robbing a branch of the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco and is free on bail pending appeal. The appeal is not affected by Friday's ruling.

RIBBET RAVAGE

JOHANNESBURG — A shark-toothed, two-pound bullfrog named Legs bit a hand that almost fed him and ended up mummified.

Nella van Niewenhuisen was weeding her garden when she was attacked by the giant bullfrog. She was stitched up in a hospital.

Her son-in-law meanwhile beat the bullfrog to death after it attacked him, too.

The body of Legs is being mummified as a prize specimen.

Why call it Legs?

"Well," says Niewenhuisen, nursing her heavily bandaged hand, "We thought Jaws was a bit old-hat."

COLD WORK WINS BONUS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The R. F. Commmunications Division of Harris Corp. has given $20 to each of the 1,000 employees of its Rochester plant as a bonus for working in temperatures of 10 C. for a week because of the natural gas shortage.

"We had a great reaction from our employees and we decided management should show its appreciation," Guy Numann, and general manager, said Friday.

Slain Mafia Man Was Informer

SAN DIEGO — Frank (The Bomph) Bompensiero, a local Mafia chief slain ganglandstyle in an alley two days ago, reportedly was a key FBI informer on his comrades in organized crime.

Bompensiero was killed Thursday night by an assassin who waited for him in an alley and pumped four .22-calibre bullets into his head, apparently with a silencer-equipped automatic pistol.

The Los Angeles Times and the Sacramento Bee both reported today that Bompensiero had been one of the FBI's best informants, operating within the high councils of organized crime.

The Bee quoted "federal sources" and The Times "law enforcement intelligence sources."

Bompensiero was shot as he was returning to his expensive Pacific Beach apartment, where he lived under the telephone booth he often used because he feared his home phone was tapped.

It was "a typical gangland execution," said deputy police chief James Connole.

He was apparently felled by one shot in the back of the head and the killer then pumped three more bullets into his skull as he lay dying.

The Bee said the U.S. justice department wanted Bompensiero to surface as a prosecution witness against organized crime figures but the FBI wanted him to remain under cover, saying that with his "easy access to top Mafia figures around the country, (he) was one of the bureau's best informants."

Bompensiero, originally from Milwaukee, had a criminal record going back to a prohibition bootlegging arrest in 1928.

He was arrested in the murder of a San Diego nightclub waiter, but released for lack of evidence, and served six years for bribing a state official to get a liquor license.

University of Victoria
ETHIOPIAN ICONS
(AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE)
Ethiopia comes within the sphere of Oriental Christianity, and her art is the only art on African soil to survive 1600 years of historical and cultural adaptation.
The lecture will survey the religious and cultural themes developed in Ethiopian icons which date from the 15th to the 19th century, and discuss the making and nature of this form of sacred art.
Lecturer: S. Chojnacki, Librarian of the Institute of Ethiopian Studies, University College of Addis Ababa.
Offered in co-operation with the Department of History in Art, University of Victoria, and the British Columbia Provincial Museum
Monday, February 14, 8:00 p.m., Clearihue 106, University of Victoria campus. Fee $3.00

City Theatre Praised by Expert

audrey johnson

David Peacock, head of Canada Council's theatre division, was in town for a day this week. Not an inspection trip, he told me, taking time out from a full schedule for a brief exchange of ideas on Victoria's theatre scene.

"We just like to maintain a personal contact. We try to get out west at least twice a year to talk to people and see what's going on."

He had seen Richard III the night before and would catch Vancouver Playhouse Theatre Centre's King Lear the following night. It was just a happy alignment that the two major West Coast professional theatres should have been doing two big Shakespeare plays at the same time, he says.

Peacock was pleased with Richard. He thought the production "did no dis-service to the play" — an important point and one that has been a critical contention with regard to the Lear production. He felt Richard, in many respects, was highly effective.

It was once over lightly for other aspects of the Victoria performing arts scene, but some interesting and thought-provoking observations emerged. Peacock was enthusiastic about The Belfry Cultural Centre, which he called the most flexible intimate facility he has seen here.

Referring specifically to Bastion Theatre's production of the Canadian play Creeps last fall, he said Belfry was exactly the right situation in which Bastion could mount an experimental program. Canada Council ,it appears, logically sees this as a highly desirable development.

Altogether Peacock gives the impression of beaming with satisfaction over his visit. Apart from considering Don Shipley (artistic director) and the Belfry as two of the better things that have happened since he has been coming here officially, Peacock is warmly supportive about Kaleidoscope Theatre.

"This group has picked up the reins from Company One," he says. "They're carrying on from there and doing splendid innovative theatre for children. That's why we're delighted to be able to make them our recent award." (Kaleidoscope was notified of a $10,000 Canada Council grant last week).

"Of course we realize that amount won't go too far over a year's operation, but we hope that a Canada Council grant of that size will encourage other funding agencies to give major support to Kaleidoscope."

Peacock was curious about the "foundation" concept for the operation of the McPherson Playhouse (now virtually an accomplished fact). It sounded like a good practical, as well as imaginative, approach to the management of a civic-owned theatre, he said.

The theatre itself is quite delightful, says Peacock. "If something could be done about building out the backstage area to provide rehearsal and work space — a serious lack — it would be just ideal."

No wonder his comment had a familiar ring. The original citizen's committee which was established in 1964 to work with the architect on the renovation of the 1912 theatre — it included Carl Hare, Allan Purdy, myself and my husband — kept stressing the importance of improving the cramped backstage area without result.

Peacock, while acknowledging that the Victoria Symphony and other large-scale needs are poorly served by the Royal Theatre, is opposed to the idea of building a "monument" — a mammoth arts centre.

Our discussion led us to the proposition that what this city needs more than anything else in the arts building line is a reasonable-sized symphony hall with attendant rehearsal and office space and a wing that would resolve the critical space shortage afflicting the Conservatory of Music, whose spectacular success has led directly to its present dilemma.

For every other purpose, the McPherson, particularly if the Foundation operation succeeds (and if future plans include changes in the backstage area) is much more than adequate, we both agreed.

Trio Joined by Violinist

Guest artist with Trio Victoria in a concert next Friday at Craigdarroch Castle will be Vancouver violist Smyth Humphrey. He will joint pianist Robin Wood, cellist James Hunter and brother, Sydney Humphreys, violin, in performance of two piano quarters — the Mozart G minor, K 478, and Brahms C minor, Op. 60.

The program will also include the String Trio B-flat by Schubert. Time of the concert is 8 p.m. Concert-goers are reminded that seating is limited. Admission at the door is $2.50.

Top Musical Pair Visits

A husband and wife who possess brilliant international reputations in separate fields of music, will visit Victoria next week.

They are Viennese piano virtuoso and definitive interpreter of Mozart, Paul Badura-Skoda, and Eva Badura-Skoda, musicologist and authority on the Music of Mazart and Haydn.

Badura-Skoda will be the guest artist with Victoria Symphony in an all-Mozart program, Feb. 20 and 21, and Dr. Eva will give lectures and a musicology seminar at University of Victoria.

Of these lectures, one will be open to the public. It takes place in the MacLaurin Building auditorium, Thursday from 12:30 to 1:20 p.m, and its subject is "thte Difference between Notated and Performed Music during the 18th Century."

Badura-Skoda's extraordinary musical and pianistic talent was discovered at the age of 22 by conductors such as von Karajan and Furtwaengler, who engaged him as soloist for their concerts.

Numerous long-play recordings made at that time (1949-1952) resulted in his first concerts in New York and Tokyo being sold out within a few hours of tickets going on sale.

Since 1952, Badura-Skoda has concertized on all continents and is in constant demand for all important international festivals. He is also a conductor and likes to carry on the old tradition of conducting piano concertos from the keyboard in order to reach the highest possible unity of conception. He has received international recognition in this field as well.

Dr. Eva Badura-Skoda has co-authored with her husband the standard work in Mozart piano performance, Interpreting Mozart at the Keyboard.

Her editions of Mozart's keyboard works are widely used throughout the world and she is actively involved with the preparation of the text of the Neue ozart Ausgabe, among other projects. At present she has two books in preparation, one dealing with the history of music in Vienna during the 18th century, and the other, again in collaboration with her husband entitled Interpreting Schubert.

She has taught at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, the State Academy of Music in Vienna, and Vienna Conservatory of Music.

Organ Recital

Second of a series of two organ recitals by Edward Norman at St. John's Church, 1611 Quadra (corner of Mason) will take place Wednesday. These recitals have been signed as a tribute to J. S. Bach, the greatest composer ever to write for the "king of instruments."

The program for Wednesday includes the great Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor and the famous Toccata and Fugue in D minor.

The program for Wednesday includes the great Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor and the famous Toccata and Fugue in D minor. Also to be performed will be aslection of chorale preludes and a trio-sonata.

The recital begins at 8 p.m. and admission at the door is $2.

Players in this scene from St. Luke's production of the comedy, "On Monday Next," are, left to right, Linda Robertson, Kay Averill and Robert Warren. The play will have its final performance to tonight at St. Luke's Hall, Cedar Hill Cross Road. Curtain is at 8:15.

'Puttin' on the Ritz'

Patrons who attend the forthcoming production of the Irving Berlin musical, Puttin' on the Ritz, which starts Friday at The Belfry, will be greeted with scenes and objects to remind them of the Berlin years — the 20s, 30s and 40s.

Designer Ken MacDonald has devised an ingenious set incorporating piano keys as a step unit, cartoons in the style of the period and a large cartoon of the great Berlin himself.

In the meantime a tight schedule of rehearsals under directors Don Shipley and Pat Armstrong, musical director Joan Beckow and choreographer Judith Marcuse, is keeping cast members Dan Costain, Bill Hosie, Sheila McCarthy and Mary Swinton on their toes.

Tickets are on sale now for the show which runs through to March 5, playing nightly, Tuesday through Sunday at 8 p.m. with two shows Saturday, at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Opening night tickets will cost $5 and include a gala party where the audience can meet the cast. Other nights are at $4 and $3.50 for students and senior citizens. Reservations can be made by calling the Belfry, 1291 Gladstone, 385-6815.

Doors Are Open for Liv

ULLMANN . . . memoirs published

NEW YORK — "You might think it an unfairness," Liv Ullmann said, coloring slightly. "You know there are real writers who have trouble getting their books published. I know I'm privileged. Because if somebody not of my profession got a part, maybe a part I'd like, I would not be so happy."

The Swedish actress has been rehearsing O'Neill's play Anna Christie for Jose Quintero, she has finished filming The Serpent's Egg for Ingmar Bergman, and her first book, Changing, has just come out with no lack of publicity.

"It's not so good when the doors just open," she said., "And I'll cry the day they're not open."

The two sentences go in different directions, and so does Miss Ullmann. It is more or less the subject of her book, an idiosyncratic and thoughtful memoir. There is the world in which she is rooted: her home and friends in Norway, her Norwegian stage work, her daughter Linn.

There is the world she travels as an international star. It is mileposted with hotel rooms, interviews, attention, orange juice and Sundays.

Sunday is important. It is the day when the people who are continually attentive to her in Los Angeles or New York are home repairing their roofs. She has nothing much to do, like a factory shut down for the weekend.

Orange juice also has significance. It keeps appearing in her book, another sign that she is in world number two, where there is room service. "It means a lot to us who are from the North, orange juice," she said. At that particular moment room service in her hotel had broken down. There awas nothing she could offer except water, and that seemed to make conversation easier.

In Changing, Miss Ullmann, who is 37, comes back continually to the more profound meaning of her quiet things; to her uneasiness at leaving them and returning to them. (This trip, however, she has her daughter with her.) But she does it anyway.

"In a way I don't feel I have left them," she said. "The meaningful things just lie there, but there are times you must leave for the reasons of the profession. But you leave them in a way that at the same time says hello to them.

"You can't settle down even if the chair you're sitting in is fantastically soft and safe. You can't avoid taking steps toward the chair that may be less comfortable but is more" — she reached for a word, and missed — "nourishing."

She slipped from the couch and onto her knees, leaning her elbows on a low table in front of her.

"My problem of always leaving and saying goodbye and hello again is the problem of you, or of a housewife. She is going with heavy baskets and crying children through the streets. She is saying goodbye to dream, maybe. What can she do? It's a situation she chose and stepped into."

Miss Ullmann opened Anna Christie in Toronto at the end of January, will tour several American cities and come to New York with it in April. When she read the play, she said, she was only moderately impressed with it; that is, until Quintero began rehearsing it.

"When he talks, it is as if it were the best play in the world. You really believe you have gold in your hands and should use it as something very precious," she said. "Or flowers, to be naturalistic."

How did Quintero compare with Ingmar Bergman as a stage director? "It's the opposite of what you might think," she replied. "When he's directing a play instead of a movie, Ingmar is full of joy and laughter. Quinetero, on the other hand, shows he's suffering, and brings you with him. Bergman directs you like a conductor with a violinist. Quintero comes up and plays the violin beside you."

"It is very hard," she continued, "to describve how directors work. The good ones work in secret ways. The bad ones you can remember the particular things they do. The good ones are simply there. The good director has the sense of the people he's working with. The bad ones just know their own limited fantasies."

Miss Ullmann recently finished working with Bergman on The Serpent's Egg. It is set in Germany and takes place just after the Second World War. "It is a very different picture from the others by Ingmar. It is broader, maybe not so soul-searching. We are a small circus troupe that gets stranded in Berlin, just when Hitler put up his little ugly head."

The film transforms Miss Ullmann from her normal beauty, which has thought as well as blondness in it, into something frizzled, red-lipped and doll-eyed. "I become a third-class cabaret singer," she said. "For the first time I get to sing and dance in a movie. It's fun. Terribly fun. I do all the obvious things, all the cliches, of third-class cabaret singers."

This summer she will make another film with Bergman. With two Bergman's in fact. It is about a mother and daughter. She will be the daughter and the mother will be Gergman-Ingrid.

It is a theme that preoccupies here a good deal. Much of Changing" is devoted to thoughts about her mother, and about her own daughter, Linn, who is 11.

"In fact, one of my main dreams was for Linn to read the book. But she got through about 18 pages, to where I remember looking at my flat chests as a girl and wishing I had big breasts, and she told me it was childish."

Talking about Linn led her to talk more about Linn's father. Miss Ullmann and Bergman lived together for a number of years, sometimes stormily, and mostly on the island of Faro off the Swedish coast.

"People say what a terrible father Bergman must be," she said. "But what does Linn have? A father with a vision. He didn't push a baby carriage or sit with his arms around me when I fed her, but he can be a wonder for her. Maybe he would have been happier pushing her baby carriage."

Her book describes the years with Bergman with affection and wonder, also with a certain note of comedy. She showed him the manuscript and says he approved of it, but told her to put in more detail. Accordingly, she describes a scene where he kicked down the bathroom door after she had locked herself in during a quarrel.

She also describes the logistical difficulties of quarreling on an island. For her dramatic exits, it was necessary to drive to the water and wait for the ferry. Once to speed things up, they ordered a seaplane but, by the time it arrived, they were no longer angry with each other.

Student at UVic Directs Own Play

An original play directed by the author and a short piece from the fertile though short-lived brain of British playwright Joe Orton make up the second Phoenix Theatre program to be staged by UVic Theatre Department, Wednesday through Saturday.

Sports is a tragicomedy by Don Woticky, who is doing post-graduate work at UVic leading to his Master of Fine Arts degree. It is set in a locker room in the future and explores a strange camaraderie between four athletes. As the plot unfolds it reveals how a cruel and violent world has crushed all their hopes. Slowly the onlooker discovers that these are not ordinary athletes preparing for a mundane sporting event, but a "sport" which represents our modern attitude.

This is Woticky's first play to be presented in Victoria.

Stephen Lloyd directs Orton's "Ruffian on the Stair", also as a project leading to his M.F.A. degree. He came to UVic last summer as a member of the Phoenix Summer Theatre repertory group. Later he played the pivotal role of the boy in Equus, and this winter the title role of Scapino in the theatre department's fall production.

The forthcoming production will be his first directing assignment in Victoria.

Curtain time for the plays is 8 p.m. Information and reservations can be obtained by calling the Phoenix, 477-4821.

Conservatory Concert For Catherine Lewis

Senior student of Victoria Conservatory of Music, Catherine Lewis, soprano, assisted by Anne Crose at the piano, and Donna Zapf, clarinet, will give a concert, Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Conservatory, 1050 Joan Crescent.

On the program will be works by Vivaldi, Poulenc, Wolf, Stravinsky, Ravel, Milhaud, Aaron Copland and Harry Freedman.

There is no admission charge but donations to the scholarship-bursary fund will be accepted.

Quintet Concert

First in a series of six Victoria Symphony Quintet concerts is to be presented Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the reference department of Greater Victoria Public Libarary.

In addition to the Dvorak Quintet, Op. 77, Mozart's Quartet in B-flat Major "The Hunt", and the Duet No. 2 for violin and viola will be performed. Doors will open at 2 p.m. and admission will be $1.

CHIPMAN
. . . at McPherson

CONCERT FEATURES CHIPMAN

A popular entertainer possessing a strong vein of minstrel blood and a warm, full baritone voice is Peter Chipman, well known to Victoria Operatic Society audiences, concert and cabaret patrons and on local television.

On Friday, at 8:30 p.m., Peter will appear in concert at McPherson Playhouse. Assisting will be special guest Carl and Lottie Hemeon and Inger Truman, and the instrumental music of Grand Slam and Bill Sample.

Ottawa-born, Chipman began his musical life in Nova Scotia at an early age. While still in high school he formed a popular East Coast folk-singing group called The Henchmen, arranging songs for them and performing with them for four years throughout Eastern Canada.

Chipman moved to Victoria in 1969 and since that time he has entertained widely at conventions, night spots and concerts.

Federal Aid Promised For B.C. Coal: Bennett

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Bennett indicated Friday that he has been assured of federal support for British Columbia plans to exploit its north-eastern coal fields and link the region by rail to the Pacific Coast.

The B.C. premier told reporters after a 45-minute meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau that federal-provincial studies on the proposals are proceeding "a little faster than we thought."

Though the federal government had offered the province no guarantees, it had reacted sympathetically to the resource development plans.

Bennett, who returns to Vancouver today after four days of talks with cabinet ministers and federal officials, said northern B.C. development would "do a lot" for the entire country.

Increased exports of northern coal and timber would help offset the country's $5-billion balance of payments deficit.

And a railway linking the north-eastern interior of B.C. to Prince George would encourage settlement and take population pressure away from the U.S.-Canada border further south.

The premier said he did not come to Ottawa with his hand out looking for federal aid.

Instead, he merely wanted the government to realize the province intends to capitalize on regional expansion programs never before accepted by B.C.

Former premiers of B.C. — including his father, W. A. C. Bennett — had been considered mavericks, who resisted federal offers of financial help for development.

But there was an increasing need for outside assistance to develop the province now.

Bennett said his government had an estimate of the cost of exploiting the north-eastern part of the province, but he refused to disclose his estimates.

The estimated cost was high enough that it "might frighten people — so we don't bandy the figures around."

Bennett also said that he had expressed concern to the prime minister over proposals to ship Alaskan oil and gas by tanker down the B.C. coast into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He made no mention of a proposed 710-mile pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton that would involve the passage of tankers through treacherous B.C. coastal waters. Citizens' groups have attacked this proposal because they fear an oil spill would harm fisheries and the environment.

Iona Campagnolo, Skeena MP and minister without portfolio responsible for sport and physical fitness, said an inquiry will be held into the proposed pipeline.

She said the oil terminal proposal committee should report later this spring. The next phase would be an independent inquiry to get public reaction to the committee report.

Bennett said he also pressed B.C. claims for greater financial assistance in running the provincial ferry system.

He said Briitsh Columbia now receives only about $1 million in federal subsidies and grants for the money-lossing system. Atlantic provinces, on the other hand, "received $100 million a year in subsidies and grants."

Death an Accident

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A six-man coroner's jury attached no blame in finding the Jan. 21 death of Allen Herbert Philcox, 41, of Kamloops, was accidental and unnatural.

Philcox, a construction worker employed by Pine Tree Construction at the site of a new city reservoir, died after a boom carrying cement to a pillar he was working on collapsed, striking him in the head.

Boy Sent to Foster Home

NANAIMO (CP) — The 14-year-old boy, whose encounters with the law have proved a bane to the British Columbia child welfare superintendent during the past year, was ordered returned to a Victoria foster home Friday.

The youth pleaded guilty in court to three charges of breaking and entry with intent to commit an indictable offence and to two charges of attempted breaking and entry with intent — all related to incidents here Jan. 16.

Judge Stan Wardill of the provincial court had ordered the child welfare superintendent, Victor Belknap, and John Noble, deputy human resources minister, to appear in court as Crown witnesses. They were both in court Friday.

The child's case made headlines last year when Judge Wardill placed the boy in Belknap's personal care, fined him $250 and ordered restitution paid after the boy pleaded guilty here to a breaking and entry charge.

Last November, the B.C. Court of Appeal quashed Judge Wardill's decision against Belknap.

T. J. Gove, counsel for the youth, applied for Friday's session to be held in camera and was supported by Crown counsel Scott Van Alstine, but Judge Wardill ruled against the application.

Sylvia Burns, a probation officer, told the court Friday that there were only two suitable juvenile facilities from Washington State to the Yukon. One was the Victoria foster home where the child has been staying and making some progress.

The alternative, a facility at Secret Harbor, Wash., would cost between $1,100 and $1,500 a month and would need special approval from the human resources minister, said Ms. Burns.

Other facilities were either crowded until September or were for older juveniles.

Gove said little was taken in the one incident since last year and the boy showed full co-operation after his arrest.

Judge Wardill adjourned the five guilty pleas to another date.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, the British Columbia Supreme Court wrestled with the problem of what to do with another juvenile whom a provincial court judge tried to have delivered last week to the attorney-general.

The boy still is being held in what lawyers say is a juvenile holding facility in Prince Rupert.

Mr. Justice Harry McKay, who adjourned the hearing to Feb. 18, asked the lawyers to provide him with more information on the boy and the availability of juvenile facilities in the province.

He specifically asked lawyer C. K. Campbell, representing the superintendent of child welfare, to find out what group homes are available in Prince Rupert and whether there are plans to build a juvenile industrial school in the province.

IWA Slams WCB Report Bias

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Woodworkers of America, British Columbia's largest trade union, Friday called for the dismissal of three Workers' Compensation Board commissioners "on the basis that they have exhibited a definite anti-worker bias."

The demand is included in a 24-page brief to Labor Minister Alan Williams analysing the P. S. Ross report, a study of the board prepared for the Labor department last year. The Ross Report says the board needed tightened administrative and accounting procedures.

The union brief says the Ross Report was prepared with a "haphazard, unscientific and subjective method" and "demonstrated ignorance of compensation and prevention policies and overt pro-employer bias."

The union says it refuses to "recognize the Ross Report provides a legitimate basis for any contemplated legislative or administrative alterations to the Workers' Compensation Act, the board or the board's policies."

Instead, says the union, commissioners John Berry, Terry Watt and George Kowbel should be dismissed and "replaced with competent, fair-minded persons."

Kowbel is a former IWA member and headed the union's health and safety committee before his appointment to the board.

The union brief says the Ross Report fails to recognize that deterioration of board services is "a result of political pressures generated by the Employers' Council, the Council of Forest Industries and a few large corporate employers."

The union says the Ross Report's focus on claims adjudication as the board's main activity is a "crude attempt to shift attention away from progressive prevention development at the board and into narrow, reactive approaches to claims through cost-cutting and abstract organizational changes."

Tanker Safety Bill for U.S.

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A three-bill package to step up safety requirments for foreign and domestic tanker ships operating within 200 miles of the United States coastline has been introduced by Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem. — Wash.).

His intention, said Magnuson, "is to wipe out existing inequities and to minimize the environmental risks to our navigable and ocean waters which arise from the transportation, production and handling of oil."

B.C. Fed Eyes 1-Year Pacts Despite Bennett's Plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett's recent plea that labor and management this year negotiate contracts longer than one-year has been rejected by labor.

The B.C. Federation of Labor decided at a one-day bargaining conference to request all affiliates to negotiate one-year agreement.

Roy Gautier, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said the federation has generally supported one year agreements but never stated itself so clearly before.

He said one-year agreements are essential because the federal anti-inflation program may terminate soon.

Gautier said union representatives at the conference discussed bargaining strategy generally but added it is too early in the year to 'get down to the nuts and bolts."

On Jan. 26 Premier Bennett told a Social Credit fund-raising dinner in Victoria that he hopes there will be no one-year contracts, saying the good of the province demands they be for two years or more.

Flood Controls

PENTICTON (CP)— Part of this years' $500,000 budget for improvement to the Okanagan River Channel will go toward measures reducing flood hazards in years of high runoff and conserving water in years of low runoff, the projects co-ordinator said Friday.

A. M. Thomson, in charge of implementing recommendations of the four-year Okanagan Basin Study, said floodgates on Okanagan Lake have been known to freeze shut and this will be remedied.

Thomson said the gates also would be modified for a higher outflow of water prior to any future heavy spring runoffs.

Rail Loads Up

VANCOUVER (CP)— The British Columbia Railway reports that January car loadings totalled 14,352 compared with 12,259 in the same month last year. The increase was attributed to a greater volume of grain, copper and lumber shipments.

Kidnapping Remand

SURREY (CP) — Rena Conley of Hayward, Calif., was remended to Feb. 18 when she appeared in provincial court Friday charged with kidnapping a two-week-old baby last Sept. 2.

A second woman, Sandra Ann Hanoum, 24, arrested in connection with the kidnapping of Cameron Green of Surrey, remains in custody in San Francisco where she is fighting extradition. Completion of her hearing is expected to take several weeks.

Spill Case Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial court judge Skip McCarthy Friday reserved decision to Feb. 38 on a case in which CP Rail is charged with spilling oil into False creek in October, 1975.

The charge was laid under the Federal Fisheries ACt after oil was discovered in the water near the CP roundhouse near the downtown core.

Defense lawyer Pauline Maughan told the court a CP diesel engine blew a gasket on that date, spilling 60 gallons of lubricating oil.

BIOLOGIST, RECEPTIONIST DEAD

'Crime of Passion'—Police

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A tragic love affair is blamed for the murder of Antionette (Toni) Beltgens and apparent suicide of well-known wildlife biologist Ian Donald Smith.

Victoria and Saanich police said late Friday they consider the incident a "crime of passion," the action of an overwrought, jilted lover.

Miss Beltgens, 24, of 308-3142 Cedar Hill Road was found in her car parked in the lot next to a medical-dental centre at 3040-44 Shelbourne where she worked as a receptionist. Police said she died of a single bullet wound to her head.

Her body was discovered at about 9:30 a.m. by a patient coming out of a dentist's office who noticed the driver's window of her car shattered.

Police believe she had been killed about half an hour earlier as she arrived to work.

Later in the morning, at about 10:30 a.m. two students walking to the top of Mount Tolmie to find a place to study stumbled on the body of Smith, lying behind a waist-high stone wall between the lookout parking lot and reservoir.

A Winchester 30-30 rifle lay across his body. Police said he put the rifle in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

Police found four spent cartridges near the body and presume he fired three rounds to bolster his courage before apparently turning the gun on himself.

His car was parked nearby, a box of shells under a quilted coat on the front seat, a red gun case folded on the back seat. On the rear bumper was a sticker that said: "There is no grass beyond the mountains."

Saanich police said Smith mailed a suicide note to a friend. It was handed in to police at 5 p.m. Friday. Insp. Robin Stewart would not reveal the contents.

The two deaths have left their friends and colleagues shocked, and baffled.

"I don't know how a person could be so distraught as to do a thing like that," said Dr. John Bandy, administration and planning head of the wildlife branch.

"Nobody had any notion Ian was under a lot of stress," said Jim Hatter, former director of the branch.

Smith, 37, of 218 Portsmouth, was in charge of wildlife inventory for B.C. at Victoria. He'd held the position since 1973. Before that he was regional wildlife biologist for Vancouver Island at Nanaimo for three years.

He was highly regarded by his co-workers.

"If he had one fault it was he tended to be academic in his approach," said Hatter. "But it's a fault most of us in this business share."

Durirg his time in Nanaimo his marriage broke down and divorce followed. His wife has since remarried and is living up-Island.

Shortly after he moved to Victoria he met Miss Beltgens who was a clerk with the fish and wildlife branch at the time.

The two were frequently seen together but in recent months the affair seemed to have cooled.

Miss Beltgens quit her job with the government last year and five months ago went to work for Dr. John Campbell at the Shelbourne clinic as his medical receptionist.

Campbell described her as efficient, quiet, punctual.

"She did her job extremely well," and gave no hint of personal troubles, he said.

Campbell said he arrived at his office at about 9:15 a.m. to do some last-minute paperwork before catching the 11 a.m. ferry to go on a week's skiing vacation in Banff.

He pulled his car in alongside Miss Beltgens' but couldn't see the shattered window and didn't look inside.

He said he thought it unusual Miss Beltgens was not at her desk. He made a few phone calls and 15 minutes later left. As he was going out a man came up to him and told him about finding a body in a car in the lot.

"What a shock," he said. "You read about these sort of things in the newspaper or see it on TV but never think it will happen to you."

Smith was the author of one book — The Unknown Island, a pictorial representation of Vancouver Island — and was working on another dealing with the Queen Charlotte Islands. He was a frequent contributor to wildlife and outdoor journals.

While attending school and university, where he achieved top grades, Smith spent his summers as a reporter for the Times, between 1957 to 1962, and the Colonist in 1963 and 1966, working mainly in the sports department.

His parents are retired in Australia. His father, Lloyd Smith, was sanitary inspector in Victoria. He has one married sister in Vancouver.

Police don't know whether there will be an inquest or inquiry into the deaths. Much will depend on a ballistics check of the bullets that killed the pair. Tests are expected to be completed over the weekend.

Losing Battle For MDs

Regional planners are expected to override protests from some doctors and commit themselves Wednesday to building a new general hospital in View Royal.

They'll have the backing of Health Minister Bob McClelland who Friday accused Dr. Peter Banks, the most vocal opponent, of "absolutely incorrect" public statements on the issue.

McClelland said he thinks Banks is "playing games" on the whole matter of local hospital development.

In a letter to the Times editor this week Banks, former president of the Canadian Medical Association and a past chief of staff at Victoria General Hospital, said a yet-to-be-released consultant's report is opposed to splitting that hospital on two sites.

After years of debate, current plans call for Victoria General to be replaced eventually with a 500-bed hospital on Helmcken Road just north of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The new hospital would have 300 beds initially. Victoria General will continue operations until the new hospital is completed and then will likely be revamped to provide chronic care.

Banks wrote that it is not sensible to move the whole hospital out to Helmcken Road because the people Victoria General serves are overwhelmingly in the downtown and their numbers will increase.

In an advertisement in today's Times, McClelland says a consultant's study recommends moving Victoria General as far west as possible from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

It's taken 10 years of talking and more than $100,000 in consulting fees to reach current planning and it's time for action, the health minister says.

". . . we have got the site. We have settled the immediate number of beds. We have got the capital funds — let's get the hospital built."

McClelland said contrary to what Banks claims, the latest consultant's report does not oppose splitting Victoria General. It has in fact recommended a split, with 350 beds going up on the Helmcken site. McClellan had earlier ruled the new hosptial will have 300 beds to start, about 500 eventually.

Last month the Victoria Medical Society launched a petition campaign urging McClelland not to divide the hospital over two sites.

The society, which has close to 500 doctors as members, argued that such a move would result in expensive duplication of medical services, lowered staff morale and could imperil patient care.

Dr. Norman Bailey, the society's president, said Friday its worst fears are about to be realized and the impossibility of dividing a hospital operation is about to be learned the hard way.

Petition signatures will be assembled early next week for presentation to the health minister, he said. They numbered about 4,000 in a count taken a week ago.

Target: School Bullies

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

An Oak Bay couple whose grade 6 son was kicked unconscious want parents to "come out of the woodwork" and tell school trustees there is widespread concern about school bullies.

John and Carolyn Fraser, 764 Transit, have two children attending Monterey elementary.

Fraser, a teacher in Saanich, said his son was working on the street crossing patrol recently when a bigger Grade 7 boy came up and demanded one of the crossing flags.

"My son gave it to him because he knew he was a bully and was afraid of him."

But the bully kicked him anyway. Fraser's son was kicked so severely in the groin he passed out, falling so his upper body was lying in the street.

He lay there until he regained consciousness, Fraser said.

"Our concern was that he very easily could have been run over," Fraser said.

The older boy is a well-known bully, Fraser said, but there isn't much teachers and the principal can do.

"Their hands are tied," he said.

As a teacher, Fraser said he knows how tough it is for schools to do anything about the problem.

"If you try and expel a student you get so much flak it's just not worth it. You feel as if you put your career on the line."

He said the attitude seems to be to wait it out, and soon the bully will pass on to another school.

"But meanwhile 30 or 40 kids go terrified to school every day," he said.

Monterey principal Leonard Lane confirmed there are some bullies at the school as there are at most.

Fraser said he and his wife will address the school board meeting Feb. 21, and he hopes other concerned parents will make their feelings known to trustees.

"Nothing's going to happen until parents try and change it," Fraser said.

15 Firms Eyeing Royal Oak

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said today about half the land south of Royal Oak just approved for light industry could be occupied by new company operations within a couple of years.

About 15 companies are interested in locating there and he believes some plans are already drawn, he said, but declined to name any of the firms.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen announced Friday the cabinet has allowed removal of 103 acres there from the agricultural land reserve.

The exclusion had been recommended by the B.C. Land Commission, he said. Both Saanich and regional plans had earmarked the area for light industry and warehouse use.

The area in question is flanked by the Northridge subdivision to the west, the Pat Bay Highway to the east, Kay Street to the south and Mann Avenue to the north. There is scattered housing but much of it is open land.

Nielsen said the commission did not dispute the agricultural capability of the land but noted it is already divided into small parcels under separate ownership and is surrounded by residential and light industrial development.

Neighborhood groups who opposed the development appeared uncertain today what moves, if any, are left to them. Laurie Cook, chairman of a concerned citizens' committee, said he believes the decision can be appealed back to the cabinet and that course will be considered.

Mrs. John Clay, president of the Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association, said opponents will remain vocal and have 46 questions they want council's lands, planning and housing committee to answer.

Tardy Cash May Mean Welfare

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Ten persons employed on a Local Initiatives Program project in the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin-Sooke area may be forced to apply for welfare because of a federal government delay in providing promised funds.

Nina Laczewska, co-ordinator of the project, which started Jan. 18, said Thursday that despite written assurances the group would get a grant of $28,250 from the federal job creation branch, it hasn't received a penny.

"It's come to the point where I've had to advise my people to go to human resources and apply for welfare," she said in an interview.

She said she and her co-workers have been getting by on $2,000 she has borrowed from a Colwood bank.

The money's gone and the bank won't extend her credit, she said, because Manpower refuses to guarantee any loan.

The group's plight has become so desperate that she's trying to make some arrangement to borrow money from another LIP project in the area.

"It's a ridiculous situation," she said. "I'm just waiting for the explosion to come when the provincial government finds out it may have to pay welfare because the federal government hasn't come through with a grant."

The project, called ACT — Access to Community Television — is set up to help residents in the western communities take advantage of free use of the local Channel 10 cablevision facilities.

Mrs. Laczewska said she submitted the project to the job creations branch in Victoria last September.

On Dec. 31 she got a letter from local NDP MP Tommy Douglas saying the project had been approved and a grant of $38,250 authorized, allowing her to hire nine persons at between $138 to $140 a week.

But there were problems from the start, she said.

It took her several days to find out when the project was to begin. Finally someone told her — Jan. 10. But by then it was too late to advertise the positions. The result — a delay of one week.

She said she has moved a 40-foot trailer next to the cablevision office on Sooke Road five miles west of Glen Lake. The rent is $200 a month. Stationery had to be bought, phone installed and propane for heating connected. None of the bills has been paid.

She said she has been told she won't get any money until a contract is signed and returned to her.

On Monday she signed the contract. It was then sent to Vancouver. She's still waiting for it to come back.

She said she's also been told it will take at least three weeks after the contract is returned before grant money is deposited in the project's bank account.

'Softer' Bumpers

B.C. Hydro buses will be fitted with new impact-absorbing bumpers, a spokesman said this week.

He said the large, black bumpers, made of rubber and polyurethene fill, are designed to reduce the chance of injury to passengers in the event of an accident.

BACKYARD BLAST PROBED IN OAK BAY

Oak Bay police are investigating an explosion that rattled the windows of homes in the 3000-block Cadboro Bay Road Friday night.

A police spokesman said the blast, reported at 10:30 p.m., came from the back yard of an elderly man who asked his name not be made public.

Police found a 12-inch hole in the yard and some shreds of paper, but were unable to tell what caused the explosion.

"We think it could have been a homemade bomb, possibly the work of kids, but that's just speculation," the spokesman said.

If You're a Non-Skier, V.I. Gives You the Best Deal

max low

So the warm rays from the sun make you cringe, eh?

You dashed out and bought all those goodies in the fall ski sales and you've been studying the skies ever since. Nothing. Zilch. Not a flake.

Dreams of schussing (not too sure what that is but it sounds fun) down the slopes have died, at least for another year. You've tired of clumping around your living room in giant boots and skis, leaving sitzmarks in the carpet instead of in the snow and occasionally poking holes in the chesterfield with your poles. So you've put them all away in the closet.

You're a non-skier. In fact, you're one of the best-equipped non-skiers around!

But at least you can thank your lucky ski boots you're a non-skier on Vancouver Island — instead of a non-skier on the Lower Mainland. Many of you can, anyway.

A hell of a lot of people spent a hell of a lot of money buying season's lift passes for Vancouver's popular Grouse Mountain. Adults' passes, for example, were $175. Youth passes were $120 and family passes $175 for the first person and $140 for each family member after that. So a family which paid for five people has spent over $700 for the privilege of not skiing on Grouse Mountain.

The fact there has been no skiing isn't the operators' fault. It isn't anyone's fault. Except, perhaps, Uller the Snow God who has been a bit lax doing his thing as far as the Pacific Northwest is concerned.

But now all those who forked out a lot for nothing on Grouse have been told that nothing is what they're getting back, too. And there will be nothing knocked off next season's lift passes, either. In the words of Gary Kiefer, general manager of Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd.:

"I don't think we'll refund. You take a certain gamble when you buy a pass . . ."

Well skiers, you might be pleased to know you don't seem to have to take that "certain gamble" here on our Island.

Not one of the three Island resorts have managed to get in a single day's skiing in this crazy balmy winter. But none, of them appear to be balking, either, at the thought of making sure the skiers themselves don't suffer financially.

This was to have been the third winter in operation for Mt. Arrowsmith near Port Alberni. They got very little snow the first two years but this one's been a disaster.

"We sold about 450 season's passes, including a lot for families," manager Tony Kiessling told me. "They cost $95 for adults and for families it's $175 for two adults and $40 for each child under 18.

"The passes themselves are non-refundable, but if there's no snow we would be in the position of taking money for nothing. The directors will have to approve this but I would say the passes will be carried forward to the next season at no extra cost."

I tracked down Forbidden Plateau manager Wolf Clar at Courtenay.

There, without a flake of snow in sight, they are, ironically, celebrating Winter Carnival Week. It ends tonight with the crowning of the Snow Queen at the Snow Ball. And I hope she doesn't melt!

Clar said the directors will make a decision at the end of April. But he felt that if there is no snow for the rest of the winter, the season passes would be carried over to next year.

Green Mountain, near Nanaimo, was the most fortunate of all. They hadn't sold any season's passes!

"We've had access problems and so people come up to see what it's like," explained president Walt Punnet of the Snow Birds Lift Society. "We sell a big percentage of our passes on the hill. But, of course, this year we haven't opened and so we haven't sold any."

If they had sold some then they'd make refunds, said Punnet. They need the goodwill. As Tony Kiessling explained:

"We rely very strongly on the local people and we intend to do everything we can to make it an equitable and fair settlement."

Well, the Grouse Mountain people don't have any qualms.

"When you buy a pass on a golf course and it rains and rains all season you just take it on the chin," said Kiefer. "No, I don't think we'll refund anybody."

Grouse people can be callous. They have such a big population to draw from. They can afford to turn a few thousand off. Our people can't.

Lifting of Ban Lifts Canucks

Defenceman Jack McIlhargey didn't appear in the scoring summary or the penalty list Friday night but his presence was felt in the Vancouver Canucks lineup, perhaps more so because of events earlier in the day.

McIlhargey's solid blueline work helped the Canucks to a 3-2 National Hockey League win over Pittsburgh Penguins, breaking Vancouver's four-game winless streak.

In Friday's only other NHL game, Cleveland Barons blanked Colorado Rockies 3-0.

The Canucks were especially pleased McIlhargey was available because he had been handed a 10-game suspension earlier in the day. NHL president Clarence Campbell issued the suspension for McIlhargey's part in a clash with J.P. Leblanc of Detroit Red Wings in a game last Sunday.

But Campbell lifted the suspension later Friday pending an appeal filed by the Canucks.

Canucks coach Orland Kurtenbach said after Friday's game that McIlhargey, acquired from Philadelphia Flyers in a recent trade, is not a goon. "He's a real good hockey player. I think a good portion of his hockey ability has been overlooked. He has good timing, he passed the puck well, he takes out his man. To do that he must have learned some hockey along the way."

Don Lever, Ron Sedlbauer and Rick Blight, who play on the same line together, each scored a goal in the Vancouver win which pulled the Canucks back into a fourth-place tie with Minnesota in the Smythe Division.

Cleveland, bothered by financial problems recently, is still keeping its unbeaten string going on the ice. The Barons added to the string Friday with their third win to go four games without a loss.

The Barons still have not been paid the payroll due Feb. 1, and all members of the team become free agents next Thursday at midnight if the money is not forthcoming.

Meanwhile, the NHL board of governors is set to meet Monday in Chicago for a special session to deal with the Cleveland problem, with some hope Barons majority owner Mel Swig can come up with a financial restructuring of the team.

The Barons got first period goals from Rick Hampton, Ralph Klassen and Juha Widing, and Gilles Meloche turned in his second shutout of the season to lead the victory over the Rockies.

NINE BIRDS HELP FERGY PICK UP FIRST PRO WIN

OCEANSIDE, Calif. — Cec Ferguson of Victoria captured his first tournament as a professional here Friday and he did it in style.

The British Columbia Open champion fired nine birdies as he equalled the course record of 65 set 11 years ago by Billy Maxwell in a Professional Golfers Association event.

Ferguson's 65 gave him a 54-hole total of 208, eight under par. He had a 75 Wednesday and a 68 Thursday.

The victory over the 6,769-yard El Camino Country Club course in the American Golf Tour tournament was worth $5,000 to Ferguson. it was his biggest pay day as a professional. His best previous result was when he finished fourth in a National Golf Association tournament in Arizona and won $2,800.

He now has played in nine tournaments and earned $13,200.

Ferguson opened his final round with six straight birdies and his only bad hole was the eighth where he put his approach shot in a pond and took a double-bogey six. His longest birdie putt was 30 feet.

He finished four strokes ahead of Gary Vanier of California who also equalled the course record with a 65. Artie McNickle of Sacramento was third with 213. Gary Hamilton of Toronto finished with 225 to earn $129.

Ferguson will compete in a similar tournament in the San Diego area next week.

Vikings Bolster Playoff Chances

The University of Victoria Vikettes are still rolling along undefeated and now it appears the Vikings may be in line for a crack at the men's title in the Canada West University Athletic Association.

The Vikettes Friday night won their 17th straight game without defeat this season with a 70-54 victory over the Calgary Dinnies, at Calgary, while the Vikings moved into second place, two points ahead of UBC Thunderbirds, with a 66-58 victory over the Calgary Dinosaurs.

The Thunderbiirds, who finish out the season here next weekend, were beaten 83-77 by the first-place Alberto Golden Bears at Vancouver.

Vikings and Vikettes play in Calgary again today.

Vikings led early again Calgary, but slumped midway through the game and then came on strongly at the finish.

Scoring was evenly divided for the Vikings, Robbie Parris had 15, Jim Duddridge 12, and Lee Edmondson and Grant Boland each had 11.

The Vikings out-rebounded the Dinosaurs 43-38 with Edmondson grabbing 14 and Chris Hebb, who had nine points, getting 11 rebounds.

Lesliew Godfrey was the scoring star for Vikettes with 26 points while Marge Mainwaring had 16. Shelley Godrey, who fouled out early in the second half, had 10. Ronni Hind also fouled out. Vikettes led 44-27 at the half.

In other games, Lethbridge Pronghorns defeated Saskatchewan Huskies 86-50; Saskatchewan Huskiettes downed Lethbridge Pronghorns 59-46 and Alberta Pandas edged UBC Thunderettes 65-61.

Of Curling Plans Awry And Good Look-Alikes

One week's work and like that:

Curler Bob Hawkes was telling the story of members of an interior rink who, some years ago, decided to save their money and enter the big Prince George cash bonspiel. The day arrived for their departure and off they went amid fond farewells and best wishes, heading not for Prince George, but for Vancouver.

It seems thy had been advised that their entry had arrived too late for the bonspiel and, rather than cancel the whole deal, they arrived at an alternate plan.

However, wives of the curlers, after hearing that their hubbies were planning the Prince George trip, had decided that they, too, would hoard their mad money and surprise their loved ones by showing up at Prince George during the bonspiel.

The secret was well kept. Too well.

When they arrived at Prince George and looked up the bonspiel draw to see how their better halves were doing, the truth was out. Their heroes were elsewhere. So the wives returned home. Dutifully, the happy curling foursome also arrived home, and with curling prizes yet. They had won them in a consolation event and that's why their names hadn't appeared in the official list of bonspiel results, they explained. The gals listened and kept their secret for two whole days. After that, game over, and who knows? Bonspiel anyone?

Bill Good, the venerable (he's only 58) radio man from Vancouver, is more or less semi-retired now, but he still does some free-lancing and will be doing the Brier again this year, as he has for so many years. Matter of fact, he was the official Macdonald Brier rep at Langley the past weekend; and he was telling a story about his two sons, who are both big and big in broadcasting. And to those who don't know them that well, they are look-alikes. John is the youngest and in Toronto, and Bill Jr., the eldest and in Vancouver.

And it seems that when Leo Cahill was involved with the B.C. Lions over the head coaching position, he had an interview with John in Toronto.

The next day he hopped a plane to Vancouver and was met by guess-who? Bill Good Jr., "What the hell are you doing here!" he said to Bill. "I live here," Bill Jr., answered. "The hell you do; I just talked to you in Toronto yesterday," Cahill replied. "That was my brother, John," said Bill. Finally Cahill said he was convinced, although he left that interview shaking his head.

"Come to think of it, when I see my kids' pictures when they were younger, I can't tell 'em apart," said Bill Sr. "So I can understand Cahill's problem."

Okay, all you big tough athletes, you're really softies. Come on, let's face it. You like to be told how good you are. Norm Van Lier of the Chicago Bulls of the NBA tells why he likes the Bulls' new coach. "This is the first time I ever had a coach come up to me and pat me on the back after a game. Maybe you would say grown-ups don't need that, but I feel they do. The game still has a child-like attitude and sometimes you have to act like and be treated like a little kid."

Maybe that's what alderman Ron MacKenzie had in mind the other night when he visited the dressing rooms of the Cougars and Lethbridge Broncos. But now we'll never know.

Horsey fan Al Forrest was on the mainland last week and just happened to drop in at the Cloverdale Raceway. And his report is that it's moderately successful, a pleasure to attend, the facilities are modern in every detail, and maybe the trotters and pacers are a little easier to handicap than the thoroughbreds. Maybe that's one reason why trotting is going so well in the U.S. More fans wagered more money on harness races in the U.S. in 1976 than ever before. And it was this same handicapper who recently brought back a winning program from Santa Anita and the news that every race now is listed on the program in both furlongs and metres. This means that race fans are about to learn metrics in a hurry.

Of course, race fans usually are the first to learn aren't they? — the hard way.

Schoolyard Game

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The biggest schoolyard game of them all will be played Sunday at the Milwaukee Arena, where 24 of the top court artists will gather for the 27th annual National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Julius Erving, George McGinnis and Bob McAdoo will be slam-dunking for the East while David Thompson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will be stuffing them for the West in one of those rare occasions where teamwork goes out the window and the players get a chance to show off their moves.

Hawkes on Top

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS — Bob Hawkes and his Victoria RCMP rink of Steve Holotuk, Wayne Dew and Ralph Svenson will represent B.C. in the annual police curling championships at Victoria Curling Club, March 14-19.

Hawkes captured the B.C. championship here on Friday with a 6-4 victory over Fred Ickringill in the final game.

Ickringill earlier Friday had handed Hawkes his first defeat in the modified double loss elimination event with a 6-5 victory.

The final was a tense affair. Ickringill got a single in the first. Hawkes blanked the second then got a single in the third and stole a pair in the fourth for a 3-1 lead. Ickringill came right back with a single in the fifth and stole one in the sixth.

Hawkes drew against three for one in the seventh. Ickringill tied it in the eighth and ninth for his winning points. Hawkes got a deuce in the ninth for his winning points. He kept the house tidy in the 10th and Ickringill never got to throw last rock.

In the first game, in the "B" semi-final, Ickringill drew to the four-foot ring with his last rock to edge Hawkes.

Ickringill defeated Ace McEacharn 4-3, in an extra-end game in "B" final, drawing for the winning point against two counters in the 12-foot.

McEachran reached the "B" final by eliminating Bill Thomas of Victoria RCMP 7-6.

Hawkes and his rink won the "A" side competition Thursday.

Becker Downs Champ

The defending champion went one down and two rinks from Juan de Fuca pulled surprises in the opening round of the south Island mixed curling playdowns at the Victoria Curling Club Friday night.

Don Matheson of the Racquet Club, who went to both final events in the B.C. championship last year, was a loser to clubmate Len Becker of the Racquet Club 7-4, while Dave Smith and Lyle Gordon of Juan de Fuca scored impressive wins.

Smith defeated John Innes of Victoria Club 5-4, while Gordon took care of George Halkyard of Mill Bay 13-8.

In other games, Pat Marshall of Esquimalt defeated Bill Crothers, also of Esquimalt 9-5, Harvey Thomson of Playland downed Bill Gravelle of Mill Bay 10-3, Jim Fennell of Victoria Club defeated Gary Webster of the Racquet Club 9-8, and Gord Carmichael of Victoria Club had a battle on his hands before topping Dan Joanisse of Esquimalt 8-6.

A three-ender in the third end and a steal of a single point in the eighth end were the keys in Becker's win over Matheson.

The 18-rink tournament continues today and Sunday with four rinks to qualify for the Island final at Courtenay next weekend. Tonight's draw is at 8 p.m.

Whitworth Leads

MIAMI (AP) — All-time leading money winner Kathy Whitworth shot a four-under-par 68 Friday to grab the first-round lead in a $50,000 tournament that opens the Ladies Professional Golf Association's 1977 tour.

Five golfers stood two shots back at 70 on the 6250-yard Kendale Lakes Country Club course — defending champion Judy Rankin, Susan Downer, Jan Stephenson, Debbie Austin, and Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont.

At one-under 71 were Jane Blalock, Kathy McMullen, Mary Mills, Sandra Palmer and Roberta Albers Speer.

Whitworth, second in lifetime tour victories with 77 but never a winner in this nine-year-old event, began her round with a par and four birdies. She added two more birdies and had two bogeys the rest of the way.

The Richardson, Tex., resident, who has won $636,818 since joining the LPGA tour in 1959, said she had trouble at times with her drives. Her driving problem took her to Austin, Tex., teaching pro Harvey Penick two weeks ago.

Dale Shaw of Victoria, making her first start as a professional, shot 42-39 — 81, the same as Jocelyne Bourassa of Montreal.

Americans Win

CANBERRA, Australia (Reuter) — The United States made a clean sweep of the world archery championships which ended today.

Richard McKinney finished with a total of 2,501 points to win the men's title while fellow American Luann Ryon became the women's champion with 2,515 points.

The U.S. also won the men's and women's team events in the four-day championships, the men finishing with 7,444 points and the women with 7,379.

Hawks Making Charge At Second-Place Cats

Portland Winter Hawks are taking another charge at second place in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

They climbed into a tie for third place with Kamloops Friday night with an unexpectedly-easy, 5-1 triumph over the Chiefs at Kamloops.

More threatening, from a Victoria angle, is the fact that the Hawks also climbed within one point of the runner-up Cougars, with a game against the Cats tonight (8:30) at Memorial Arena.

Pat Mulvey and Tony Currie each scored two goals for the Winter Hawks and Brent Peterson had the other.

With the teams tied 1-1 after the first period, Currie put the Winter Hawks ahead for the second time at four minutes into the second period. Then the Hawks broke the game wide open with goals by Mulvey and Peterson just 49 seconds apart. Currie got his second goal in the third period. Mike Boychuk scored for Kamloops.

For the Cougars, tonight's game is in the "must" category since next week they embark on a six-games-in-seven-nights schedule.

They open in Medicine Hat, Sunday; play at Calgary, Tuesday; at Lethbridge, Wednesday; at Calgary, Thursday; at Lethbridge, Friday, and return home against Saskatoon, Saturday.

The Cougars are 3-0-1 against the Winter Hawks at home this season.

In other games, Lethbridge Broncos won their first game in the last 13 with a 3-0 victory over Medicine Hat at Lethbridge and Winnipeg Monarchs remained two points ahead of the Broncos in second place in the Central Division with a 4-1 victory over Regina Pats at Regina.

MEDICINE HAT (0), LETHBRIDGE (3) — Jeff Elkow, Steve Tambellini, Rocky Saganuik. Attendance: 3043.

WINNIPEG (4) — Guy Lash, Dave Morrison, Jim Malazdrewicz, Kelly Durnin. REGINA (1) — Mike Flegel. Attendance: 4000.

PORTLAND (5) — Paul Mulvey 2, Tony Currie 2, Brent Peterson. KAMLOOPS (1) — Mike Boychuk. Attendance: 2252.

Rik and Bruce Like Positions

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Rik Massengale is leading the $200,000 Bob Hope-Desert golf tournament and he loves it.

Bruce Lietzke is just a little bit back and he likes that, too.

"The two tournaments I've won, both at Tallahassee and Hartford, I've led all the way," said Massengale, leader all the way in this tournament and owner of a four-stroke advantage at the end of Friday's third round.

Chasing him is the game's hottest player, Lietzke, 25, who has a string of 24 consecutive rounds at par or better and already has won twice this season.

"When you're in front, you're the guy everybody is shooting at," he said. "It puts added pressure on you. You might tend to change your tactics, instead of playing aggressively, you might start trying to protect.

"There's plenty of time yet, two rounds left. I think I'd rather go into the last round maybe one shot behind and try to put the pressure on the other guy."

Bowlers Of the Week

Pin-busters operating on lanes north of the Malahat were sizzling during 16th week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest and grabbed most of laurels in that week of 14th annual competition. Both fivepin winners — Nora Aitken and Ray Frehlick — posted division-leading scores at Chemainus Bowlarena and John Born hit the top in the men's tenpin section with a 193-206-244—643 series rolled at Duncan Lanes. Nora earned weekly award in women's five-pin division with 239-334-248—821 triple and Ray bounced pins for 887 series on games of 304, 308 and 275. All weekly winners receive crests and qualify for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Griffin Fifth Behind Boit

TORONTO (CP) — Danny Smith of the Bahamas, a graduate of University of Florida, upset crowd-favorite Willie Davenport of Baton Rouge, La., in the men's 50-yard hurdles event Friday at the Toronto Star-Maple Leaf Indoor Games.

Smith, the defending champion in the event, finished in a time of 5.9 seconds to edge Davenport, who also finished at 5.9.

Davenport, the 33-year-old, four-time Olympian and bronze medalist at last summer's Olympics at Montreal, was making his 14th consecutive appearance at the annual meet. He was given a rousing ovation by the capacity crowd of 16,183 prior to the race.

Thomas Munkelt of East Germany was third, also in 5.9. Thomas Hill of Arkansas State University, who along with Davenport and Smith share the Canadian and world record of 5.8, was fourth in 6.0.

Deby LaPlante of Belleville, Mich., won the women's 50-yard hurdles with a time of 6.5 seconds, edging Jane Fredericks of Los Angeles at the tape.

Mike Boit of Kenya, a member of the Pacific Coast Club, won the men's 1000 yards in a time of two minutes, 8.5 seconds. Boit, who did not compete at Montreal because of the African countries' boycott, finished eight-tenths of a second ahead of Byron Dyce of Jamaica, a member of the Florida Track Club.

Keith Francis of Boston was third in 2:10.3, followed by James Brewster of Washington State University in 2:12.2 Tom Griffin of Victoria was fifth in 2:14.00.

Rosalyn Bryant of Los Angeles, who last week set a world record of 1:11.8 for 500 metres at the Los Angeles Times meet, won the 400 metres in a time of 53.9 seconds.

Irena Szewinska of Poland, who has represented her country at four consecutive Olympics and set a world record at 400 metres while winning the event at Montreal, was second in 54.5.

Steve Riddick of Philadelphia, a member of the United States' gold medal-winning 4x100 relay at Montreal, won the men's 50-yard dash in a time of 5.2 seconds.

Donald Merrick of Florida State University was second, also at 5.2 seconds, followed by Don Quarrie of Jamaica.

Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland, a student at Villenova University, won his 17th consecutive mile race with a 30-yard win over Rod Dixon of New Zealand.

Coghlan finished in 4:03.8, followed by Dixon, of New Zealand, in 4:06.4 Paul Cummings of New York was third and Marty Liquori of the Florida Track Club finished fourth.

Rosemarie Ackermann of East Germany, the current world record-holder, won the women's high jump with a height of 1.90 metres (six feet, three inches), which ties her Canadian open record

Debbie Brill of Haney was second with a leap of 1.86 metres (6—1¼).

Playoffs Start Sunday

Playoff time has arrived for clubs in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Esquimalt Legion and Fuller Lake Flyers, second and third in league standings, will get the first taste of playoff action. They will clash Sunday at 8 p.m. in Esquimalt Sports Centre in the opening game of a best-of-five, semi-final series.

The clubs will continue hostilities Wednesday at Fuller Lake.

Front-running Saanich Braves and fourth-place Juan de Fuca Gulls jump into the playoff swim Tuesday. They are scheduled to tangle in a 7:15 p.m. game at Pearkes Arena in the opener of their best-of-five semi-final and met again Thursday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Teams that are lower on the league ladder will engage in another playoff for the President's Cup. Semi-finals in that playoff will be best-of-three affairs, starting Wednesday.

Victoria Red Wings open against Lake Cowichan Truckers in a 9:15 p.m. game at Memorial Arena before Oak Bay and Kerry Park Islanders tangle Thursday in an 8 p.m. argument at Oak Bay.

Two upsets marked league play Friday night. Esquimalt snapped a 20-game Saanich victory streak by bouncing the Braves 8-6 at Pearkes Arena and Bairds' Trucking tripped the Flyers 4-3 at Lake Cowichan.

Kalyn, Barbon Lead Dockers

Esquimalt Dockers are certain of at least a tie for second place in the "B" section of the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

The Dockers Friday night edged Parkland Panthers, 67-62, at Parkland to move six points ahead of third place Mount Douglas Rams.

Barry Kalyn scored 22 points and Mike Barbon 15 to lead the Dockers' attack. Quinn Groenhyde had 24 points for Parkland. Esquimalt led 37-27 at the half.

Parkland's girls team defeated Esquimalt 65-35 as Linda Rebitt hit for 22 points and Stasia Gallaher had 20. For Esquimalt, Robin Bartlett had 14.

In exhibition games, Oak Bay Bays advanced to the semi-final of the Kelowna tournament with a 91-83 victory over Point Grey Greyhounds, and Victoria High split a pair of games with visiting Kamloops.

Craig Higgins scored 38 points for the Bays. Doug Kelsey had 31 for Point Grey.

The Bays will meet either Kelowna or North Delta in one semi-final today. Rutland meets Penticton in the other.

The Vic High Tigers defeated Kamloops 59-49 , in girls' action at Vic High, but the Totems could handle the boys, Kamloops winning 71-63.

At Belmont, John Franks scored 15 points as Belmont defeated Colquitz 67-35 in the opening round of the Victoria City Police Tournament.

In other tournament games, Lansdowne whipped Parkland 67-47 as Russ Moser scored 29 points and Darren Alexander 22; Arbutus defeated Central 67-39, and Russ Thornton hit for 27 points as Cedar Hill trampled Oak Bay 55-34.

Tournament final is scheduled tonight at 8 p.m.

In North Island high school action, Cowichan Thunderbirds trimmed Max Cameron Tartans of Powell River 66-41, at Powell River.

Murcer Traded For Bat Champ

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Madlock, two-time National League batting champion, was traded Friday by Chicago Cubs to San Francisco Giants in a five-player deal in which the Cubs received outfielder Bobby Murcer.

In addition to Madlock, who wanted a multi-year contract involving an annual salary of some $200,000, the Cubs sent utility infielder Rob Sperring to the Giants.

Also acquired by the Cubs were infielder Steve Ontiveros and right-handed pitcher Andy Muhlstock.

Like Madlock, Murcer is not currently under contract.

Spartans Top Mountainmen

Claremont Spartans moved into a tie with Mount Doug for fourth place in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League Friday with a 19-0 victory over the Mountainmen.

Rob Baart scored two tries and Guy Prevost one. Kim Munro kicked a penalty goal and had two converts.

A Quiet Payment for Avis

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet has quietly authorized payment of $1b3,000 to Avis Transport of Canada Ltd.

The payment, recommended to cabinet by Transport Minister Otto Lang and Treasury Board President Bob Andras, is intended to be "full and final settlement of damage suffered" by U.S.-owned Avis as a result of the federal government's decision to change the awarding of prime airport concession locations for car rental firms at nine international airports across Canada.

The money will be paid Avis only when the company provides Ottawa with a document releasing the federal government from "any attendant claims" relating to Ottawa's "repudiation of certain consequential terms of a car rental concession contract" covering the nine airports.

Avis was forced out of its originally-awarded prime space in the major Canadian airports after Canadian-owned Tilden Canada Ltd. complained that it had made the third-highest bid in the major car rental firm category, not the fifth-best bid behind Avis, as the Transport Department decided.

The down-grading of Tilden's priority in choosing the location of car rental concession occurred because Tilden had also put in a lower bid in a different category, intended for smaller domestic car rental firms.

The Transport Department picked the lower of the two, even though Tilden claimed the higher bid should have been used.

The Tilden company fought to retain its previous concession locations and eventually threatened to sue the government over the way the awards were made.

The government, despite Transport Minister Lang's initial insistence that everything had been done correctly from the beginning, accommodated Tilden on the condition the legal suit was dropped.

Avis then lost its prime car rental counter space.

Avis was dropped down one notch in pecking order among the majors, to accommodate Tilden.

Mounties Boosted In Wake Of Strike

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — The western Labrador centre's RCMP contingent was reinforced Friday as a provincial inquiry was ordered into a wildcat strike by 400 workers against the Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd.

The men, members of Local 5795 of the United Steelworkers of America, walked out at midnight Wednesday in a dispute over on-site safety.

RCMP Supt. William Halhe said 17 additional officers were flown into Labrador City to augment the centre's regular 16-man police force.

On Thursday night, fire destroyed a metal-and-plywood security building near the entrance to the IOCC plant while about 200 pickets paraded nearby. Three security officers escaped unhurt and police patrolled the area through the night.

The company obtained an injunction Thursday ordering the men back to their jobs but the steelworkers remained off the job Friday.

The walkout ostensibly began over the dismisal of one of the workers. But a union leader said Friday the key issues re health and safety at the work site.

Justice Minister T. Alex Hickman promised Thursday a public inquiry into the deaths of three men in industrial mishaps at the IOCC workings during the last nine weeks.

Banker 'Blackmail'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Bankers Association is using "blackmail" on the Commons by threatening to reduce interest payments on savings if they are required to make the payments more often than the present twice a year, Stanley Knowles (NDP —Winnipeg North Centre) charged Friday. The threat by the association "represents obvious collusion" among the chartered banks in the country, he told the Commons.

An investigation under the Combines Investigation Act should be called, he said. But the Knowles motion, urging Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott to order such an investigation, did not get the required unanimous consent from MPs.

The association, which represents all the chartered banks, told a Commons committee Thursday that interest payments would be reduced if certain sections of government-proposed consumer protection legislation are passed.

The bankers objected to a section of the bill that would permit interest to be credited to accounts at least monthly instead of twice a year as most banks now do.

And they objected to suggestions that interest payments be based on a daily balance rather than the minimum six-monthly balance in an account.

Broadbent Woos Que.

OTTAWA (CP) — NDP Leader Ed Broadbent is determined to show Quebec voters in five forthcoming byelections that an anglophone from Oshawa, Ont., can discuss their problems "en francais."

While Broadbent's French may win no awards, he has submitted to some backroom coaching in order to improve his linguistic abilities in a drive to overcome the credibility gap his party suffers in Quebec.

Indicative of Broadbent's attitude, he addressed the House of Commons in French on Friday. He unsuccessfully had asked MPs to express unanimous disagreement with an anti-inflation board decision over-ruling a labor contract between Quebec flour mills and their employees.

And he has hired Quebec journalist Yvan Poulin as an aide.

Broadbent, like the leaders of other political parties, will be making regular visits to Quebec during the next few months as the race accelerates to win the five vacant seats.

Three-Year Quota For Textiles Set

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Jean Chretien announced Friday the imposition of a three-year import quota on double-knit fabrics effective April 8, the date of the expiry of the present quota.

In documents tabled in the Commons, Chretien said the quota in the first year will be 8.5 million pounds which will be distributed among importers semi-annually based on their historical import performance.

The previous quota, imposed as an interim measure after a preliminary investigation last August, called for an annual limit of 9.15 million pounds of fabric annually.

Imports throughout 1976 amounted to about 8.3 million pounds—estimated from a 10-month tally of 6.9 million pounds. Imports in 1975 were 6.9 million pounds.

The minister said reports from the government textile and clothing board showed a deterioration in domestic markets caused by high levels of low-price imports.

"The board also found that the situation was complicated by a decrease in Canada's market demand resulting from certain style trends away from double-knit fabrics," said the reports.

The board also reported that nylon fabrics from Japan, Korea and Taiwan and filament polyester fabrics from Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong were being imported at low prices and amounts as to threaten serious injury to domestic producers.

Imports of nylon fabrics from Poland had also increased substantially and would likely reach disruptive proportions if permitted in unrestrained.

Chretien said the government would:

—Expand import surveillance by adding nylon fabrics originating in Hong Kong and China to the import control list:

—Initiate consultations with Japan and Taiwan to renew restraint arrangements, and with Korea and Poland to establish restraint arrangements, on export of nylon fabrics to Canada for a three-year period;

—Expand import surveillance by adding filament polyester fabrics originating in Spain, Singapore and the Philippines to the import control list;

LIBERAL REJECTS FREE-BILL BID

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberals rejected a motion in the Commons today to let former Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker have extra free copies of the Canadian Bill of Rights that he sends to schools, courtrooms and other institutions.

Liberal MP Maurice Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi) shouted "No" when the motion was proposed by Conservative House Leader Walter Baker. As a result, it could not come to a vote by all MPs in the Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker, father of the bill of rights proclaimed under his government July 1, 1960, has been refused extra free copies of the bill by Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Since 1960, governments have been giving him about 250 free copies a year of 18-by-24-inch prints of the bill. When he put in a request for extra copies last November, the department sent him a bill for $210.75.

Mr. Baker said the free bill of rights prints should be granted in light of State Secretary John Roberts' decision to increase the number of free Canadian flags MPs are allowed to give away to citizens and institutions.

The historical importance of Canadian history and tradition was being recognized, he said, by giving MPs 50 large flags, 200 small flags and 500 lapel pins.

The bill of rights had the same importance.

File-Opening Termed Farce

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed legislation to give Canadians access to government files on themselves was denounced in the Commons Friday as a farce.

Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto-Greenwood) said the so-called personal privacy section of the bill is so "full of exemptions and exceptions that they render those provisions . . . worse than a worthless piece of paper."

"We regard that part of the bill as being a farce," Mr. Brewin told Justice Minister Ron Basford, who opened debate on the proposed human rights legislation.

Gordon Fairweather (PC — Fundy Royal) said the government also could expect the Conservatives to propose a substantial number of amendments to the privacy section of the bill when it goes to committee for clause-by-clause study.

However, both parties generally praised the major thrust of the bill, aimed at preventing discrimination.

It would estalbish an anti-discrimination code and a human rights commission with power to investigate complaints of discrimination and to impose penalties on guilty individuals, companies or institutions under federal jurisdiction.

One section of the five-part bill would give people the right to see government files on themselves, ask for corrections where errors exist and find out what the information had been used for.

Brewin said grounds the government can use to refuse opening files to individuals amount to "a blanket of secrecy."

The bill would allow a cabinet minister to suppress all or part of a file if it contained a Privy Council confidence, information about another person or facts that might help impede the functioning of a court or quasi-judicial board, among other things.

In addition, a file could be withheld if it contains legal opinions or advice to the government.

Earlier, Basford defended the privacy provisions as "more effective protection against administrative misuse of personal information in government files than that now enjoyed by citizens of the United States."

As in the U.S., a federal index of personal information banks would be set up by the government and all its agencies.

Bogus Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A private member's bill to outlaw the production and sale of counterfeit replicas of out-of-circulation coins was given approval in principle by the Commons Friday. The bill now goes to the Commons justice committee for study.

45% of Products Fail To Meet Gov't Standard

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Products sent by manufacturers to federal government laboratories have failure rates as high as 45 per cent, when tested against government standards and specifications.

The high failure levels were reported to Ottawa sociologist Henry Green when he conducted a study on consumer access to information for the department of consumer and corporate affairs in the summer of 1976.

His report, published in October, has not been released for general public use.

Green, who is now in Europe, said the failure rate covered products ranging from food and clothing to ships, motor vehicles and aircraft.

The high failure level "may be partly explained," he said "by the fact that some manufacturers use the government laboratories as a testing base, free of charge, without staff or budgetary requirements for product development, to discover from the government the necessary changes required to tender the product."

Federal laboratories involved in the testing surveyed by Green are those operated by department of supply and services, department of public works, department of national defence and the department of national health and welfare.

Even though the manufacturers pay no fee for federal testing, the test results belong to them, not the taxpayer.

According to Green, public works and national defence are the departments doing most of the testing on qualifying products to federal standards.

The testing routine usually involves a demonstration of the product by the manufacturer, testing by federal technicians and, following the initial tests, further periodic examinations.

Green said that all this product information is considered confidential and cannot be obtained by the general public from government sources.

Public Inquiry on Food Prices Demanded by BCGEU Leaders

The executive of the B.C. Government Employees Union urged the provincial government Friday to hold a public inquiry into food prices and the food industry in the province.

The proposal followed the release of Statistics Canada figures showing that the consumer price index jumped nine-tenths of one per cent last month,

The index for food showed a jump of 1.2 per cent for January on a national basis.

A resolution, passed at a BCGEU executive meeting in Victoria, also called on the Canadian Labor Congress to demand a similar investigation at the national level.

The B.C. Federation of Labor will also be called upon to support the need for an inquiry into the food industry and the 33,000-member union will carry out a food price survey of its own,

The survey will attempt to establish the relationship between food prices in each of the province's 12 main centres.

In discussing the resolution, executive members noted that workers paid higher food prices in B.C. than any other place in North America.

Members also pointed out that grocery prices in Washington State are considerably lower than in B.C.

"The continuing escalation of the cost of the necessities of life again demonstrates the total ineffectiveness of the federal Anti-Inflation Board to control anything but workers' wages," said John Fryer, BCGEU general secretary.

UNIONS HALT QUEBEC FLOUR

SASKATOON (CP) — Flour mills in Western Canada could supply flour needed in Quebec but union pressure has halted shipments, Ken Fulcher of CSP Foods Ltd. said today.

Fulcher, location manager for the firm's flour mill here, said the Quebec flour shortage generated by a strike of workers at four Montreal mills could be alleviated by shipments from western mills but such shipments are being stopped by union activity at the Quebec boundary.

"We've had reports of flour shipments from Ontario being stopped, gasoline poured over them and set alight," he said in an interview.

Fulcher said Western Mills now are "hard pressed" to fill a federal government order for flour aid to be shipped from Vancouver by March, but there is enough capacity to ship supplies to Quebec.

He said his employees, members of the Food and Allied Workers Union, had been approached by the Quebec Confederation of National Trades Unions (CNTU), which represents the 450 workers striking at the four Montreal mills, not to load shipments to Quebec.

"They replied they would comply to the extent of not shipping to other than our regular customers," Fulcher said.

A MESSAGE FROM THE MINISTER OF HEALTH

About the New Victoria Hospital

It's taken over 10 years of talking and more than $100,000 in consulting fees to arrive at the decision to build a 300-bed hospital on the Helmcken Road site. I think we owe it to the residents of Southern Vancouver Island to get on with the job.

Some critics have said the government is building "a minor facility in the boondocks." This is not true. This will be a major hospital, with future accommodation of up to 500 beds, located on a choice 34-acre site, only minutes from downtown Victoria.

The consultants for the new hospital will be instructed to design the main services to the site to ultimately serve a 500-bed hospital. The reason we can't do this right away is due to the constraints of capital funds available to the province. Capital projects in this Regional Hospital District have been allocated $58 million over the next five-year period. This is a large sum relative to money allocated to other areas and shows that we appreciate the need to catch up. But to completely transfer the Victoria General Hospital to the Helmcken Road site at this time would require an additional $20 million of capital funds which we do not have available unless we reduce capital programs elsewhere in the province.

If we agreed to immediate construction of a 500-bed hospital on Helmcken Road this would boost the community's share of the cost by $8 million. I leave it to the local taxpayers to calculate the effect on their mill rate.

I want to emphasize that the Victoria General Hospital will continue to operate fully with its existing services until the new hospital is completed. There will be no reduction in services at the Victoria General Hospital until that time.

As for the Victoria Medical Society's campaign against the new hospital, report after report favors the decision for a new major hospital to service Victoria District. No matter what the final decision is, there will be critics who disapprove. We just can't waffle any longer on an issue as vital as a new hospital.

Numerous committees, at both local and regional levels, have been involved in the decision-making process. I fully recognize the countless hours and the tremendous contribution made by the medical community who have had a representative on each and every committee. But now it is inconceivable to me that after all the reports, and all the discussions, over the past 10 years, we are going to involve a question dealing with people's lives in further controversy. With full co-operation from the Capital Regional Hospital District, we have got the site. We have settled the immediate number of beds. We have got the capital funds — let's get the hospital built.

In arriving at our decision, we have relied on reports by Agnew Peckham Associates, a highly regarded firm in the field of hospital planning.

A report made in March 1969 said that the complexities of trying to provide a satisfactory master plan on the existing hospital site (the present Victoria General) with uncertainties about available land and highway routes, led the consultants to the conclusion that an alternative plan should be developed. At that time there was prolonged discussion between the city, region, and province regarding roads in the surrounding area. As this matter was never satisfactorily resolved, the road issue became a further handicap to the planning for Victoria General.

The report went on to say that the balance of beds between the existing hospital and facilities that might be retained on the present site should be replaced in new construction elsewhere. "The site chosen for the new hospital, should be . . . a minimum of 20 acres and 30 acres is recommended," added the report.

"We have no doubt about the quality to operate an efficient, economical, and high quality hospital in two locations at least for a number of years," the report said.

Another study by Agnew Peckham Associates in March, 1975, considered several options to provide active treatment facilities in the area. This report concluded that Victoria General Hospital should be moved and that it should be as far west as possible from the Royal Jubilee Hospital. The report said: "The disadvantage to this solution would be to separate the Victoria General Hospital from its "downtown" image in terms of a major size. It would still be a community hospital for the approximately 50,000 people living in that area . . . The role could continue to be developed."

The report concluded that the new hospital should be constructed elsewhere as soon as possible and that "the total hospital" would emerge on the new site before many years had elapsed.

The Capital Regional Hospital District concurred generally with this role study, as they did also with the subsequent Master Program of July, 1975, by Agnew Peckham Associates. This Master Program considered Victoria General Hospital in the context of a split operation, saying the Southern Division of the hospital should "act as any general hospital of 200 to 250 beds." It emphasized that the life of this southern hospital, particularly for in-patient care, must be limited to 10 to 15 years.

I think our decision to relocate the hospital is well supported. This brings us to the other issue — dividing the hospital on two sites.

The Medical Staff of Victoria General Hospitals have said publicly that they are prepared to leave the choice of location to others provided the whole of Victoria General Hospital is located there as one unit. I understand that they say they know of possibly only one other instance in which the facilities of a major hospital are divided. I don't think this is accurate, and our consultants back this up in their report of March, 1969.

There are numerous illustrations in Canada of University Hospitals which have separate buildings. Admittedly, the separation is not as distant as now contemplated but with good planning this should not be a significant factor.

A good example of the division in the U.S.A. of hospital care under separate arrangements is the Kaiser System. The fundamental ingredient here is the use of satellite hospitals referring to the parent hospital. Perhaps another example is the Fairview Hospitals in Minneapolis and Edina, Minnesota, where two physically separated hospitals are operated by the same board. Many of the services and departments of the two hospitals enjoy shared facilities and joint programs of operation.

In any case, there should be no doubt in anybody's mind that eventually the new hospital will have 500 beds and will be the major facility. At the same time, we are not slamming the door on health services for people in the downtown area. We are asking the planners to look at several long-term options. Among these are long-term care and ambulatory care.

Dairies 'Milk' Victoria

Victoria milk drinkers must have the richest taste in urban dairyland at current prices per quart or litre.

Local milk prices are higher than in Vancouver, cited Thursday as the city with the national record for milking milk drinkers.

Two Simon Fraser University professors in a report on the B.C. milk marketing board used November milk prices in Vancouver as a basis for comparison in urban Canada and the Pacific U.S. coast.

They made no mention of Victoria where most food originating on the mainland costs more.

Today's Vancouver prices are even higher than three months ago, and prices here are higher still.

A survey of independent stores here reveals the price of a quart of homogenized milk varies from 60 to 63 cents, and as high as 66 cents at a leading chain market.

Litres of homo milk—measuring five ounces less than a quart—are now more common than quarts and go for 58 to 63 cents.

In Vancouver prices were quoted Friday in litres only, ranging from 58 cents at a chain store to 61 cents at a private market. Two other private markets priced the litre at 60 cents.

Two per cent milk was two cents cheaper at the supermarket, one cent less at the private outlets.

Recently, suppliers have brought in bulk milk packaging at the retail level, offering two-litre sizes of 2 per cent milk for $1.08 in Vancouver, which works out to 54 cents a litre, and four-litre sizes for $2.07, or 52 cents a litre, the cheapest price encountered for liquid milk.

Similar packages at a private market in Vancouver were marked at $2.13 for 2 per cent and $2.19 for homo.

Benno Wants To Know

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative backbencher Benno Friesen said Thursday he wants to know why Canadians have to pay more for food products than Americans pay — especially for products made in Canada.

The Canadian Press reported erroneously Tuesday that Mr. Friesen, MP for Surrey-Whiterock where his constituents have been among British Columbians shopping across the nearby border, had called for government action to stop such buying.

In fact, Friesen in his Tuesday comments had said: "All they are trying to do is keep body and soul together."

He used as one example a brand of cookies made by a firm with head office in Kitchener, Ont., that he said sells in his B.C. riding for $1.09 a bag compared with 89 cents a bag in nearby Washington state stores.

Some might think that Canadians are disloyal for shopping in the U.S. when in fact the real question is why Canadian prices are so much higher, Friesen said.

MARCH 19 VOTE ON SOOKE PARKS

Residents of the Sooke electoral district will vote March 19 on whether they favor a half-mill levy to buy property for parks and public buildings.

All residents living between Sooke and Port Renfrew who are on the voters list can vote.

Capital Region Board director Charles Perkins said Sooke doesn't own any property which can be used in the future for recreation.

"We have been offered several parcels of land but have no money to buy them," he said.

As the population increases, the lack of publicly-owned property will result in serious problems, he said.

He said an affirmative vote would authorize the Capital Regional District to borrow up to $160,000 for purchases, provided repayments did not exceed the revenue a half-mill levy.

Six polling stations have been designated for the vote — Saseenos school, Sooke elementary school, Shirley hall, Jordan River elementary school, Port Renfrew School, and East Sooke Road home of Mrs. J. R. Horgan.

An advance poll will be held March 16 in the Sooke Hall.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Banks were criticized Friday in Victoria provincial court for making it too easy for people to obtain blank cheques.

Lawyer Ted Hanman addressed his remarks to Judge William Ostler before the sentencing of 22-year-old Delores Isobel Granfield, of 345 Old Island Highway, who pleaded guilty Jan. 12 to 30 counts of false pretences and one charge of possession of $530 worth of stolen leather coats from Woodwards.

Hanman said that for a $3 deposit, banks will give people a book of cheques so that they can "lay the paper," meaning pass worthless cheques.

He likened the practice to people leaving their car keys in the vehicle.

Hanman urged the judge to treat the 30 counts of passing worthless cheques as "one big series" and said his client was committed to getting back a child who was adopted out. Hanman also asked the judge to consider the fact that Miss Granfield had been in jail since Jan. 10 awaiting disposition of the case.

Ostler complimented Hanman on his presentation on behalf of his client but said the woman's course of conduct was "wicked and irresponsible." The judge also said that the fact she committed the offences while out on bail awaiting trial on another charge showed contempt of the court process.

He handed Miss Granfield a suspended sentence, placed her on two years' probation and set out five other conditions. She was not to be in the company of people with a criminal history or use drugs or narcotics of any sort and she must seek psychiatric counselling, perform 200 hours of community service work and pay restitution for the 30 cheques.

Richard Byron Barker, 17, of 722 Russell Street, changed his plea to guilty on a Jan. 13 charge of possession of a stolen car and pleaded guilty to the lesser-included offence of dangerous driving.

Court was told Barker and two other youths were spotted northbound on Eastdowne by Oak Bay police at about 2:45 a.m. and a high-speed chase which reached speeds of more than 75 miles an hour ensued. The stolen vehicle containing the three youths finally hit a utility pole at Richmond and Quamichan after running a red light at Fort and Richmond. All three suffered injuries in the accident.

Richard Amos, one of the passengers in the car Barker was driving, was sentenced to six months in jail Jan. 18 while the other passenger, a juvenile, has also gone through juvenile court, Mulligan said.

Barker was remanded until Tuesday for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Four young men pleaded not guilty to loitering and prowling at night at Government House last Monday and had March 7 set as the trial date.

Stephen Clark Lott, 20, of 1526 Vining, Jay Richards Dancey, 19, of 2750 Belmont Avenue, Richard Michael Scott, 18, of 4160 Borden, and Neil Walmsley, 20, of 350 Berwick, all pleaded not guilty.

A 20-year-old Winnipeg man pleaded guilty to one charge of attempted break-in and one of breaking and entering and was remanded until Wednesday for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Guy Philip Legasse had two other counts of breaking and entering stayed by Mulligan.

Frederick James Leppanen, 19, of Winnipeg and Vancouver, pleaded guilty Thursday to six counts of break-ins in connection with the same incidents and is due to be sentenced the same day.

They were caught during a Feb. 4 break-in at Carpet Trend Enterprises, 185 Langford Street.

A 17-year-old who was charged with nine counts of auto theft and one of possession of stolen property was remanded one week for election of trial method.

Stanley Kip Perron, of 1120 McClure, requested through lawyer Lenore Boyes an examination by a prison psychiatrist.

The first of the nine auto theft charges allegedly took place in November of last year while the remainder are February charges.

Three men facing charges of armed robbery, possession of a shotgun dangerous to the public peace and other separate charges chose trial by judge and jury.

Drivers fined for having blood-alcohol readings over .08 were: Bernard Lawton, 67, of 9702 First Street, Sidney, $500; Randolph Braidwood, 29, of East Sooke Road, $450; Michael Joseph Roach, 430, of 1656 Cedar Avenue, $4300; and Gurdial Ram Chumber, 26, of 1672 Derby Road, $350.

Other drivers fined for drinking-driving offences were: Daniel Joseph Flasha, 26, of New Westminster and Sidney, $500; Harry Alexander Ormiston, 46, of 952 Mount Newton Cross Road, $500; David Walter Kapetz, 22, of 1350 Stanley, $500; Michael Joseph Bond, 22, of 3220 Quadra, $500; Earl Marson, 21, of 1760 Adanac, $500; and Craig Wallace McKee, 19, of Burnaby, $50. In addition, McKee was ordered to perform 80 hours of community service work.

Crew Blows Whistle On Pirates

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pirates brandishing guns and knives boarded an American freighter off Colombia last month, but when crew members blew the whistle, they panicked and escaped with only a watch and a cigarette lighter.

A report written by third mate Coy Deaton says the S.S. Mason Lykes reached the harbor of Buenaventura, Colombia, at midnight Jan. 27.

Soon afterward, 15 men armed with guns and knives came alongside in two 20-foot motorboats and boarded the anchored ship.

The only gun aboard the ship was locked in a safe in the captain's cabin and the only defence the crew on duty could muster was to blow repeated blasts on the whistle.

Deaton wrote that "the sound of the whistle made them more and more nervous," and the pirates abandoned the ship.

Captain H.G. Guice said it was the first time a Lykes Bros. ship had been boarded by armed bandits in the area, "although our ships are always on the alert for it."

A spokesman for the firm, which operates 42 ships, said crews on the Far East route have reported trouble with thieves sneaking aboard to pilfer, and ships serving Colombian ports are frequently boarded by stowaways who hide beneath sacks of coffee beans.

Conspiracy Charge Thrown Out

A conspiracy charge against three men was thrown out in county court.

Judge Peter Millward granted a no-evidence motion after defence objections to wiretap evidence from the Crown were upheld.

Michael James Adam Ballantyne, 23, of 3215 Island View, Kenneth Joseph Witzaney, 26, of 2807 Sooke Lake, and Patrick Joseph McLoughlin, 28, of Shawnigan Lake, were accused of conspiring between Aug. 30 and Oct. 9, 1975, in B.C. and Alberta, to traffic in hashish.

The trial was in its eighth day.

$126,000 Award

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Fisher, 62, of Kelowna, was awarded $126,000 in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday. Fisher had sued the driver of a car which struck him in a 1975 accident in which Fisher lost both legs.

It's Germany in Australia, mates

By PHILIP SOUSA

TANUNDA, Australia — The sign at the edge of town gave me the first clue.

Die Wein Strasse.

Four of this small Barossa Valley town's nine wineries are on Wine Street, the others within a three-mile radius.

The names of most of the houses where the region's famous wines are produced add to the feeling that somehow you've landed in a manicured corner of Germany's Rhineland? Kroendorf, Bernkastel, Buring, Hoffman.

The 20-mile-long Barossa Valley is a mere 35 miles northeast of Adelaide, the park-studded capital of the state of South Australia and a city with a distinct Anglo personality. In character and feeling, however, the valley is another world, a German one.

Looking at the valley from Scenic Drive above Mengler Hill, you can't help but feel your eyes are wandering over one of those verdant patches of wine-growing earth that turn much of southwestern Germany into rolling grids of purple and light green.

Down from the lookout point and linked by neat and winding roads are the area's main communities — Tanunda, Angaston, Nuriootpa and Lyndoch. Around them cluster smaller towns and hamlets, all boasting a hand in the industry that has made the Barossa Valley Australia's premier wine-making area.

The score of wineries in the area produce 70 per cent of the country's wine and almost 90 per cent of its brandy.

As you drive around the valley you often find reminders of its origins more than a century ago as a refuge for a group of German Lutherans who had fled their homeland to escape religious persecution.

Narrow Lutheran churches with typical slender spires abound, as do sturdy and old stone houses, neat gardens and streets as clean as the many trees on them are properly trimmed.

The phone book is crowded with Hoffmans, Seppelts, Henschkes and other Teutonic names. However, don't make the mistake of thinking of these unfailingly friendly folks as Germans — let alone addressing them as such.

Though proud of their ancestry and still retaining many of the traditions of their forefathers, the people of the Barossa consider themselves 100 per cent Australian, which, of course, they are since the majority of them were born here as were their parents.

By rental car or tour bus, visitors by the thousands descend on the valley to take in its scenic beauty and to do some winery hopping. The latter offers both a treat to the palate and to the eye, for in addition to the superb wines to be sampled there are a number of wineries whose buildings are architectural attractions.

There are as many hotels and motels here as there are wineries, about 20; they are often home-away-from-home for serious wine lovers who wish to take their time discovering the valley and its many wineries.

Most visitors, however, arrive on half-day or daylong tours from nearby Adelaide.

Fine restaurants, with several like Die Weinstube in Dorrien specializing in German food, can be found throughout the valley.

The Barossa is worth seeing any time of the year, but it is particularly attractive and exciting during vintage time from February through April. In odd-numbered years the area hosts a colorful combination of Mardi Gras, songfest and grape-pressing contests known formally as the Barossa Valley Vintage Festival. This year it will be held April 12-17.

A gentleman with a very English name, Col. William Light, named the valley in 1837 after a mountain in Spain.

A few months later the German settlers from Prussia and Silesia arrived and Australia saw the birth of its now-famous wine region.

Today the Barossa is one of the country's most popular attractions as well as a window on one of the many diverse and surprising faces of Australia.

ELABORATE, Teutonic-style signs, verdant fields thick with vines and an abundance of German names conjure up the Rhineland, but this is the Barossa Valley, Australia's wine region near Adelaide.

Wine bars compete with pubs in U.K.

LONDON (Special) — It is ironic that one of the oldest cities in the western world is also one of the trendiest.

London's music industry gave the world the Beatles, and its fashion industry produced the mini-skirt and made Carnaby Street a world-renowned place name.

Now the latest thing to whet the appetites of tourists and locals alike is the London Wine Bar. Countless wine bars have opened up around the city in the last year.

Dispensing wine only, and in copious quantities at rock-bottom prices, they are vying with the traditional British pub as the principal watering holes for thirsty patrons.

Not that the local pub is in any danger of extinction — the summer drought reaffirmed its place in British life.

But the wine bars are filling a small void created in recent years when the big breweries started buying up their outlets and handing them over to often-indifferent managers who lacked the pizzazz of the old-time, friendly publicans.

Skiing with the ghosts of miners

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

PARK CITY, Utah — Down the tubes goes another old ghost town.

Can this be the same Park City I visited a mere 10 years ago, the quaint village with the miners' shacks and all that Victorian gingerbread?

From boom to bust to boom, it's come full circle.

Transforming old mining towns into chic resorts has developed into a lucrative pastime for dozens of promoters. And although they're responsible for reviving Park City, at the same time the old image is being eroded.

Instead of colorful shanties, dozens of slick condominiums provide shelter for the skiers who make Park City a winter playground.

As a result, silver once mined from Treasure Mountain is being returned by vacationers while developers zero in on still more raw land.

Only at Park City it's working both ways. While skiers cut a swath overhead and the groan of the bulldozer echoes among the hills, the miners still dig for riches underground.

The hills have produced nearly $500 million in ore. Still, more silver remains in the ground than has ever been carried away.

In its heyday legions of characters roamed the streets of Park City — John the Baptist, Paddy the Pig and others. The population swelled to 15,000 and immigrant workers slept in tents and brush shanties. They were Chinese and German, Irish, Welsh, Scottish, Austrian, Czech, Italian, Spanish and Scandinavian.

By the late 19th century Park City had become one of the world's richest mining camps. Prospectors arrived in town penniless and walked away millionaires. George Hearst, the father of William Randolph, left town with more than $50 million.

In the frenzy, the earth became honeycombed with tunnels until today more miles of rail tracks are found underground than feed the entire Manhattan subway system.

Until a few years ago skiers rode old miners' trains deep into Treasure Mountain where an elevator hoisted them 1,800 feet to the slopes overhead.

Now they're delivered to the snowy peaks by nearly a dozen chair lifts and the West's longest gondola ride.

Others hop helicopters that deposit them in the virgin powder of distant mountains, the tab varying from $40 to $60 a passenger, depending on the location and the number of skiers.

And for the diehard who can't get in enough snowtime during the day, Park City provides night skiing down Payday, described as "the longest lighted run in the Rockies."

Two lifts operate seven nights a week and lessons are provided by Olympic gold medalist Stein Eriksen. His team will take on the slow pacer as well as the hotdogger looking for a bit of coaching at the gates.

Only 27 miles east of Salt Lake City, Park City has developed into one of the West's major ski destinations. Of dozens of packages created for the snow buff, one being touted by Western Airlines sells for less than $100, which includes shelter for seven nights and a lift pass for six days.

In Park City, accommodations range from shabby to sharp. Among the cheapies Mid-Mountain Lodge accommodates up to 118 skiers a night. Operating European style, the lodge features bunk beds and rooms without baths (just toddle on down the hall to the community shower).

While accommodations are Spartan, the price cannot be debated. Bunk, breakfast, dinner and lift pass come to a mere $31.25 a day.

A sign alongside the road on the approach to town suggests that new arrivals "park the body at Miner's Hospital," a dormitory-style setup that locals refer to as the Palace Flophouse.

At the Palace Flophouse, in case anybody is curious, the nightly tab comes to $7.50.

For the skier with plenty of silver jingling in his jeans, super condominiums go begging for $75, $90 and $105 a night for one-, and two- and three-bedroom arrangements. Similar units are on sale starting at $55,000 and for the truly deluxe suite of the lot (a super penthouse overkooking the village shopping mall) the price is a hefty $195,000.

Given my preference, I would rest the frame at Mine Camp, a cluster of 10 bungalows anchored to a hillside above Main Street. Rates vary from $42 double for a one-bedroom cottage to $48 for a two-bedroom unit roomy enough for six persons.

Fashioned after Park City's early miner cabins, the new bungalows feature push-button fireplaces, brass beds, Franklin stoves, rocking chairs and plain old-fashioned goodness.

Similar warmth is provided at Brown House, a restored 100-year-old private home a few doors away. It's proprietors, Bonnie and Ralph Brown, have papered and pampered the old frame, combining turn-of-the-century atmosphere with modern conveniences. Victorian patterns shield the walls, white lace curtains hang at its windows and Colonial spreads cover the beds.

Rates for each of its three-bedrooms come to $30 a night, double occupancy, and $5 apiece for extra guests.

An ex-boardinghouse for miners, Brown House provides a splendid view from its hillside perch. Likewise, it was a splendid investment for the Browns, who bought it 16 years ago along with four lots for $850.

The asking price today is a cool $190,000.

Among Park City's other entrepeneurs, 42-year-old ex-Angeleno Jim Carr is the innkeeper at the Alpine Prospector, a ticky-tacky albeit inexpensive rooming house on Main Street. While lacking in elegance, it's unquestionably reasonable, with rooms available from $6 to $11.50 a night.

Carr, formerly employed by Litton Industries, also has acquired a couple of old miner's shacks into which he had sunk a goodly amount of cash. His remodelling endeavors have included knocking down the cobwebs and installing Tiffany lamps, Franklin stoves and cathedral ceilings.

Chalet Gaslight, which he rents for $40 a night (double occupancy), will sleep as many as six guests. For the extra persons he asks $5 per body. Besides its two bedrooms the Chalet contains a fireplace, new furnishings and a string of antiques.

Greece calls on the world to save the Acropolis

Air pollution eroding glory that was Greece

By PETER S. MELLAS

ANTHENS — UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) has launched a worldwide campaign to save the 2,500-year-old Acropolis from irreparable damage, caused mainly by atmospheric pollution.

The campaign opened with an appeal delivered from the rock of the Acropolis Jan. 10 by UNESCO director-general Amadou-Mahtar M'bow of Senegal.

M'bow said: "This magnificent monument, on which Ictino and Phidias left the imprint of their genius, is threatened with destruction as a result of the damage which industrial civilization has increasingly inflicted on it for a number of years past."

The damage has reached such proportions that the temples, sculptures, and foundations no longer can be preserved unless a vast and complex program of conservation is undertaken without delay, he said. The cost of the work could not be borne by the Greek government alone.

He appealed to artists, scientists, institutions, and people everywhere to contribute their talents and financial aid to safeguard "the crowning glory of a civilization to which art, science, and philosophy, even in our modern world, still owe an immense debt of gratitude."

UNESCO acted after receiving an appeal for help from the Greek government. The decision was approved at the organization's 19th session held in Nairobi, Kenya, last fall.

An international fund is being set up and special studies on the preservation of monuments are being carried out by leading scientists from various countries.

The Greek government has earmarked $1.6 million, but UNESCO's target is $25 million. A Greek working group headed by archeology Prof. Nicholas Platon is co-ordinating the operations.

One source of damage has been traced to the rusting iron rods used in past restoration work. Whole sections of the temples on the Acropolis must be pulled apart so they can be supported by non-rusting materials, Greek Culture and Science Minister Constantine Trypanis said at the campaign-launching ceremony.

Scientists are working to locate the rusting rods with gamma rays.

Salvage operations also have focused on replacing statues and sculptures with plaster-cast duplicates and on removing the originals to the safe and controlled environment of museums.

The statues of Kecrops, Kalliroi, and Pandrosos already have been removed from the western pediment of the Parthenon.Copies supplied by the British Museum eventually will take their places.

Molds of the Caryatids in the southern side of the Erecthium are being made so the statues can be replaced with duplicates made of more durable material.

Experts say the Acropolis antiquities have been hurt more by air pollution in the past few decades than they were by exposure to the weather during the previous four centuries. Exhaust fumes from airplanes and automobiles have been the worst offenders.

Some steps have been taken to counter this and studies also are under way on the feasibility of covering the monuments with protective plastic domes.

Rude staff out, hotelman warns

MONTREAL (CP) — "The occasional burnt steak is something that can happen," says Peter Hollaus, "but a rude and impolite staff is inexcusable."

Hollaus, general manager of the Chateau Champlain for almost two years, should know. He was elected Hotelman of the Year for 1976 by the Commerical Travellers' Association.

"So many young people now feel that it is an insult to serve," he said. "But the name of the game is service and we have to strive for perfection, nothing less."

Hollaus has been in the hotel business for 17 years. Born and raised in a small town in Austria, he saw an apprenticeship with a hotel as a way of leaving home.

At 15, he was working in a hardware store and taking a commercial course at night "to make my mother happy."

His dream was to be a porter at a hotel. "They looked so impressive in their uniforms at the entrance that I was afraid to walk past them."

After apprenticeship, he became a bellboy at the famous Hotel Sacher in Vienna. "Those were the days when my parents had to pay for me to work there."

"Those were also the days when you took everything," he said. "I once poured soup over a lady's fur coat and the head waiter slapped me in the face. The lady gave me the biggest tip I ever received, though."

Fluent in German, English, French and Dutch, Hollaus said a hotelier should be experienced in every stage of hotel administration.

White gold blankets Sierra range

By STAN DELAPLANE

Snow came at last to the high Sierra. Ski operators sat through Thanksgiving in gloom. Through Christmas in despair. Through New Year's packing up to leave.

A stubborn high pressure front hung off the California coast. It held back the winter rain storms that come roaring down from the Aleutians.

On the TV weather shows we could see the satellite pictures: The storms coming down. Bumping the high pressure front and bouncing off to sea.

California hills, usually green and sopping wet, were summer-brown. The ski country should have been under three feet of snow. There was only a patch or two of last year's snow at the high-no-melt areas.

Travel Tips

"Pray for rain!" cried the preachers in a hundred churches.

The Hare Krishna cultists with shaved heads and yellow robes beat their cymbals.

Descendants of a Coast Indian tribe offered to put on a rain dance which they said had worked for their ancestors.

The TV put out advice on what to do in an earthquake. (Everybody was going a little daffy.)

In our scatter I put in water-savers to save the country's sinking reservoirs: Shower heads that cut the spray down to half—you really don't notice it. A half-gallon jar of sand in the toilet reservoir cuts down the flushing flow.

At regular morning intervals I shouted up the stairs: "Turn off that shower and get ready for school!"

The rains came while I was prowling the foothills of the Mother Lode country. And I headed for the land of skis and hot buttered rum.

Skiing started early in California — though it's more sophisticated now. More expensive, too.

It was the year 1867. Creed Haymond was a high-priced lawyer for the Southern Pacific. (The owners — The Big Four — would control California politics. Squeeze the government for money. Die rich and respected — and often hated — leaving libraries, universities and museums to the public.)

In early days, Haymond had carried the mail on skis between La Porte and Poker Flat. He decided to hold a great ski meet.

Robert Oliver of Sawpit was judged the best skier in California. He was presented the prize at Logan's saloon. Creed Haymond wasc elected president of the ski club.

"He made the boys a little speech through which ran his usual vein of humor," wrote the correspondent. (The first ski reporter in the Golden State.)

"This was followed by cheers for Haymond, cheers for the champion of the belt.

"Cheers for the ladies were followed by songs among which were 'No Irish Need Apply' and 'Beautiful Star'.

"The band struck up a march. The meeting formed itself into a procession and marched to the Masonic Hall where a ball closed the festive scenes of the racing season."

The snow is not deep enough yet for prime skiing. "We need two more storms like this," says a ski instructor at Squaw Valley.

Up on the mountain, above the big ski rerort, Alex Cushing is building a million dollar ski lodge. Cushing bought the 1960 Winter Olympics here in an amazing single-handed effort.

He was confident that it will always snow in the high Sierra.

Dead Sea offers space-age swim

EIN GEDI, Israel — Swimming in the Dead Sea produces the other-worldly sensation of floating in an astronauts' zero-gravity chamber. Due to high concentrations of minerals, the human body floats in the Dead Sea.

When walking into it, you reach a point, usually when you are between waist and chest deep, when buoyancy sweeps your feet to the surface. Sun worshippers simply prop their hands behind their heads and soak up the rays with almost no distractions, except a hardy breed of flies.

For tourists in Israel, a visit to the 500-square-mile Dead Sea is as essential as going to the top of the Empire State Building is in New York. Apart from its quirky swimming qualities, the Dead Sea is the lowest point on earth, lying 1,292 feet below sea level. It is part of the great Jordan rift that cleaves the earth from Syria to southeast Africa.

A head-first plunge is definitely not the best waya to experience this natural phenomenon since the salt level is 10 times greater than the open seas. Most bathers enter cautiously, trying to splash water above the neck.

Dead Sea water is painful if a swimmer has cuts or sores. It's a literal case of pouring salt into wounds.

Surrounded by the sparsely populated, lunar-like Judean hills, the Dead Sea is nearly dead quiet. Floating is a smooth sport because of minimal wave action and because floaters don't have to keep an eye out for sharks, crabs, jellyfish or other nuisances.

Swimmers don't have to worry about slipping on algae-covered stones because no plants or animals survive in this land-locked sea.

There is a catch to the relaxing sensation of weightlessness. The body's balancing mechanism becomes accustomed to the buoyancy of the water and therefore when swimmers walk out of the sea they experience the clumsiness of a newborn animal.

Returning from the dense water, bathers head for a shower to rinse off the potent mineral solution. Without a shower, hair begins to feel gritty and a chalky white powder appears on the skin.

Only two inches of rain fall annually at the Dead Sea. The Jordan River pours 6.5 million tons of water daily into the lake, but all its living contents die soon after contact with the salt liquid.

The water evaporates so fast in the baking sun that a permanent vapor cloud hangs over the sea.

Winner of Eaton's Suncapade to Mexico for 1977 Miss Kathryn Curran of Victoria receives her prize and cheque from Mr. R. Hind, Eaton's Store Manager and Mary Rawnsley, Eaton's Special Events Supervisor. Her prize entitles her to a trip for two to Mazatlan with Suntours on Pacific Western Airlines Jet and $300.00 spending money from Eaton's.

$15-million refurbishing

For Los Angeles Biltmore

History's hotel on road to recovery

LOS ANGELES — Experience has made me rather leery of "renovated" hotels.

Instinctively I lapse into a state of patient weariness when some aggressive public relations type extolls the virtues of the "newly refurbished" or "beautifully restored" facility he or she would like me to inspect — and write about.

More often than not the hostelry in question turns out to be a white elephant disguised by nothing more dramatic than a coat of paint, some new lamps and perhaps some new carpeting.

Thus it was that I greeted the news of the Biltmore Hotel's $16 million renovation project with something less than keen interest, and an invitation to stay at what was once one of America's premier hotels with something less than bounding enthusiasm.

True, as a youngster I had stood in the Biltmore's cathedral-like lobby admiring the brilliantly hand-painted vaulted ceiling, the cherubs and rams that lined its elaborate base above the friezed arches. I remember the twin stairways to what my eyes perceived as an altar but was, instead, a majestic portal leading to the Galeria level. It was all very rich, very elegant and very artistic — an Italian Renaissance church of sorts whose congregation included the era's biggest names and pocketbooks.

Service, I recall, also was special, as were the large guest rooms.

But all this was long ago, my first visits dating back to the 1940s and '50s. Subsequent stays convinced me the hotel was slowly but perceptibly sliding down from the service and maintenance standards which, along with the Biltmore's renowned pieces of architectural and other art, established it as a landmark practically from the day it opened its doors in 1923.

Let's move now to the arrival — with several million dollars and ideas to match — of two creative people whose profession makes them singularly unlike most if not all hotel owners: two architects.

Phyllis B. Lambert of Montreal and Gene R. Summers of the California resort community of Newport Beach bought the Biltmore for $5 million and immediately agreed to spend more than three times that much to completely restore the hotel.

"Both of us being architects," says Summers, "gives us the unique opportunity to participate in every phase of the project, from planning to construction to management."

Ambitious is the word for the undertaking, a comprehensive 18-month operation that ultimately will include every one of the hotel's 1,072 guest rooms as well as the various public facilities.

Two-thirds of the guest rooms already have been remodelled and redecorated. The new Bernard's restaurant is consistently collecting raves both for its outstanding continental cuisine and the gracious service.

The famous lobby has been painstakingly restored to the Renaissance splendor which decades ago prompted its creator, the late Italian artist Giovanni B. Smeraldi, to call it his finest work in this country.

While every effort is being made to preserve the original character and mood of the facades and the public rooms, Summers and Lambert decided to go modern, or with a "new look," as they refer to it, in the kitchen and other facilities as well as in the guest rooms.

Too, they tapped motion picture designer Bill Jobe to create the handsome new uniforms worn by the 450 men and women on the Biltmore's staff.

Not being a devotee of what many hotels label new look or "modern" rooms, I was ready for utter disappointment on learning about the owners' decision in this area. I need not have feared. Yes, guest room furnishings are contemporary, but they're handsome. Too, warm earth tones and the presence of live plants add considerably to a feeling of gracious comfort.

Blame it on my being a travel writer — rather than an art critic — that I failed to be favorably impressed by the prints and sculpture works of contemporary artist Jim Dine you find in all of the renovated guest rooms. But I noticed them. And if the owners' intention was to offer their guests a "visual experience," they succeeded in my case.

I wasn't around 53 years ago when the Biltmore opened, or soon after that the finest hotels in this hemisphere. But, as I said earlier, I did stay many times when it still was an impressive home of fine service, outstanding food and works of art.

Lambert and Summers set out to make it such a place once again. Come see and you'll agree, the famous landmark fronting Pershing Square is getting there.

Cruise the Atlantic to EUROPE via Wardair

Low cost – that's the ticket:
when you take a trip on an Advance Booking Charter flight, you're travelling on the most economical fare plan there is. And when you fly with Intervac via Wardair, Canada's Holiday Airline, you're doing even better... and here's how.

Meet the crew:
on board your Wardair aircraft, a full complement of flight attendants is at your service — more than on any other North American airline. They'll bring you imported wine with your meal, for example, and bar service, including your choice of after-dinner liqueurs — all at no extra cost. (You'd pay for drinks and wine on Air Canada's and CP Air's "Charter Class" fares.)

We go non-stop:
all Wardair flights to Amsterdam and Frankfurt are non-stop... every Wednesday to Amsterdam, on Thursdays to Frankfurt. Coming back is just as easy. On Amsterdam flights, you can stay away for 2, 3, 4, 6, 8 or 10 weeks. (With "Charter Class" fares, you can only stay away a maximum of 45 days — with us, up to 70 days.) On Frankfurt flights, you have a choice of 3, 4 or 5-week returns. It's all the same to us, all the same low fare to you.

Galley at your service:
when you fly Wardair, you enjoy delicious hot meals on board. The menu usually reads: fresh garden salad, filet mignon with vegetables, dessert, tea or coffee — all served on chinaware.

Cabin comforts:
your flight attendants will do all they can to make your flight as comfortable as possible.
If you feel like 40 winks, your seat tilts back, and blanket and pillow are yours for the asking. On our 747, a flight attendant will bring your personal audio headset (at no extra charge on Wardair — you'd have to pay extra on CP Air), so you can listen to your favourite kind of music whenever you feel like it, without disturbing a soul.

Baggage below:
when you fly Wardair to Europe, you enjoy the benefit of our generous 66 lbs. free baggage allowance. (You are only allowed 44 lbs. on CP Air or Air Canada's "Charter Class" fares.) All the more for you to bring home great buys from Europe when you fly Wardair.

Intervac makes it all so easy to see Europe once you land.
Cruising you across the Atlantic is one thing, but Intervac can go a lot further to help you enjoy a great holiday. One phone call at the same time as you arrange your flight via Wardair and you can book any of these:
• HOTELS... in Amsterdam from $24 to $32 per person per night; in Frankfurt from $27 to $29.
• AVIS RENT-A-CAR ... in Holland from $118 (Simca 1000) to $285 per week (Opel Commodore); in Germany from $121 (VW) to $239 per week (BMW or VW Bus).
• EURAIL PASS, 15 days, First Class, $170.

Every Wednesday, May to September cruise non-stop Vancouver, round-trip, to AMSTERDAM
from $429 via Wardair 747

Balmy days for cruise ships

By JOHN PINKERMAN

Back in the Golden Days of the 1950s, winter cruises were gaining popularity but most of the traffic was out of New York to Nassau, Bermuda and the Caribbean.

Then came the age of jet airplane travel and with it, vacations at sea dipped significantly.

Now, it's back to the sea again for the ideal rest from office labors and winter snows — even from California sunshine.

The cruise business is bigger than ever, the choices are more numerous than ever, the foreign ship owners, including the Russians, are grabbing at North American passenger dollars, and steamship lines are co-operating with airlines to popularize what is called the sea-air vacation trip.

Some steamship lines are paying part or all of air fare either to get an Easterner to Las Angeles or San Francisco for sea embarkation or to get Westerners to New Orleans, Miami, San Juan and other Eastern ports for cruises.

Among the newcomers, the Russians are the most energetic in the invasion of American markets. The Black Sea Shipping Co. experimented in 1975-76 with its spanking new motor ship Odessa sailing on seven-day cruises from New Orleans to Mexican and Honduran ports.

So successful was this venture that the Odessa is back this winter, and along with it an even newer Soviet ship, the Dazakhstan, has joined the New Orleans run with both seven- and 14-day cruises that add distance and ports of call like Montego Bay, Curacao, Grand Cayman, even Caracas.

Also, the Soviet CTC Lines' Mikhail Lermontov is taking on an even more ambitious adventure — 25- and 37-day nine-port trips from Vancouver, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles to Acapulco, Tahiti, Rarotonga, Auckland and Sidney.

National Airlines is co-operating with the Soviets on the Odessca and Kazahkstan trips — jetting passengers at reduced fares from the West Coast and Eastern cities to New Orleans.

Soviet competition, however, has not daunted other U.S.-based steamship lines. Sitmar, for one, has several 14-day trans-Panama Canal trips scheduled for the winter. Their vessel is the Fairsea, and they will fly you free from the West Coast to San Juan to join a westward sea voyage, or from San Juan back home in the West if you choose to take the eastward sea voyage.

Later in 1977 Sitmar will increase its 10- and 11-day cruises in the Caribbean, reducing the number of its seven-day trips. Its Fairsea and Fairwind, 25,000-ton vessels, will show slightly increased prices in '77, but as Liberian-registered vessels the rates still are some of the most popular in the cruise business.

Base price $4,425 South American cruises are being offered by Prudential Lines, and the attraction for some on these voyages is the 100-passenger limit of the liners used. Another line, Carnival Cruise Lines, is pushing the country and western theme to get business. One winter cruise to the Caribbean from Miami will feature Hank Williams Jr. as top entertainer.

Los Angeles-based Princess Lines also is going big for the air-sea bargain. It uses charter flights to jet passengers to places like San Juan for one week in the friendly seas of the Caribbean. Princess has a full list of other vacation opportunities and it is battling the Russians, Sitmar and other lines for a full share of the air-sea bargain business.

German, Norwegian and Dutch lines also are busy on both U.S. coasts garnering Caribbean winter business. Holland America, for instance, offers a 50-per-cent air fare saving for one of its Caribbean sailings and free air passage from Los Angeles to New York for 10-day and 11-day trips.

Monarch Cruises calls their vacation "7th Heaven Fly-cruises" and the Los Angeles firm is working with National Airlines on the one-week and two-week trips out of Miami.

Shipping lines report near full bookings on most winter trips. This is a remarkable recovery from the situation of 15-20 years ago when the cruise business was in the doldrums because of the new exciting jet air travel lure.

The competition is keen and with Soviet bargain prices now a part of the cruise scene; winter vacationers on both the Pacific and East Coast are getting the best part of two worlds.

Royal Marines shock stroller

HAYLING ISLAND, England (CP) — A man walking along the Hampshire coast met a group of suspicious-looking men with dark faces.

None spoke and when he saw a dinghy on the beach, he was convinced they were illegal immigrants and called police.

But they turned out to be 30 Royal Marines on a night exercise with their faces blacked for camouflage.

China's Anti-Radical Campaign Now Showing Faltering Signs

By ROSS H. MUNRO
Special to the Times

PEKING — The anti-radical campaign launched last autumn by China's new leaders is showing increasing signs of faltering.

Although there are no signs of any radical resurgence, the first direct evidence of resistance by radicals and radical sympathizers has recently surfaced.

More pervasive is the problem of cynicism and apathy among the people and the lower and middle-ranking officials who have endured so many political twists and turns in recent years.

And an increasing amount of circumstantial evidence suggests that the top leadership itself is failing to provide a firm sense of political direction because it is split on some basic issues.

With the purge of the radical Gang of Four last October, Chinese politics turned decisively away from the left, toward the right and toward pragmatism.

The anti-radical campaign is intended to consolidate this trend, to enlist popular support for a nation-wide political and bureaucratic shakeup and the development of new, pragmatic policies.

No one is arguing that the purge of radicals wont continue or that new policies are not going to be introduced sooner or later. But at least some of the new moderate leaders are clearly alarmed by the danger that these changes will be half-hearted and incomplete and that China will remain bogged down politically and economically.

The official press has been dominated since last weekend by articles expressing such fears in tones of muted alarm. Local party officials are warned against complacency, against any slackening in the anti-radical campaign. These articles insist that the radicals are far from eliminated and will make a comeback unless they and their influence are completely eliminated. The articles demand unity and obedience, an unnecessary demand unless some units or localities are ignoring or soft-pedalling Peking's directives for a cleanout of the radicals.

The evidence that radicals are resisting the current campaign surfaced in two wall-posters which appeared in Shenyang, an industrial centre which is the capital of the northeast province of Liaoning.

The posters in effect charged senior provincial officials with deliberately turning the anti-radical campaign in the province into a charade. The Liaoning provincial revolutionary committee as a whole is charged with pretending to criticize radicals while in reality it is protecting them.

One of the posters names several senior members of the provincial committee as leaders who are covering up their radical connections, disobeying Communist party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, advocating a policy of conciliation and compromise toward other radicals and actually concocting a phony investigation of radical activities.

Liaoning province was considered by many observers to be a radical stronghold, partly because of the key positions held by Mao Yuan-hsin, a nephew of Chairman Mao who is believed to have been under arrest since October. The poster writers demonstrate their knowledge of the inner workings of Liaoning politics by citing events at chosen meetings.

So far there is no direct evidence that radicals in other provinces are following the lead of Liaoning even though it seems highly unlikely that this province is a single isolated case. But probably more common are instances where local officials who were not committed radicals nevertheless found it politically expedient in the past to flirt with them. Now many of these officials must be reluctant to press on with the anti-radical campaign out of fear that they themselves will end up being devoured by it.

But besides those who are actively or passively resisting the anti-radical campaign is another, much larger, category of people who probably worry the leadership most of all. They are the ones who have forgotten how to participate in a genuine political campaign where personnel and policies are truly transformed.

For almost two decades political survival in China has meant faking it, or people going along with every political twist and turn no matter what they might privately believe. For almost two decades people have been learning that today's heroes may be tomorrow's villains.

One day the people are told that Lin Piao is Mao Tse-tung's "closest comrade in arms," the next day that the same Lin Piao actually tried to assassinate Mao. Since 1973 Teng Hsiao-ping has been officially classified as a bad guy, then a good guy, then a bad guy again and now finally a good guy once again. At each shift people have been attacked for not going along with the new official version.

So people have learned to go through the motions, to shift with the tide no matter what they truly believe. The result is that cynicism, apathy and hypocrisy have been woven into the political fabric of China in the past two decades.

'OBEY ORDERS'

HONG KONG (WP) — Peking has called for a new emphasis on military-style discipline throughout China and suggested that some areas were not following Chairman Hua Kuo-feng's instructions to "bring about great order in the country."

In a joint editorial by Peking's three leading publications, the usual vehicle for the most important statements of Communist party policy, the Chinese people were reminded of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung's words: "There can be no victory unless all obey orders and march in step."

Following up on an official statement last Saturday that the current campaign to criticize Mao's disgraced widow has developed "unevenly," the editorial said: "Chairman Hua pointed out in his speech (Dec. 25) that in the course of the acute struggle between the two classes, it is necessary to achieve 'stability and unity,' consolidate the dictatorship of the proletariat and bring about great order across the land. This is a strategic policy decision taken by the party Central Committee."

Sunday the official New China News Agency revealed that four conferences on military defence were going on simultaneously in Peking, in part a sign of the importance of the army to the new chairman.

Last Priest Murdered

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South African Radio says the last white priest in southern Angola has been murdered by guerrillas.

The radio report said the priest, identified only as Father Carlos, was shot dead by members of the South-West African Peoples Organization (SWAPO) at Omupanda mission station.

Owambo Radio interviewed an unnamed refugee who said four black nuns were abducted from the mission, South African Radio said.

The mission buildings were plundered and a couple of days later Angolan troops "turned the place into a military base," the report said.

36 Die in Snow

TOKYO (Reuter) — Heavy snow in Japan has killed at least 36 people since the beginning of the year, the national police agency reported. The latest victim, an 82-year-old man, was found frozen to death in a deep snowdrift in front of his home in the Iwate district, northern Japan, police said.

Protest Day Injury Costs Lift Driver Dearly

HAMILTON (CP) — Alex Ryckman had a lot of time to think about the ramifications of labor strife while recuperating from injuries suffered during organized labor's day of protest last October.

"If I had it to do again, I'd never go near a picket line," said the 23-year-old lift-truck driver.

Mr. Ryckman was the only person who reported a serious injury in the national demonstration, called by the Canadian Labor Congress to protest the federal government's anti-inflation program.

He slipped under the wheels of a car while doing picket duty outside a Hamilton plant and was in hospital until December.

"I still believe labor was right to protest wage controls and I'm still 100 per cent behind the union," he said.

"But when I see how little it accomplished and how much it cost me, I know there has to be a better way to work things out than confrontation. Nobody wanted trouble and yet look what happened."

He said he doesn't remember the accident, which left him with cuts to the head, multiple internal injuries and a pelvis broken in six places. A Hamilton man was later charged with reckless driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Mr. Ryckman, who cannot collect sick benefits, said his savings have been depleted and there has been limited financial support for him, his 19-year-old wife, Betty and their two infant children. The family has been living on money from the local steelworkers' union.

A BIRD in the bush is worth two in the hand in the case of the bald eagle, a rare and endangered species. Eagle-eyed Times photographer John McKay caught this bald eagle perched in a tree at the corner of Cook and Dallas.

Fire Repellant Cancer Risk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Environmental Defence Fund this week asked the government to ban the sale of children's sleepwear containing a widely used fire retarder called "Tris," because, it said there was a "significant cancer hazard."

The fund said it appeared the industry has already sharply reduced its use of "Tris" and may eventually switch to fabrics which are inherently fire resistant and do not need chemicals added to them.

Robert Harris, an EDF researcher, told a news conference that even if the switch comes, garments of 100 per cent polyester fabric might have to be treated with Tris substitutes, which are not yet tested.

Harris said there is "unambiguous data" that Tris, which sometimes amounts to 10 per cent of the weight of a treated nightgown, can be absorbed through the skin or if a child sucks or chews on the garment.

Washing a treated garment three to five times significantly reduces the amount of the chemical, although some still remains, he added.

The group petitioned the consumer product safety commission to ban all Tris-treated garments; investigate ways of disposing of all stocks of the garments; issue a general public warning; and to allow the sale of 100 per cent polyester and blends without chemical additives.

One year ago the EDF asked the commission to require a label that shows the presence of Tris. At that time, Harris said 60 to 70 per cent of all children's sleepwear was treated with it. The figure now amounts to 20 per cent, he said, and the coming spring and summer line of nightgowns will be about 10 per cent Tris-treated.

The commission has not acted on EDF's earlier petition, saying it was waiting for data from the National Cancer Institute.

EDF said: The institute's "bioassay on Tris clearly establishes Tris as a potent animal carcinogen. Therefore human exposure to Tris can be assumed to represent a potentially significant cancer hazard."

Bill White of Vancouver, federal regional manager of Products Safety, said Tris is not used in garments manufactured in Canada.

"A few imports may find their way into the country, but it is no problem."

He explained that use of the retarder has raised manufacturing costs so much U.S. garments can't compete with Canadian or other foreign products.

"They are not competitive," he said. "I'm also told the chemical makes the garments stiffer and heavier."

Although the chemical is not used by Canadian manufacturers, he said federal laboratories are testing Tris to determine if its use in children's garments is safe.

Mothers Get $81,500

The annual Kinsmen Mothers' March for the handicapped has netted $81,500 toward its $85,000 target in Greater Victoria.

Spokesman Derek Dashwood said returns from apartments are only half in and final results will be known in about a week.

The provincial target is $850,000.

Handicapped Infants' Nursery Growing

"We started out with five cribs, in a space not much larger than a fair-sized living room," Eileen Edgar told me as we stood in the entrance to a large and brightly decorated nursery room at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children.

She was talking about an infant stimulation program that today is a vital part of the nursery wing at the Clinic.

The program originated some years ago, at the Winnifred Clark Home on Elford Street, with five babies and several volunteers, headed by Miss Edgar.

"Idea at that time was mainly to give parents some relief from constant care," she remembers.

"Today, of course, our program is planned to help babies, from birth to three years of age, who are delayed in development or have handicaps of varying kinds."

Miss Edgar moved from the Elford Street place to the Pearkes Clinic, when it opened in 1969.

Since then she has seen this infant stimulation project expand until it now has some 29 little ones registered for care, among them babies suffering from Downes syndrome (mongoloid) and cerebral palsy.

The nursery is open five days a week, from nine in the morning until three in the afternoon. It has two paid staffers and an average of three or four volunteers giving help each day.

Marjorie Wright and Peggy Jackson are in charge with Philippa Pottinger, the physio-therapist, and Audrey Fawcett co-ordinating volunteers.

Parents who can do so, take turns in the crib room.

A year ago (on February 18, 1976, to be exact), the infant program moved into its own wing at the Pearkes Clinic and the present large nursery, with bright walls and furniture, laundry facilities and changing tables, was opened.

Very young babies — and that could mean anywhere from a few weeks old — are brought in once or twice a week.

Then, depending on the success of their training and the needs of the parents, they progress in nursery time, to an average of three — sometimes four — days a week.

When specific problems arise, for instance if the mother is ill or is going to have another child, Eileen Edgar explains, "we will take the little one for a full five days a week."

Home visits are also arranged to offer suggestions and teaching techniques for parents and babies.

In the program every baby is on an individual schedule. At some time during a day "even if it's only for ten minutes," each has a one-to-one training period in a private room.

Viewing mirrors allow parents to watch during such periods "and to learn from watching how to work with and play with their own."

Here Miss Edgar explained that every child "no matter how young" comes into the nursery wing on a family doctor's referral.

The clinic's medical consultant, Dr. Pat Johnston channels them into the program; psychologist Dr. Paul Viel sees and talks to the parents and a social worker helps with initial contacts.

Main thrust of the program is to bring these little ones to a point where they can realize their full potential and become a part of the community.

It also gives mothers — and sometimes fathers — an opportunity to talk with staff members and other concerned parents.

They share problems, hear about high risk babies, premature babies, and babies that are slow developers. They are told about nutrition needs and how poor home backgrounds can increase problems of the retarded and the handicapped.

Every Wednesday morning a splash party is held when mothers and nursery-age children go in the pool together at Pearkes Clinic.

Later coffee is served and parents talk out many of their concerns and worries with each other.

"They find great comfort in this kind of involvement," Miss Edgar told me.

"Indeed, we believe that, in many instances, they relate to each other better than they do to professionals."

This dedicated woman is in charge of three separate stages of the program — the nursery, a junior room and a senior room.

"We proceed step by step," she explains. First with the simple process of give and take . . . give the child something, shape their hands around it and have them give it back.

"We establish eye contact, work a lot with music and with speech therapy . . . and the moment a child responds we know we're on our way."

On occasions the three-year-olds share music time and juice and cookie time with the juniors.

Babies are cuddled and bottle fed in a volunteer's arms. Little ones are encouraged, urged and talked into doing things for themselves.

"And every day, in every way, we are seeing the results," Mis Edgar said.

Here she picked up a tiny boy who had tottered across the nursery on unsteady feet to reach his hands up to her.

She cuddled him for a moment, talked quietly to him, then put him down and watched as he tottered back to one of the volunteers.

Then she turned to me and said — "Basically, you know, these are not problem babies. Rather, they are babies with problems. Each one is a little individual. Each one is different in temperament and ways of approach."

That, in a few words, sums up the belief that has made the infant stimulation program for the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for the Handicapped, such a success in the past year.

Anyone wishing to know more about this program, may visit the nursery wing mornings from 10 to 12, Monday to Friday.

"There's always someone available to take people on a tour of the wing," Miss Edgar says, "and we do welcome public interest."

Unmarried Couples Increasing in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An emerging social trend of the 1970s is the escalating number of men and women living together out of wedlock, the U.S. census bureau says.

The number of unmarried couples in the United States who have decided to share living quarters has more than doubled since 1970, according to a report just issued.

Arthur Norton, who directed preparation of the study, said the phenomenon is not a passing fad. "This is a true, accepted social trend," he said, adding that he expected the number of unmarried roommates to increase even more.

The report said that in March 1976, when the statistics were compiled, 1,320,000 unmarried Americans lived with a member of the opposite sex in a two-person household, compared with 654,000 in 1970.

Forty-eight per cent of the men and 43 per cent of the women involved had never been married, the report said.

"Fundamental changes are occurring in marriage and family living," in the 1970s, the report said.

Norton said the bureau's figures on unmarried couples living together were conservative.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Get a new hair style for the new year . . .

There's nothing like personal experience . . . so when we tell you that the staffs of the Charming Lady and Witch's Hut really live up to their slogan "Specialists in Fine Hair" . . . we're not going by hearsay! . . . George tells us the new permanent waves they have in both salons can be custom-designed for the individual woman's particular hair type . . . This is the very latest thing in permanent waving . . . so why don't you go in and see for yourself? . . . Get a new hair style for the new year . . . with the sort of perm that's right for YOUR hair! . . . The staffs of the Lady and the Hut are really terrific . . . real pros, every one of them! . . . The atmosphere is good . . . and when you're spending two hours or so having a perm or color . . . you want to spend it in congenial surroundings, right? . . . It's great, too, to be able to place one's hair in the hands of people who care, and whose advice you can rely on . . . Hair styles are changing to the softer, more feminine look . . . Skillfully tousled hair requires technique on the part of the stylist . . . The "wild" cuts and easy-to-look-after hair with body . . . practical and becoming . . . is what hair care is all about . . . Want the Farah Fawcett or Dorothy Hamill look . . . adapted to suit YOU? . . . Then make an appointment at Charming Lady, 1712 Douglas St., 383-8133 or Witch's Hut, 728 View St., 388-7368.

The Event you've been waiting for! . . .

Twice every year . . . for lo! these many years . . . Standard Furniture have held a clearance sale of Sanderson fabrics . . . of which they carry a truly enormous selection . . . And Victoria women who'd like to do a bit of freshening up in their homes, wait for these sales with an understandable eagerness since prices are slashed like you wouldn't believe! . . . Well, this spring sale of Sanderson fabrics starts at Standard next Monday and carries on for 10 days . . . There are literally hundreds of yards of the most beautiful fabrics imaginable . . . for slipcovers, upholstery, draperies . . . even for your long skirts and summer dresses! . . . Plains . . . prints in gorgeous patterns . . . antique satins . . . union cloths . . . luxurious French Tergal . . . a polyester voile in various colors, 118 wide! . . . The prices on these fabrics are incredible! . . . Some have been reduced by more than half! . . . There's an antique satin de luxe, ideal for draperies, reduced to $5.98 . . . A moire satin specially priced at $5.98 . . . A fantastic selection of upholstery bolt ends, at a fraction of their original price! . . . Standard are certainly meaning to outdo themselves this time! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

The timeless lure of pure silk . . .

The sheer luxury of pure silk after years of wearing every manner of man-made fabric is something to revel in, isn't it? . . . Love those industrious silk worms! . . . But what we want to tell you about specifically are two superb pure silk suits we saw at Gibson's this week . . . Flawlessly tailored double-breasted blazer . . . trousers with the newest Parisian cut . . . fly front, front pleats, slash, fob and hip pockets . . . made extra long so if you wish you can have them cuffed . . . (the cuff is back, we hear!) . . . The skirt also has a fly front, same type of pockets as the trousers, and grosgrain belt . . . These super suits are navy or eggshell . . . (We couldn't help thinking how smashing the navy would be with a red silk shirt!) . . . and each part is marked separately so you can buy as few or as many pieces as you please . . . match or interchange them . . . The blazer by itself can be worn with anything . . . Another thing, if your figure is less than perfect all over, you can buy different sizes that really fit . . . Thus doing away with the need for alterations . . . See these beautiful suits at . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Here's where you find those interesting gifts! . . .

In search of a small birthday gift, we dropped in to the Dogwood Gift Shoppe last Monday . . . and found so many interesting things well within our price range that it was really an "embarras du choix"! . . . For example, they're the only place in town to have downy-soft, Polyfab scented drawer lining . . . in pretty floral prints. This makes a lovely gift . . . Wipes clean in a trice, and can be re-perfumed! . . . There's a closet sachet to slip on a clothes hanger and slide on the closet bar to bring a breath of country fragrance to your clothes . . . Delicate trays and cake plates in Chance glass from England . . . A delightfully different soup and a sandwich set . . . outsize cup and matching plate . . . with floral and butterfly design . . . Hasti-notes with personalized engraved initials . . . (at a very tiny price!) . . . Japanese "Wagami" paper wallets in the most intriguing designs and colors . . . One of the best selections of wall hanging parchments in Victoria . . . And here's the answer to prayer for Moms and grandmothers looking for a small gift for a favorite youngster . . . "Name" mugs with just about every male and female name you can think of . . . New shipments are streaming into the Dogwood nearly every day . . . Oak Bay residents are certainly lucky to have this unique store so handy . . . but in our book it's worth a trip from clear across town! . . . Dogwood Gift Shoppe, 2180 Oak Bay Ave., 598-3712.

Lighting works pure magic! . . .

We haven't written about Lighting Exclusive before . . . probably because we hadn't the wit to go in and look at this store in the Hillside Mall . . . devoted to nothing but lighting . . . Fixtures and lamps of all kinds which have to be seen they're so diversified . . . and so very beautiful! . . . We remedied the situation with a visit last week . . . even took in a friend whom we promptly lost because she became so fascinated with everything in sight . . . especially the lava lamps . . . (whose hypnotic effect we'll tell you about some other time) . . . Whatever you can envision in the way of lighting . . . you'll almost certainly find it here! . . . Our eyes kept going back to the Venetian glass and chrome chandelier . . . a grouping of 5 or 6 large flowers holding the light bulbs . . . It has a modern look, yet would be equally at home in a Victorian setting . . . And the pretty little desk lamps . . . one with a snakeskin base and pleated shade . . . A little antique regency lamp . . . delightful for a lady's desk . . . Another lamp looks like a pair of candles with holders and shade . . . sweet for a console table, we thought . . . We chatted with Mrs. Beston who, with her husband, owns this interesting lighting store . . . She told us they have imported lamps, etc., from all over Europe and this continent . . . always try to have something different from other stores . . . So take our advice and do some browsing yourself . . . Even if you think you don't need a thing, go have a look anyway! You might just fall in love with some little gem of lighting magic! . . . Beston's Lighting Exclusive, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-0332.

See the Land of the Midnight Sun . . .

One of the most popular cruises in our part of the world is the cruise to Alaska . . . sailing up the famed Inside Passage . . . viewing the vivid contrasts and experiencing the vibrancy of this land of midnight sun! . . . As you probably know, there are quite a number of Alaskan cruises starting in May and running through September . . . but if you've any thought of being on one of them, the time to book is NOW! . . . When we picked up our ticket to California from Paulin's the other day, they told us about the various Alaska cruises for which they're now taking bookings . . . The CPR's Princess Patricia sails from Vancouver May 31 . . . through Sept. 4 . . . Princess Cruises' three ships . . . Sun, Island and Pacific Princess . . . start May 24, through Sept. 17 . . . (It's just possible one of these may embark passengers here in Victoria) . . . Then there's the Strand Cruises . . . aboard the SS Vercruz which operated in the Mediterranean last year . . . May 24 through Sept. 24 . . . This last is the most reasonably priced of all the cruises, and for this reason a lot of the space has already been booked . . . but do talk to Paulin's . . . They'll tell you all about fares for different types of accommodation, and find out for you exactly what's available . . . They've also got brochures which you'll find exciting reading! . . . Let Paulin's book you on an Alaskan cruise this year! . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-9168.

Sexual Pressures Worsen for Teens

VANCOUVER (CP) — The sexual revolution hasn't brought liberation to today's teenage girls, a Vancouver health worker says. "All it has done for them is increase their sexual pressures."

Diana Lion, a staff member of Vancouver Women's Health Collective, said in an interview teenage girls today are caught in a pressure play between their parents' counsel favoring pre-marital virginity, and demands by boys in their peer group to "put out" sexually.

"All this so-called liberation has done for young girls is to sandwich them between two pressure groups — their parents' and their peers'," Ms. Lion said. "They feel they are being pushed into sex when they don't really want it, but if they refuse they feel they will be out in the cold socially."

Boys, too, are drawn by their pals into trying anything to prove their "manhood."

"Some boys don't feel ready for sex in their early teens, but they have to go along with the crowd or risk having doubts created about their manhood," she said.

Ms. Lion said she has observed these reactions in talks with boys and girls she has conducted in high schools on behalf of the collective.

"It seems to me the sexual revolution hasn't even enabled young boys and girls to be more open with each other," Ms. Lion said. "This frankness may be occurring between men and women in the 25 to 30 age group. But the teenagers don't seem to communicate any better with those of the opposite sex about sexual matters than their parents did."

That's why she feels a centre like the Vancouver Women's Health Collective performs a useful function. "We can counsel women about things they want to know — birth control, venereal disease, pregnancy and the care of their bodies," she said. "We don't sit in judgment. We are completely neutral. We help a woman make up her own mind about what is best for her and her body."

That doesn't mean that men are excluded from the centre. "Men often phone us for information about vasectomies," she said. "Or they come in with their wives or girl friends to get first-hand information so that they may help them."

Ms. Lion and Helena Summers are among trained lay workers who run the collective with the help of volunteers. They teach women all aspects of health care, including pre and post-natal counselling and birth control. They also see about 800 women a year at a free once-weekly self-help clinic where a doctor is on hand to give them advice or to refer them for treatment.

Tops on their list of "musts" for women of all ages are breast and cervical examinations for early detection of cancer. At the collective, trained women give instruction privately in how women may do these examinations themselves.

"Many women feel intimidated when they go to a doctor," Ms. Summers said. "They want to ask questions but they are afraid of taking up too much of the doctor's time.

"Here at the collective the women feel at ease because they know we can take time to answer their questions and teach them what they need to know about their own bodies." Instruction is also given in diaphragm insertion and natural family planning for women who for reasons of health or religious beliefs are adverse to using other methods of contraception.

The collective started in 1971 with a group of women who used to gather at a private house for a health study group.

Today, in addition to the clinics and weekly counselling sessions, the collective's staff give talks in high school and in out-of-town communities.

Lupus Erythematosus Needs Early Diagnosis

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

A member of my family was striken with Lupus Erythematosus. This little understood disease can be tragic. I feel that it would be of great value if you were to bring to the attention of your readers information about this condition so that it can be recognized earlier and treated more intensively.—Dr. H. B., Calif.

DEAR DR. B.: I am delighted to cooperate with you and the American Lupus Society in disseminating this information.

Lupus erythematosus (LE) was once considered entirely a skin condition. Later, it was learned that internal organs were also affected by LE. The name "lupus" in Latin means "wolf." The name was first given to the disease because the discoloration, or redness, of the skin resembled a wolf bite.

One of the problems associated with LE is that there is no single pattern of symptoms. LE can mimic the symptoms of many other diseases, and strike many parts of the body, often confusing even the most expert physicians.

Although the exact cause is vague, much information is being accumulated and new diagnostic blood studies are already available to flush out suspected cases.

The disease is not contagious and is not considered to be hereditary.

A number of drugs are available, especially of the cortisone group, to effectively control LE, particularly when the diagnosis is made early.

The American Lupus Society located in Torrance, Calif., deserve the support of the American people.

In 1974, our federal government introduced the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. This helps Canadians save for the purchase of a home and its initial furnishings. In the first year more than 250,000 Canadians joined the plan. This is proof that the RHOSP filled a definite need.

The bilingual 32-page tax information pamphlet "Registered Home Ownerhsip Savings Plan" explains the rules and regulations of the RHOSP.

It points out that when RHOSP funds are withdrawn, they are tax free if they are used within that year or within 60 days thereafter to purchase a home you intend to occupy, to buy furnishings for that home or for one owned by your spouse, if this is owner-occupied. Since you may only have one RHOSP during your lifetime, the decision when to withdraw your funds is important.

The pamphlet also mentions that the home you buy can be a house, cottage, apartment or condominium. It can even be a mobile home, provided it is intended as a permanent home. It can also be a houseboat if it is constructed and intended for year-round long-term residence.

The booklet lists all other details regarding Canada's Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan.

Rabbit's Growls Not Imagined

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: In the last month Harvey's got pretty big, as rabbits go. He was cuter when he was tiny. Lately I swear I've heard him growling at me a few times. I don't tell my friends, though, because I tried it and they think I'm crazy. Do rabbits ever growl? Please say yes. — W. B.

DEAR W.B.: Good news. Rabbits do, on occasion, growl. Apparently Harvey has some territorial ambitions, and his growling may represent resentment over what he considers territorial infringement.

DEAR DR. MILLER: You've never seen a more beautiful blonde cooker than my Lulu. She's not that beautiful-but-dumb type, either. She's smart. Lots of fans want puppies of hers, and she has a pedigree a mile long. I'd like to breed her if it's okay, but one problem. She has these seizures, occasionally, which the doctor says are epileptic. My own veterinarian feels it's not advisable to breed her because of this. May I please have your opinion? — T. K.

DEAR T.K.: I concur with my colleague. While I can understand your being anxious to breed beautiful Lulu, it's inadvisable under the circumstances. For one thing, there's no way to predetermine what effects the stress of pregnancy would have in relation to her epilepsy. It might have no effect; it rarely might even reduce her epileptic seizures. But to be realistic, it could also severely aggravate the problem, probably to the point of crisis. Then there's the effect on her proposed puppies. Any epileptic seizures while she's pregnant, could conceivably have a direct effect. There would also be the possibility that puppies from her litter might themselves be epileptics. Lovely Lulu definitely shouldn't be bred.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I bought several small imported flower pots which I'd like to plant for a large aquarium. These are small, attractive pots which themselves will decorate the aquarium floor. Is there any reason why these little pots can't be exposed on the bottom rather than hidden? — W.C.

DEAR W.C.: If your pots can be used at all, they could certainly be exposed. But possibly they don't belong in an aquarium (if they would share it with fish). Often imported flower pots are potentially poisonous since metals used in the pottery itself or in the paint may leach into the water in toxic quantities.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Klunker, my cat, always has the sniffles. I use nasal decongestant drops, but they don't help much. They could, more, I think, if he didn't hate them so much. Can you give me a formula for nose drops that would work better for my cat? — A.P.

DEAR A. P.: One-eighth teaspoon salt in a half cup of water would produce nose drops of equal effectiveness, and they'd be a lot cheaper. However, it's unlikely Klunker can abide any type of nose drops. The best plan is to drop the whole idea and carry Klunker, chronic drip and all, in to his own doctor for perhaps more specific treatment.

Don't Bully Wetter

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is positively driving me up the wall. Our seven-year-old son still wets the bed — every night!

We've tried everything, including taking him to several doctors. They all say there is nothing physically wrong with him.

I am sick and tired of washing sheets and pajamas every day. Please tell me how to handle this. — READY TO GIVE UP.

DEAR READY: You say you've tried "everything." If you haven't tried the "Wee Alert Buzzer" (Sears catalogue), please do. If that doesn't work, continue to wash the sheet sand pajamas every day and say nothing.

Now I'll tell you what NOT to do: DON'T.. tell your son that he could quit if he really wanted to — that he's just too lazy to get up and go to the bathroom; that he's a "baby"; that you're ashamed of him, and he is driving you up the wall.

Resign yourself to the fact that you are only one of about 20 million American mothers with the same problem, and although it's not pleasant, there are worse fates.

If there were no bedwetters in your family, there probably were on your husband's side because bedwettting is usually hereditary. And be sure to tell your son that, too. It will make him feel less guilty.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a wonderful fellow. He is kind, considerate and polite. He is almost perfect. Ours is a long-distance romance, as he travels, but when we get together with other people, I find he has one fault that is very irritating.

He likes to do more than his share of the talking. With me alone, this is not true. I am a rather quiet person and seeing him dominate every conversation in public irritates me.

Should I mention this to him, or let it go? I am afraid that after we marry, this may be a sore spot with us. IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Yes, tell him in as kind a way as you can. Not in criticism, but in "love." If you let it go, the irritation will grow, and the first time he leaves the cap off the toothpaste you're apt to clout him with a skillet.

IN A PRICKLY MOOD? Precious Baby, a pet porcupine, finds chug-a-lugging a bottle of beer the best solution for whatever. He's a regular, along with his owner, Ralph Cole, at the Bear Paw Inn in Portland, Ore.

Four Sentenced

MANILA (AP) — A Philippine court-martial sentenced an American and three Filipinos to six years in prison Thursday for plotting to kill President Ferdinand Marcos and take over the government. The four are August Lehman, 26, of Nashville, Tenn., Eduardo Figueras, Manuel Crisologo and Antonio Arevalo. All pleaded guilty to charges of rebellion.

Best for Ulcers: Stop Smoking

EDMONTON (CP) — The best treatment for a burning ulcer is to stop smoking and get some rest, Dr. K. N. Jeejeebhoy, a University of Toronto professor, said Tuesday.

Dr. Jeejeebhoy told a meeting of the Alberta chapter of the College of Family Physicians of Canada that traditional treatment of ulcers with exotic diets, large amounts of milk and antacids do nothing to heal an ulcer although they do appear to relieve pain.

Avoiding excessive use of cigarettes, alcohol and drugs help to heal ulcers, he said.

Smoking appears to reduce the amount of alkali, which protects the bowel against corrosive stomach acid. Ulcers are formed when this protection breaks down.

Widespread use of aspirin also seems to halt healing, Dr. Jeejeebhoy said.

And patients who feel drinking milk will allow them to drink alcohol without affecting their ulcers are wrong, he said.

Tips Give That Pro Look

KNIT and CHAT

By MAY E. MacLEAN

I received a letter this week from a reader who says she always has a problem spacing the buttonholes evenly on the band when making cardigans, and I know that this can present quite a problem to some knitters.

The secret is to knit the button side first! When this is completed, you can measure and space off where the button will be, so that as you are knitting the buttonhole side, you have a guide as to where to make them.

Another tip regarding buttonholes. You are directed to cast-off so many stitches, let's say for instance four. Cast off three stitches, then place the last stitch on right hand needle back onto the left hand needle, then knit the next two stitches together, so that you are using four stitches for the buttonhole, but it does away with the loop and sometimes the gap that some knitters get from the last cast-off stitch.

One further tip, do not place the bottom button or buttonhole right at the very lower edge of the cardigan. Rather place it about half an inch from the bottom, the same goes for the very top one should it be at the neckline.

If you are making a V-neck type of cardigan, place the top buttonhole just one or two rows below where the neck decreasings begin.

When sewing on the buttons, use a strand or two of the same wool from which the cardigan was knitted. You can usually unravel the wool and use either one or two of the "plys" in this manner. If not, use a matching colour thread. Never sew the buttons on tightly, rather leave a "stem", then wind the wool one or twice around this stem before fastening off.

Of course where there is a pattern in the knitting, great care should be taken so that the pattern matches when the cardigan is buttoned. The same if it is raglan-styled, match any pattern when joining these seams. It is the little things such as I have described which give a professional finish to your work and its over-all appearance, especially when you have spent hours on the knitting! Too many times I have seen so many knitters si anxious to finish their garment, that they even sew the seams before they have pressed the pieces! But pressing or blocking can be a lengthy subject which will have to wait for another column.

Katrina is the name of a distinctive slip-over in the very simplest of filet crochet. Can be worn almost everywhere, and be in the highest fashion bracket. I complimented one young lady who was wearing one quite similar, crocheted in off white, she wore it over a plain black turtle-neck sweater and black skirt—tres chic!

To order this Leaflet No. 7701, send 75 cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra quarter to cover the cost of handling, and print your name and address. Send to:—May E. Mac Lean, "KNIT & CHAT", c-o Box B, 486 Moneford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux P.Q. H9G 1M6. Please be sure to state pattern numbers when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Catalogues are no longer available.

Thyroid Diagnosis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — University of Pittsburgh doctors have developed a blood test to detect a hormonal condition in newborns which can cause mental retardation if not discovered and treated early.

The new test spots congenital hypothyroidism, a condition which affects about one in every 5,000 babies. The problem involves insufficient production of the thyroid hormone.

indoor gardens

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: My watermelon peperomia is getting many new leaves that either droop and die or live "deformed" or cracked. The other older leaves are still green and healthy. My friend told me it could have been a result of overfertilization. From the description of the symptoms I gave you, can this be true?

I give it good indirect light, mist once a week and keep the soil moderately dry. I only feed it once a month. I hope it isn't serious. It's a large beautiful plant. I love it. —Cindy.

Dear Cindy: Everything you are providing for your watermelon pep is correct. It is quite possible that it was overfertilized as it was growing. If there has been root damage there isn't much more you can do except to cease feeding it at once and hope. You might try flushing the soil when the plant next needs water. There is a tremendous worldwide demand for indoor plants. In their haste to get them to the marketplace, the growers sometimes do force-grow them. This is one hazard we face when purchasing our houseplants.

Quite often a full-grown plant that has been born and raised in a greenhouse suffers when brought into our homes or offices. This could have happened with your plant. The cracking leaves indicate lack of humidity, so set it on a tray of moist pebbles.

DEMOLITION SACRIFICE

A demolition sacrifice is one intended to reduce the protection around the enemy King, and leave him exposed to meet his fate at the hands of other attackers. Witness here the spectacular explosives Black uses to reach the White King. The protagonist is Larry Christiansen, one of the strongest Juniors in the United States today. The tournament was the Junior Championship of the Americas, held last year in Buenos Aires and won by Jaime Sunye Neto of Brazil. Christiansen tied for fourth.

Resigns

(a) With the White King position already a little loose, it is not a good idea to allow a Black Rook to reach the seventh, particularly when it costs White a pawn. The Knight on Q5 is more picturesque than powerful.

(b) White must cut down the attack forces with 14. Q-Q3, QxQ; 15. BxQ, R-QB1. Black then will have technical difficulties in evaluating his extra pawn. White is also in trouble after 14. KR-K1, RxB!; 15. RxR, Q-B6; 16. N-B4, QxN.

(c) Now if 19. PxQ, BxP ch; 20. K-R1, B-N7 mate or 20. R-B2, RxR; 21. Q-R4 ch, K-B1 and there is no defence to mate.

Awards Given For Bravery

OTTAWA (CP) — A man who rescued a child trapped in his crib after an explosion in the child's home was among 22 persons who received bravery awards from Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger Friday at Government House.

John Albert Mahon of Halifax will receive the Star of Courage, Canada's second highest decoration for bravery for rescuing two-year-old Matthew Lavers from the smoke-filled upper storey of the child's home Feb. 4, 1976.

The Star of Courage is one of three bravery decorations created in 1972 to honor people who risk their lives to help others. The other two decorations are the Cross of Valor, the highest decoration and the Medal of Bravery.

During Friday's ceremony, Gov.-Gen. Leger will present three Stars of Courage and 19 Medals of Bravery.

Stars of Courage will be awarded posthumously to Montgomery Penney of Lower Lance Cove, Nfld., and to Margaret Luctretia Pitkethly of Hedley.

Penney drowned when he attempted to rescue two occupants of a car which pplunged into the waters of Long Pond, Nfld., July 4, 1974.

Mrs. Pitkethly died after pushing her daughter out of the way of a boulder which became dislodged from a rock quarry near Princeton, July 29, 1975.

Receiving Medals of Bravery are:

Terrance Gordon Budreo, Prince Albert, Sask.; Constable Glenn Brian Calder, Surrey; James Alfred Coe, Penticton; Capt. John Joseph Goodall Connors, Ottawa; Constable Andre Dubuc, Ste-Therese-en-Haut, Que.; M.-Cpl. Paul Wayne Graham, Ottawa; David Herrett, Toronto; Cpl. Joseph Bernard Lemay, Beaconsfield, Que.; Pte. Gregory Brent Lewis, Oromocto, N.B.; Wilbert Nenacho, Fort Norman, N.W.T.; Constable Ronald David Noye, Burnaby; James David Piecowye, Ajax, Ont.; Claude Poirier, Montreal; Frank Preis, Golden; Dean Sarell, Oliver; Cpl. Alexander John Sheppard, Borden, Ont.; Pamela Anne Switzer, Surrey; Brian William Webb, Grande Cache, Alta.; and Osmond Yorke, Cumberland County, N.S.

Remains Returned

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government has brought home the remains of 74,400 of an estimated 510,000 Japanese soldiers who died in the Philippines during the Second World War. The latest Japanese mission sent to the islands collected remains of 2,651 war dead.

Ever watch a baby learn to walk... or talk ...or eat?

Everyone knows that children don't learn these skills at the same age, at the same speed, or in the same way.

that's normal!

It's the same with reading, writing and arithmetic.

Every child has a right to learn these skills. Teachers want every child to learn them.

But your child may not.

If children are to learn, they need:
- enough of their teacher's time and attention
- a variety of learning materials
- the teaching methods that work best for them
- a curriculum that allows each child to grow as an individual

INSIST THAT SCHOOLS RESPECT THE UNIQUENESS OF YOUR CHILD.

- Attend local curriculum meetings. (Contact the local school for times.)

NEW CABLE going up along Stelly's Cross Road will provide new telephone service for users in the growing Brentwood and Mount Newton areas. B.C. Tel lineman Ed Gerhardt works on the pole while Monty Gill feeds out some of the 19,000 feet of telephone cable.

Inmates Adjust No-Wall Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's newest prison lies in an open clearing on a mountainside in the upper Fraser Valley. It is unguarded and has no walls or fences.

A prisoner can simply walk away. But if he is caught he trades the freedom of the new Elbow Lake Institution for a permanent home at the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster.

Elbow Lake, a group of trailers parked in a clearing near Harrison Mills, about 60 miles east of Vancouver, provides the first-year-round forestry training program for B.C. prisoners.

Of the 50 prisoners in the camp, none is a sex offender or child molester and all are considered minimum security risks.

One recent arrival, a 61-year-old convicted drug trafficker, seemed dazed as he took in his new home. With six years left to serve, he was looking forward to the peace and quiet of Elbow Lake.

"It's quite a contrast," quite a contrast," he said. Seven weeks before, he had been in the B.C. Penitentiary when fellow-prisoners demolished the prison's east wing in a million-dollar wrecking spree.

"I'm a little too old for all that rioting stuff," he said. "I'm glad to be out of it."

Sepp Tschierschwitz, Elbow Lake's director, said he is picking prisoners who have a stake in making the camp work.

"I was looking for good inmates with considerable time left to serve who'll have an investment in making this place their home."

He said the main criterion in choosing prisoners is that they don't pose risks for nearby residents.

About half the prisoners help run the camp and the rest go into the bush to work on a forestry program organized by the B.C. Forest Service. A staff of 22 supervise.

A major task in the forestry project is caring for the Douglas Forest, a huge tract of woodland encompassing the valley the camp overlooks. Prisoners replant, slash bush and clean up after loggers have worked the forest.

A portable lumber mill will also be used to provide winter work. Prisoners may some day be paid for their labor when the lumber production is sold.

Prisoners live two to a room and have a recreation trailer including television and a pool table.

Their spare time is their own, said Mr. Tschierschwitz. They can go to bed any time they like—"as long as they get up at 5 for work."

Glass Replaces Copper

TORONTO (CP) — In less than five years, Bell Canada will be transmitting telephone calls through hair-thin glass fibres instead of thick copper wires.

The fibres will conduct light, not electricity.

Each filament of glass will be able to carry thousands of messages simultaneously, while a copper wire can carry only about a dozen.

A 1½-inch-thick cable of wires will be replaced with a string of fibres one-eighth of an inch thick. The fibres will carry information with less distortion than copper wires, and for longer distances without repeater equipment.

All this technology, barely dreamed of 10 years ago, has been tested since 1973 in the Ottawa laboratories of Bell-Northern Research Ltd. Bell Canada and its affiliate, Northern Telecom Ltd., a manufacturer of telecommunications equipment, expect to start marketing it in the early 1980s.

John A. Harvey, Bell assistant vice-president for technical development, said fibre optics should solve problems such as those of Bay Street, Toronto's financial centre, where the underground capacity for cable and repeaters is becoming overtaxed and new excavation is expensive or impossible.

"Fibre optics looks like a way out of this and other problems," he said in an interview. "The technology still is evolving, however, and costs have to be brought down."

Matt Kuhn, chief of advance technology at the Ottawa laboratories, said a field test of fibre-optics communication will take place this year. The test will involve exhaustive checking of how glass fibre stands up to rough handling, whether it can be as easily spliced as copper wire and other questions.

Mr. Harvey said that if the tests provide the needed answers, the costs of fibre-optics systems can be brought down by large-volume commitments by the communication industry.

A United States military study has shown that fibre optics are already cheaper for special applications. In a fighter aircraft, for instance, 50 pounds of fibre can replace about 450 pounds of copper.

Your hair problems —are they inherited?

If you have any of the symptoms listed below, chances are that you re a victim of seborrheic dermatitis. And you should know that this condition may now be prevented in the home. Research from England showed that over 80% of patients suffering from excessive hair loss could have prevented this with the proper attention to hair and scalp care. And following on from twenty years of research into skin and hair problems, Finnish scientists have synthesized a product designed to arrest hair loss due to seborrheic dermatitis, and even stimulate dormant follicles into producing new hair.

The product is called BIOSCAL.

Symptoms you should be aware of

Flaky dandruff . . . excessively dry or oily hair . . . itchiness or tenderness of the scalp . . . hair that is brittle, lifeless or weak textured . . . excessive thinning and hair loss.

DOG TAG BARGAIN RAPPED

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — One of the few bargains left in inflation-wracked Britain is the dog licence fee, unchanged for the last 60 years at seven shillings and sixpence a year.

Some taxpayers, noting the substantial increases in radio, television and automobile licences, are beginning to complain.

"Surely dog-owners should be willing to share the cost of getting this country back on its feet," wrote W. K. Fletcher in a letter to the Manchester Evening News."

"We are a nation of dog fanatics," said Mrs. R. W. Brackenridge in a letter to The Daily Mail, "and as such, we seem more interested in looking after our dogs than our old-age pensioners."

That brought a protest from another correspondent, Ronald Williamson, who termed the comparison between dogs and pensioners "absolute nonsense."

"Our old-age pensioners are better-paid now than they have ever been, with due allowance made for the cost of living," he said. "But many old people rely on their dogs for companionship and protection and cannot afford more than a few shillings for a licence."

A government spokesman said no increase in the dog licence is likely.

"It has been suggested in the House of Commons but the general feeling is that pets are an essential part of the national welfare," he said. "Dogs in particular offer companionship and protection to great numbers of elderly men and women, especially the blind."

Sausage Boom In U.K.

BRISTOL, England (CP) — Sausages are booming in Britain and a Bristol businessman is benefiting from their popularity to the tune of nearly £20,000 ($350,000) a year.

Fred Holroyd, 48, was an insurance underwriter until he started stripping down and renovating old sausage-making machines in a small workshop behind his home.

"We renovate about 10 machines a week," he said. "We sell them all over the place—France, Gibraltar, Cyprus and South Africa. It all started because I love sausages and used to make them at home as a hobby."

Holroyd said many of the old machines look pretty decrepit when they arrive at his workshop. But some of them emerge better than new because he rebuilds them to conform with Britain's Health and Safety Act.

"Now we are getting sausage machines from Austria and Germany."

He keeps customers happy by treating them to sausage suppers at his home.

"I don't employ salesman. Most of my selling is done over the phone and that way you can easily lose touch with customers. Many of them are people who can't get away during the week, so we invite them to bring the wife and kids to a sausage supper on Sundays. We lay on hard and soft drinks as well.

"We get a 60-per-cent sales hit at these suppers and it promotes all kinds of goodwill in the neighborhood."

Complaints On Police Are Aired

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia provincial police commission has devised a method that allows anyone to file a complaint against a municipal police officer and ensures a hearing will be held on every complaint.

At the same time, the system allows the officer who has had the complaint lodged against him to defend himself publicly if he chooses.

The program was adopted here after it was tried successfully in other parts of Canada.

Police commission chairman H.A. Porter, a retired admiral, says the system provides that local complaints will be handled locally and, if no solution is found, by a provincial agency.

Municipal boards of police commissioners are used to deal with disputes at this level. The farther the complaint advances through the system, the more formal the procedures become.

Admiral Porter says he is encouraged by the early results of the program.

Until now complaints against municipal police officers in Nova Scotia were subject to investigation only by the force which had the complaint lodged against it.

Famed Gobelin Tapestries Extinct?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gobelin tapestries, the famous wall hangings woven for more than 300 years in France and Germany, may soon be available only in museums.

Today's Gobelin weavers range in age from 50 to 80 and no younger artisans can be found to replace them, says Vancouver importer Claus Ferlow.

"The young people do not want to spend the time at weaving," he said. "They want to work in the factories and make money—tradition is nothing.

"They do not have the feeling of color, the knowledge to bring the right colors together."

Mr. Ferlow has imported a shipment of the tapestries, woven from pure wool, to sell in his Vancouver interior decorating store.

"It takes years to learn the craft," he said. "No two tapestries are alike. Each is an original work of art and we are trying to keep it alive."

The Gobelin family started the tradition in the early 1600s when they began weaving tapestries at their Paris dye works. In 1662, the king took over the plant. The tapestries now are woven in West Germany.

The heavy tools and handweaving guarantee a tapestry that will last indefinitely, said Mr. Ferlow, who has seen examples more than 300 years old.

Used originally as room dividers, the tapestries now find a role as wall hangings. They range in price from $345 to $1,130 and feature biblical designs, European legends and modern themes.

"The tapestries are handwoven on large hand looms where the weaver is always working with the muscle," said Mr. Ferlow.

BABY CAN SEE

SHEFFIELD, England (CP) — Christian Reeder, born deaf and blind 25 months ago, can see now.

In two operations at the Sheffield Royal Infirmary, surgeons inserted an air bubble into each eye to act as a magnifying glass and fitted him with special glasses.

"When he was born, the doctors told us he would only be able to make out blurred shapes," said Christian's mother. "Now he can watch television and join in family games with his sister and two brothers.

Christian's father said the child's sight is not fully restored but that the doctors predicted improvement during the next year.

MISS VERNA DYKE
I was scheduled for surgery on Monday Morning. Through Brother McKaig's prayer Sunday night, I was instantly healed. All symptoms immediately vanished. I have been well ever since.
MR. MICHAEL ROACH
For several years, doctors could do nothing for my one ear which was deaf. In Rev. McKaig's crusade, I was instantly healed. I can now hear perfectly.
MR. HAROLD MORRISON
My vision had been deteriorating rapidly. I was healed instantly at the Peoples Community Church, so that now I can even read small print.

Rev. A. C. McKaig
MRS. PAT MORRISON
I received an instant filling in my teeth this past week as a result of miracle faith during the crusade.
MR. PAT HENNINGS
I was involved in a serious automobile accident and could not put any weight on one leg that had been smashed. It was 2 inches shorter than the other. When Brother Griggs and Brother McKaig prayed for me, I was instantly healed. My leg grew out 2 inches. There is no pain in my foot now. I can walk perfectly.
MR. FRED SHAUNNESY
I had arthritis in my spine for years and could never sleep well at night. I was instantly healed when I was prayed for at the Peoples Community Church. The pain left. I have been sleeping soundly at night ever since.
Listen to Russell Griggs DAILY on KARI 550 at 2:45 p.m.

Bach again.

Edward Norman, organist of St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra and Mason, will give second of two recitals devoted to organ music of J. S. Bach at 8 p.m. Wednesday. He will play selection of some of most significant of Bach's organ music, including two celebrated works, Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor and Toccata and Fugue in D Minor. There will also be selection of choral preludes and a trio-sonata. Admission is $2 by program at door.

Sooke, Royal Oak

Baptists set up 2 fellowships

Central Baptist Church, which later this year will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its founding by Rev. Dr. J. B. Rowell, has established two fellowship churches, one in Sooke and one in Royal Oak.

The Sooke church began meetings last September. It now has a full time pastor, Bill van de Leur, and a congregation of about 60 people who meet in Sooke elementary school at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sundays.

Week night activities are held in the old Brethren hall at Milne's Landing.

The Saanich location for the second fellowship was decided by a committee which surveyed the proximity of churches to areas of growth in Greater Victoria.

"We came up with the area bounded by Douglas and Trans-Canada Highway and reaching north into Royal Oak," said Alex Shook, pastor of the new fellowship, in an interview this week.

The first service was held last Sunday in Royal Oak School, 4564 West Saanich Road.

Shook is "a pioneer, a church planter," according to Robert Holmes, pastor of Central Baptist.

"We brought him here from Montreal 1½ years ago to assist us in our planning for this type of outreach," Holmes said.

"We've been considering it for some time and this is the culmination of a long time of planning. We've had doors closed on us in the form of zoning and other roadblocks but I believe we now have a clear, green light to go ahead."

In the past few years the congregation had considered building a new church in a growing area but, with the two fellowships, will continue to expand through them.

About 35 people attended the first service in Royal Oak school last Sunday. The nucleus for the group had been formed at Bible study meetings in private homes. This Saturday young people from Central Baptist will be distributing fliers in the area telling about the new fellowship.

The Sunday meeting, from 10 a.m. till noon, is a blend of worship, programmed Bible studies, group discussion and Bible exposition, Shook explained. It is for all ages, nursery through adult, he said.

His basic philosophy is based on Ephesians 4 which exhorts Christians to unity and beseeches "that ye walk worthy of the Vocation wherewith ye are called."

"This produces a different church setup," Shook said. "It's based on what I envision my job to be which is to prepare Christians to minister. You could call it a mutual ministry through group study."

Over a period of 20 years he has compiled a guidebook incorporating his method for bringing about this mutual ministry. The book is called The Ten Steps of Growth.

Shook, who came to Victoria as associate minister at Central, founded his first two churches in Toronto after being ordained in 1955. After nine years he moved on to Ottawa where he established another.

About 14 years ago he went to Montreal and founded a Baptist church in Greenfield Park on the south shore.

A native of Ottawa, he grew up in Toronto and served in the signals and intelligence corps of the Army in the Second World War.

One of his last assignments was working with the Dutch underground.

Central's outreach work is assisted by the phone mission committee of the B.C. Convention of Baptist Churches and the Trans-Canada Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches.

Choir on program

The 50-voice choir of Trinity Christian Centre will take part in a program of music and praise at 7 p.m. Sunday in First United Church, Quadra at Balmoral.

The choir, under the direction of Mary Ellen Kingsfield, presented the program, under the title Alleluia, at the University of Victoria and William Head prison just before Christmas.

The choir will go to Nanaimo and Campbell River for concerts in April.

During the program this Sunday gospel testimonies will be given. The collection will be shared with an orphanage in Mexico.

B.C. farm land needed

Churches join to bring change in nation's policy

British Columbia's agricultural land should be kept for food production and Canadian International Development Agency funds should be continued to farmers overseas to help them grow food.

These are the messages that Victoria's interchurch committee for World Development Education wants to get across to the public and to the lawmakers.

As part of the program, Ten Days for World Development, the committee will give a free, public showing of a CTV film, Grains of Conflict, from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Monday in Newcombe auditorium.

Five hundred valentines have been sent to MLAs, ministers and others inviting them to the showing.

Ten Days for World Development, which began Friday, is a joint education program of the Anglican, Catholic, Lutheran, Presbyterian and United Churches of Canada. Its goal is to bring about changes in Canadian public policy which will broaden the opportunities for human growth, especially by the peoples of developing countries.

To achieve this goal participants are working to mobilize public opinion favorable to such changes, to demonstrate positive public opinion to policy makers and to counter resistance to these changes.

Now in its fifth year, Ten Days continues its support of the international movement towards a new international economic order.

The focus for 1977 is Food. Between now and Feb. 21 Frances Moore Lappe, author of Diet for a Small Planet, and co-director of the Institute for Food and Development Policy at Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y., will visit Canada for public appearances.

She will be heard from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday on the CBC radio program Cross Country Checkup and on Morningside, CBC morning radio program, on Monday.

Her Canadian appearances will coincide with the publication of Food First, an original political analysis of the world food situation co-authored by her and Joseph Collins, with whom she founded the institute.

Ms. Lappe, who is 32, has worked on such projects as help for underprivileged students, fair housing and welfare rights. Since 1970 she has focused on hunger. Since she wrote Diet for a Small Planet, now in its 14th printing, she has continued to study, write and speak widely on world hunger.

Ms. Lappe will not be coming to Vancouver Island but her co-worker Collins will hold a workshop in Chemainus on March 5. It is being arranged by Rev. John Greene of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Chemainus.

Later in March, Sadie Vernon of Belize, Central America, will come to Victoria in connection with the program. A Quaker, she is working on ways of improving the diets of people in Central America and the Caribbean.

The Victoria interchurch committee has sparked various activities and events in local churches.

A bumper sticker with the words Live Simply So Others Can Simply Live is beng printed for distribution to church members.

Gospel singer concert today

Gospel singer Marj Snyder of Santa Barbara, Calif., will give a concert at 7:30 p.m. today in Emmanuel Baptist Church. The musical group Rainbow will also be featured. The concert, presented by Rainbow Productions in co-operation with the Come Together TV program, will be free.

Health guild meeting Wednesday night

The evening section of the Canadian Guild of Health, Victoria branch, will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the rector's office at St. Philip's Anglican Church, Neil at Eastdowne.

There will be a celebration of communion and the laying on of hands at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Ruth Owens, a Victoria delegate to the B.C. Conference on the Family, will be guest speaker.

The next meeting of the daytime section of the guild will take place Thursday, Feb. 24, in St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra at Mason. The executive will meet at noon in the lounge of the old rectory.

There will be a service of intercession with the laying on of hands at 1:30 p.m. in the chapel followed by a general meeting at 2 p.m. in the lower church hall.

Guest speaker will be Rev. Robert Vaughan, Baptist minister, psychologist and counsellor.

Four appearances

Phoenix sister here all week

Sister Josefa from the Sisterhood of Canaan in the Desert in Phoenix, Ariz., will make four appearances in Victoria next week.

The sisterhood was founded in Darmstadt, West Germany, just after the war by Mother Basilea Schlink, and now has branches in Greece, England, Italy, Scandinavia and Jerusalem as well as the one in Arizona.

The Evangelical Lutheran sisterhood has provided retreats where people find God to be real and learn to live in joy and reconciliation.

Sister Josefa will meet with local clergy at two luncheon meetings next week.

She will speak at 10 a.m. Wednesday in Emmanuel Baptist Church and at 8 p.m. the same day in Metropolitan United. On Thursday she will be at Emmanuel Baptist at 10 a.m. and at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral at 8 p.m.

Her visit is being sponsored by the Bethany Joy Society.

Boarding Homes Dispute Gov't Rates

Two operators of Vancouver Island boarding homes for mentally-handicapped adults say they will sue the government for payment in a dispute over welfare rates.

Ron Powell, who operates Pendragon House in Cumberland, and Cyril Le Blanc, operator of Ships Point Lodge at Fanny Bay, said they have received no payments from the government since the end of November.

Powell's home cares for 10 people and Le Blanc's has 12. They and their wives are the only staff. Care of all residents is paid for by provincial grants.

The operators said the trouble started when the government announced higher grants in October, $340 a month for residents requiring personal care and $500 for those requiring intermediate care.

Prior to that the operators had been paid a lower rate but also a varying allowance for each charge to cover the degree of their handicap and to finance activity programs.

The new rates meant a $70 a month across-the-board increase for each resident, Powell said, and on the strength of that he bought a used station wagon for $5,000, needed to convey them to various activities.

It wasn't until December the operators were advised by letter they would lose the personal assessment and program grants, leaving Powell with a net grant increase of $4 per month per patient.

The operators are arguing most if not all of their residents requirt enough care to qualify for the $500 a month grant. The dispute has resulted in all payments since November being stopped and it is money owed them they plan suing for, they said.

They have been shuffled around the bureaucratic mill while trying to get their troubles settled and the government still hasn't specified whether it will or won't pay the soughte - after rates, Le Blanc and Powell said.

A source in the provincial health department, who declined to be identified, said Friday there are two sides to the argument.

The boarding home residents are mobile and go to a workshop four days a week, that source said.

Another worker in the department said the residents in the two boarding homes were assessed by a mental health boarding home worker who was supported in her assessment by the local medical health officer.

Prisoner Will Be $16,000 Richer

STILLWATER, Minn. (AP) — Jim Willman expects to come out of the Minnesota state prison in two years with $16,000 in his pocket.

He's not the warden. Nor a card shark who cleaned up on fellow-prisoners. Nor a best-selling author who caught the public eye with a new twist to prison life.

Willman, a 38-year-old former tool-and-die maker, is operations manager and a member of the board of directors of Stillwater Data Processing Systems Inc.

In 1971, he was convicted of conspiracy in the first-degree murder of his wife through a hired killer, who testified he was paid $1,300 of $2,000 agreed on. The informant tipped off police, and an undercover detective was present at the time of the payment.

Since October, 1971, he has been serving a term of up to 10 years. The husky, dark-haired prisoner wears a uniform but otherwise is far removed from such prison chores as the twine factory or the machine shop.

And his $4.62-an-hour pay contrasts with the average prison shop wage of $1.75 a day.

The data-processing system is the product of a state law which permits private businesses to go behind bars to help prepare prisoners for worth-while jobs when they're released.

The firm, begun last June, handles work for the state department of administration, Hennepin County, University of Minnesota and three private firms. It is negotiating with two others.

A corrections department official describes Minnesota's as the initial program and says Pennsylvania, Illinois, Washington, Oklahoma and Texas are developing or considering similar ones.

Private ventures at two other state correctional institutions turn out fishing lures, golf balls and fence posts. Prisoners get $1.75 to $2.20 an hour there.

Several area firms, including four manufacturers of computers and business machines, loaned expertise in setting up the data-processing unit.

The 14-member board of directors includes 10 from private businesses, as well as Willman and William Ward, president-marketing representative in Stillwater Data.

Three area foundations played roles in generating $85,000 capital.

"Our revenue for November was $5,000," said Ward, who was hired from outside the prisor. "We should realize $6,000 for December and $6,500 for January. Our expenses are about $7,700 a month. Our main problem now is training people, not marketing."

Ward said 15 prisoners have been trained but half dropped out or couldn't handle the work.

Ward, 30, an eight-year data processing veteran and former air force jet engine mechanic, said the firm is being run "chiefly as a business, not a sociological outlet.

"We go out and solicit business, and if we can do work for them at a cost-effective rate we'll do it."

"That's not to say we're opposed to addressing the sociological matters along the way if we can," added Willman. "But we must deliver a quality service at a competitive price."

Stillwater Data handles such information as marketing, sales analysis, inventory and scheduling for its customers.

Willman probably will stay in computer work rather than go back to the tool-and-die trade when he gets out.

In addition to Ward and Willman, three men work in the 1,000-square-foot room at the prison which the company leases. Three are in work-release programs outside.

The firm's "hardware" consists of a key-punch machine and a tele-terminal which links with other computers by telephone.

Jerry Killoran, 39, is a programmer who has studied computer operations in the prison's educational unit since 1969. He earns $3.45 an hour and calls it a good job.

Donald Gray, 33, formerly in drafting classes, likes the dataprocessing business better. "It's a much better opportunity than turning out twine. I figure I'll be able to save about $10,000 if I'm here another two to three years." He gets $3 an hour.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, February 13

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on achievement, independence, better understanding between you and one in position of authority. You make room for yourself at top. Aquarius, Capricorn and Leo could figure prominently. Be aware of basic requirements — familiarize yourself with details, fine print.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with renewed spiritual strength, ability to learn, to project into furutre, to comprehend potential as contrasted to short-range view. Plan ahead for travel, study. Accent on correspondence, verification from member of opposite sex concerning "feelings."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Discussion with partner, mate is overdue — in connection with investments, taxes, hidden clauses, money and how it gets that way. Adjustment indicated in domestic area. Be diplomatic for best results. Intelligent concession can spell eventual progress.

CANCER (June 21-July22): Lie low; play waiting game. Don't be rushed into agreements. Legal matters, in connection with partnership, could be high on agenda. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Judgment, timing might not be on target. Know it and give yourself "margin for error."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stick to issues — insist on fact, not fantasy. Older individual is willing to share experiences. Know it and take advantage of it. Don't permit pride to block progress. Look for opportunity to change routine. You need it — you require break, a chance to recuperate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be aware of opportunity beckoning from afar. Means don't miss chance because you are immersed in details. Overall view is necessary if you are to progress. Aries. Libra figure prominently. Finish rather than initiate project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can break through red tape; you get chance to be more independent, to express views in meaningful fashion. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Property affairs, matters of security command attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Short trip, involving relatives, could be on agenda. Follow through on hunch. Teach, share knowledge. Be gracious to older woman who does have your best interests at heart. Cancer, Aquarius, Capricorn figure in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on finances, valuables, personal possessions. Diversify — ask questions. Be curious and not ashamed of admitting what you don't know. Social affair could lead to contacts valuable for your future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle is such that you are more popular, confident; you find ways of expressing views in dynamic manner. You can overcome restrictions; tear down now for purpose of rebuilding on a more solid base.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20. Feb. 18): Improve communications with one who is temporarily confined to home, hospital. Glimpse behind scenes for valid answers. Your dreams now could be prophetic. Know it and pay attention!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on desire, wish fulfillment, romance, ability to create, express, to get major points across to more persons. Family backing is forthcoming — know it and be confident. Sense of security will be enhanced.

IF FEBRUARY 13th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are recovering from emotional setback — social life will be accelerated in 1977. You will travel, experiment; you'll be happier and could have a weight problem. May will be a significant month. You were on your own early — you are noted for breaking rules, breaking from tradition. Leo, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, February 14

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your inquiries bring results. You may not agree with all the answers received, but you're not ignored. Gemini, Virgo persons command personal attention. Accent on prestige, legalities, unique agreements. Get yourself a "Philadelphia lawyer"!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Low key approach is best — be diplomatic, make concessions to family. If you attempt to force issues, you could incite "rebelión". Know it and act accordingly. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play key roles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Perfect methods, streamline techniques. Imprint style — your own way now is best course to pursue. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles. Be positive about quotations, rights, permissions, basic material, Keep diet, health resolutions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Member of opposite sex wants you to make commitment. Perhaps you should — key is to precieve what is important to you. Forget what others think should be of importance to you. Decide what you need, professionally and personally — and do something about it. You'll see!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You complete project, gain added recognition and you deal successfully with one who has chip on shoulder. Basic issues are featured. What you feared is a paper tager and you prove it to yourself. Celebrate! Be cheerful, optimistic. You are going to make progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Throw out previous, false starts. Get rid of icons with clay feet. Now, you get proverbial second chance. Creative juices flow. You come alive. Your actions, decisions, reactions are meaningful. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow through on hunch, teaching program. Money, possessions, security — these areas are shaken — there is the sound of rattle, roll — you reorganize, redistribute and emerge new, fresh, with some doubt but more courage. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo individuals figure in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stay out of traffic, if possible. Otherwise, take special precautions without being "snakebit". You gain access to privileged information. A person who had been secretive may now open up and you might be amazed at what is revealed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to review, revise, to tear down for purpose of rebuilding. Accent on collections, payments, purchase of luxury item. You receive message which shows that you have earned approval — you feel better and you take definite steps to correct a mistake. That is good!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle is such that you have second thoughts, some doubts but an overall feeling of commitment, confidence. Be ready for change of scenery. Message elevates spirits. Written word aids in resolving dilemma. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A family member has secret. It could be revealed. Don't cast first stone. One who means much to you could be temporarily incapacitated. There is serious talk about home, sale, purchase, residence change. Basically, it is value that determines course of action. You'll understand!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friend wants your opinion regarding policy and direction. Be frank, but realize those asking advice don't always seek truth Be wary lest you are drawn into controversy which actually should not involve you. A "money wish" is closer to fulfillment than you might suspect.

IF FEBRUARY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have great intellectual curiosity, ability to express yourself — you are dynamic, versatile, stubborn and attractive to opposite sex. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. April could be your most significant month of 1977, a year which sees you establishing a foothold on emotional-financial security.

Buying Seeds? Know the Varietal Names

jack beastall

Beside me on the desk are three packets of carrot seed put up by three different seed companies. The pictures on the packets are identical, and the packets were produced by the same printing firm, but there is a big difference in the contents.

One is a short stumpy carrot for early sowing in a greenhouse or coldframe; the next is a medium long for early sowings outdoors; the third is a long type for a maincrop maturing in late summer and early fall.

There is no way of telling which is which from the pictures. The only clue to the contents is the varietal name printed over the top of the picture.

A picture is said to be worth a thousand words. Knowing this to be true the package designers spend their lives thinking up designs and color combinations that will impress on the mind of the buying public a certain product.

In turn, the buying public has become increasingly dependant on mental pictures to identify the products they wish to buy.

Home gardeners, whom we like to classify as sensible, down-to-earth people, are not immune to this new trend of being guided by pictures instead of by the printing on the label.

As a result, an increasing number of reports reach us each year of beans that do not look like any bean the gardener has previously grown; beets that turn out gold instead of red; cabbage red instead of green; and carrots that are round in shape just like beet.

In each instance where the gardener has been able to produce the packet in which the seed was purchased the resulting plants agree with the varietal name of the vegetable, but not always with the variety depicted in the picture on the packet.

The majority of those reporting admit they have no seed catalog for guidance nor a modern vegetable gardening book, nor do they know anything about different varieties.

Only one in seven seems to have made a list of seeds needed before going shopping, the rest being impulse shoppers on seeing a seed display rack.

The odds against them obtaining the vegetable variety they have previously grown is clear when we find one seed catalog lists 28 varieties of carrots, 88 of tomatoes, 50 of cabbage and 40 of onions. In each group there are early, mid-season, and late varieties; those suited to various types of soils and growing seasons; coldframe, greenhouse and forcing types; sizes ranging from miniatures to giants.

Also included in each group are commercial varieties which mature the entire crop within a day or so, and home garden varieties not suited to long distance shipping, exceptionally delicious in texture and flavor, and maturing over a longer period of time which makes them ideal for the the average family.

Only by knowing the varietalk names can the gardener distinguish between the varieties and select the one suited to local soils and weather conditions. Pictures will never depict these important differences.

Another thing to be remembered is that many of the varieeties found in the average display rack are not suited to the our long, slow, cool growing season; the ones that are suited must be looked for by name.

Any variety of vegetable not sown at the right time will give a disappointing crop.

Take cabbage for example; spring cabbage is sown in August and used in March and April. If sown in the spring the plants will run to flower as soon as the weather gets warm. Summer cabbage is sown in early spring to mature in the warm weather; fall and winter cabbage are sown in late spring to early summer, the fall varieties maturing as the temperatures cool and the winter varieteies being hardy to much lower temperatures.

Since our topic today is seeds it would seem appropriate to mention vegetable hybrids, because these are taking the place of varieties some gardeners have grown almost from childhood.

A hybrid is the result of deliberate controlled crossing of two or more plants to bring out desirable characteristics, such as improved stamina or resistance to adverse weather, resistance to disease, compatability to a large range of soil types, heavier cropping, better texture or flavor.

In today's seed cataglogs we find many vegetables listed as "F1 hybrid". These are the first generation of seed from a controlled cross, and every plant will be essentially the same, that is, the same color of flower or the same quality of vegetable. The only way more seed exactly the same can be obtained is by repeating the same cross with the original parents, not necessarily the same plants but the same species or varieties.

When these hybrids are grown in the home garden they will again produce seed, such as the seed in a hybrid squash or cucumber, a hybrid tomato, a hybrid pea or bean.

These seeds are the result of "open" pollination, either with the plant's own pollen or with compatible pollen from a related crop close by. They are a second crossing of a hybrid and are referred to as a F2 hybrid.

When this second cross is made the resultant plants are no longer all alike. The progency will show characteristics of all ancestors. The chance of having a desirable seedling is remote even when the cross is carefully planned, and almost non-existent when open pollination takes place.

For generations it was common practice for home gardeners to save seed of any vegetable that had particular appeal, and by careful selection over the years they obtained an improved form that was all their own.

This is still possible with many vegetables we grow today, but not with those listed as F1 hybrids. The reason that packets, and catalog listings, state the seed is F1 is to warn the gardener that saved seed will not give the same plants as were produced from the purchased seed.

Butterness, coarse inedible flesh, flowering without producing an edible head or root, extreme dwarfness or extreme height, are a few of the differences that have been traced to saving seed from a F1 hybrid.

Sow sweet pea seeds in small containers in porch, cool window or frost-free greenhouse. After germination, keep them cool and growing slowly to prevent legginess and weakness.

Anemone corms and ranunculus tubers can be planted for fine show of color in summer. Choose well drained spot or tubs on sunny balcony; use rich, humusy soil to hold summer moisture.

If not done, plant shallots and garlic cloves in rich deep and well drained soil. Or use a portable cold frame over a prepared piece of ground. We still cannot be sure that no cold weather will be experienced.

For a few early potatoes choose half dozen tubers with signs of "eyes." First green the tubers in strong light but low temperature — less than 10 deg. C. When well greened, place tubers with eyes up in shallow box of damp sand or sandy peat, with the mixture well up and lightly over the tops. Keep indoors in moderate light and 15 deg. C. approx. for three to four weeks; then plant in tub of good compost outdoors (if mild) in sheltered sunny place. Prepare to cover tub with double sacking against night frost if needed.

Builders Intend To Celebrate

VANCOUVER (CP) — National Heritage Day, as yet a non-existant statutory holiday which was tied up in House of Commons debate this year, will still be enjoyed by unionized construction workers in British Columbia.

Ray Gauthier, B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council secretary-treasurer, said Friday that the building trades didn't wait for the government to proclaim the holiday — they just negotiated it into this year's contract for Feb. 21.

Other unions have negotiated the holiday, contingent on a government proclamation.

Weddings

Doucette—Clapp

Archdeacon C.E.F. Wolff officiated at a double-ring ceremony in St. Luke's Anglican Church on January 22, 1977, at 7 p.m. when Margo Nancy, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Clapp, Victoria, B.C. became the bride of Sub.-Lt. Barry Lee Doucette, eldest son of Capt. and Mrs. Raymond F. Doucette, Shearwater, N.S.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother and father, wore a lovely floor length gown of white lace over taffeta. It featured a square neckline with puffed sleeves, and a full skirt layered with lace worn over a crinoline. Her tulle veil bordered with lace, was floor length, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white baby's breath. Mrs. Ramona Jamison was matron of honour, and the bridesmaids were Miss Michele Clapp, sister of the bride, and Miss Jill Craig, cousin of the bride. They wore identical long halter-neck gowns of red jersey silk topped with short red chiffon capes, and carried bouquets of white ribbon, carnations and baby's breath. The groom's best man was Lieut. Wally Istchenko and his ushers were Sub.-Lts. Tim Addison and Laurie Kane.

The reception was held at the Officers' Wardroom where the wedding cake was cut by a sword of the groom's family. The toast to the bride was given by her uncle Mr. Ken Clapp. For her going away outfit Margo wore a black velvet gaucho jumper, with a full sleeved red jersey silk blouse and black accessories.

Out of town guests attending were: Capt. and Mrs. R. F. Doucette, N.S., Mrs. Gwen Doucette, St. Jean, Quebec, J. A. Clapp, Powell River, Ken Clapp, Vancouver, Colleen Goddue, Parksville, Lieut. Wally Istchenko, Moose Jaw, Sask., and Ted Jones, Campbell River.

After a skiing honeymoon, the couple took up residence in Victoria.

Ellis—Arrowsmith

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Arrowsmith of Burnley, England, announce with pleasure the marriage of their daughter Linda Anne, to Mr. Raymond Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ellis of Liverpool, England. Rev. W. J. Hill officiated at the double-ring ceremony which took place in the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Victoria, B.C. on Saturday, Jan. 8th, 1977, at 1 p.m. The groom's parents travelled from England at Christmas and were present for the occasion.

Following a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Pinkney, the couple left on a honeymoon to Vancouver and Harrison Hot Springs, and have now taken up residence in Victoria.

Anniversary

Dempster 50th

The Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Dempster, Camrose Crescent, was celebrated Saturday, February 5th, at a reception held at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Dempster, Landeen Place. Mrs. Jina Simpson, who attended the bride of fifty years ago, was also present. Mr. W. Brown proposed the toast and read letters of congratulations from the Prime Minister, Premier and Lieutenant-Governor. Two grandsons, Terence and Barry, also reside in Victoria. The couple concluded the celebration with a family dinner at the Dingle House.

ARDMORE GOLF COURSE IS ideal for retired men and women, other courses in the region have either too many hills or are too blessed long. Most were designed for the likes of Julius Boros or billy goats. It is sad that most golf course designers think only about the low handicappers. Ardmore is designed for retired folks and average golfers. As Telroy Aylor says it's a nice tricky course but you don't have to kill yourself to play it. Ardmore announces openings in 5-day memberships for people under 65 years and 5 day memberships for seniors. No openings for 7-day memberships. Phone 656-9087.

VICTORIA DODGE CHRYSLER ON YATES

DOES IT AGAIN

We're busting at the seams
SO
WE'VE INVOICE PRICED ALL OUR UNITS
over 200 new and used to choose from

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:
1. Each new and used vehicle will have our stock sheet on the windshield, illustrating the options and the retail price.
2. Each stock sheet will show the lowest possible price we can sell the vehicle at.
3. Look all 200 units over, check the options, check the retail price, look at our low low price. If you want the car or truck, pull the stock sheet off the vehicle and go to one of the offices, and one of our representatives will write the sales order for you, arrange financing, and appraise your trade-in.
4. Each new car carries Chrysler's 12-month 12,000 Mile Warranty.
5. Each unit sold in FEBBRUARY RECEIVES THREE YEARS OIL CHANGES AT NO CHARGE.
6. All used cars 1972 or newer carry 100% 30-Day power train warranty — the doubt is out at Victoria Dodge.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Victoria Won't Ask For CUPE Mediator

The Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association has decided not to request the services of a government mediator in its efforts to reach 1977 contracts with locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The association's negotiating committee decided against the action Friday because "there is too much confusion" among the members of the locals involved.

The committee said the confusion results from a settlement between the GVLRA and Victoria's inside workers, members of CUPE Local 388, and the decision by another local to withdraw from the joint negotiating committee.

Members of Local 1978, representing Capital Region District employees, voted at a meeting Thursday to pull out of the CUPE committee because they disapproved of the association's contract demands.

That decision led to the resignation of Local president Daryl Anderson who was the spokesman for the joint committee.

"It is doubtful if the efforts of a mediation officer would serve any useful purpose at this time in our attempt to reach a settlement," CVLRA chief negotiator Carl Anshelm said.

Talks between the GVLRA and the seven CUPE locals in the committee at that time broke off Tuesday and Anshelm said the following day that he would ask for a mediator.

CUPE spokesman Tom Smith said Friday he doesn't look upon the withdrawal of Local 1978 from the joint committee as a sign of a serious fragmentation among the CUPE locals.

He said there will be another meeting of the local next week and he is hopeful that "cooler heads will prevail" at that time and consideration will be given to what is in the best interests of all the locals.

"I am hopeful the thing will be remedied and we can get back to bargaining collectively with Anshelm," he said.

He said if the employees involved are to have their needs met they are going to have to act collectively because that is what the employer are doing.

He said members of the joint negotiating committee will meet early next week to determine what action to take next.

The joint committee has put forward a proposal for a one-year agreement providing increases in wages and fringe benefits of between 10½ and 12 per cent in the locals' estimate.

The employers, represented by the GVLRA, have offered a two-year agreement allowing six per cent in the first year and four per cent in the second.

Trusty Walks Away

For the first time in at least 30 years a trusty at the city police jail got fed up and walked out.

Chief Jack Gregory said Russell Thomas Pawlyk, 31, who was serving 30 days for false pretence, left Wednesday afternoon.

Gregory said Pawlyk had been assigned to sweep the garage at the station at 625 Fisgard and at 4 p.m. during a shift change it was noticed he had gone.

Pawlyk had only 10 days left to serve.

"We don't understand what happened," said Insp. Doug Grant. "Perhaps he had some family problems. We don't know."

Grant said it was the first time in his 30 years with the department that a trusty had walked away.

Pawlyk is described as five feet seven inches tall, about 175 pounds, with blue eyes, brown hair and fair complexion.

Apartment Trend Continues

A total of 393 apartment units were started in the Victoria area during January, up 13 per cent from last year, but there was a decline in single family homes.

The trend toward apartment construction is expected to continue for most of the year.

Only 47 single family homes were started in January, down 37 per cent from 75 in the same month last year.

There were 14 duplex units started, up from 12 last January.

This brought the total number of starts for January to 454, up from 434.

There were 424 housing units completed during the month. These included 138 single family homes, 30 duplex units, 44 row houses and 212 apartment units, all of which had been started last year.

In the corresponding month last year there had been 337 completions, consisting of 236 single family homes, 20 duplex units, 14 row houses and only 67 apartment units.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation officials said the pace of apartment construction could be expected to decline late this year. The current apartment vacancy rate is estimated at 0.6 per cent but it could go as high as three pe cent by this summer when apartments under construction are completed.

Apartments continue to be an attractive vehicle for investors, however, because of federal tax benefits which continue throughout the year.

1,062 Charged with Crimes Following Legal 'Bugging'

OTTAWA (CP) — Police tapped 1,224 telephones or other communication devices in 1976 and used microphones to bug everything from residences to unspecified "containers," Solicitor-General Francis Fox reported Friday.

The tape and bugs were authorized by judges under the 1974 Protection of Privacy Act. The report, tabled by Mr. Fox in the Commons, said the police invasions of privacy resulted in 1,062 arrests, including 824 whose names were not set out in the applications for authorization to wiretap or bug.

A second report said 517 warrants authorizing electronic eavesdropping under the Official Secrets Act were issued in 1976. The average time the warrants were in force was just under 241 days.

The Official Secrets Act report said the interceptions were "vital and indispensable investigative aids to supplement, verify or disprove information derived from other sources."

It said the technique was used to check out subversive activity "both in the sphere of foreign intelligence activities directed towards gathering intelligence information relating to Canada and in the violent, terrorist or criminal activities directed towards accomplishing governmental change in Canada or elsewhere."

The more-detailed Protection of Privacy Act report said proceedings were recommended against 368 persons identified in authorizations. But 45 of these were picked up for an offence unspecified in the authorization and 77 more for an offence for which authorization to eavesdrop electronically may not be given.

"While using interceptions . . . to investigate other offences, law enforcement officers frequently become aware of other offences which had been previously unknown or unreported," the report said. Arrests sometimes resulted in several countries.

More than 1,200 authorizations specified offences under the Narcotics Control Act. The report said substantial quantities of illicit narcotics were seized as a result.

Taxman Convicts 255

OTTAWA (FP) — Investigations by Revenue Canada led to 255 Canadians being convicted of tax evasion in 1976, a federal official said Friday.

The individuals were involved in 173 tax evasion cases taken to court. All told, the government gained over $12 million in tax owed and penalties assessed against the culprits.

The official confirmed that Revenue Canada taxation authorities are moving to industry-wide audit investigations where widespread tax evasion is suspected.

The needle trades and the scrap metal industry have been under investigation for more than a year to track down tax evaders.

A senior official of Revenue Canada said it is hard to spot any trend in tax evasion because the amounts involved from case to case can vary widely.

But with high rates of taxation the prospect of tax evasion is very tempting for some citizens, he said.

The incidence of tax evasion, certainly is not diminishing, he observed.

In the needle trades, tax officers are looking for the use of false invoices.

The scrap metal industry lends itself to many cash transactions and it is easy to evade tax on these.

Old Coins Clue To Slaying

DUNCAN — RCMP here are seeking public help in locating some old coins and bills that belonged to a 70-year-old man who died as a result of a beating Jan. 31.

Police said the money was missing when the body of Robert Geddes Ferguson was found in his home at 3379 New Lake Cowichan Highway.

The bills included an old King George VI $50 and a 25-cent "shin-plaster."

Also missing are two old American silver dollars, but police are uncertain of the dates. They were either before 1906 or sometime during the 1920s, a spokesman said.

Police said Ferguson had a large coin and bill collection at one time but sold it keeping only a few items for sentimental reasons.

Sleaze and Bitch Dresses Popular

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three West Coast designers are attracting attention across Canada with their innovative ideas.

Christopher Ryan, known for what have been termed his sleaze and bitch dresses, now prevails in printed prints in his new collection of sinuous jerseys and polyester satins.

Ryan's penchant for body-close fabrics stretches to his collection of men's shirts, using ties which may be left open or closed according to discretion.

He also bares what he dares with tunics and blouson tops, using a co-ordinated bandeau.

Diana Carey has been shaping new ideas in supple leather for men and the big seller is the bloused jacket.

Her latest jacket has inside zippers, an abundance of pockets and can be rolled into a compact ball for travel.

Hong Kong Eyes Victoria

Denis Browne has moved to Victoria "to sort of retire" but also to look at investment opportunities for Hong Kong funds in Victoria area developments.

Browne, 52, has extensive business connections in the British colony after working there for 10 years.

He was working in real estate in England when the opportunity came to move to Hong Kong in 1966.

"I became employed by the Hong Kong Land Co. Ltd., which, I believe, is the largest real estate development company in the world."

"We paid $50 million for a building lot for a 52-storey apartment building in Hong Kong. That was seven years ago. At the time it was a world record for a building lot of that size."

The apartment itself cost only $20 million to construct. At 52 storeys, it continues to be the tallest building in Southeast Asia.

But it is a profitable venture with apartments renting at $2,000 or more per month in Hong Kong.

"The cost of living is very high there. Rents are expensive and all food for a western diet has to be imported.

"On the other hand, people live very well. We had three servants which is fewer than most people have. We had a cook, a driver and a gardener."

The Browne family consists of himself, his wife and a son, four. They also have two adult children living in England

"It was a jolly good life in Hong Kong with people to do everything for you. We have had to adjust to the North American style of living to do everything ourselves here in Victoria.

"But it's a bit of a relief to be without servants. It is pleasant to have the privacy and my wife enjoys doing the cooking on her own. In Hong Kong it was fine for a while but there never was any privacy at all. They thought nothing of walking into a room at any time. The cook would walk in while I was having a bath. There was no fuss or anything. It was a fairly common occurrence and we got used to the lack of privacy."

There were several reasons for coming to Victoria.

"The main reason is our son. We want to get him settled and we want him to get a good education. There is also a long-term uncertainty about the future of Hong Kong."

The city has a lease with mainland China which expires in 1997, Browne said, and the economic climate will become unsettled as the time for the expiry date approaches.

"I expect that a great deal of Hong Kong money will be transferred to Canada over the next few years. Businessmen there are concerned about the uncertainties associated with the end of the lease. Canada is considered the ideal place to invest capital."

Hong Kong citizens of Chinese origin also look to Canada as a place to invest money.

"There is a family connection. They send their young people to Canadian schools and universities, believing they are superior to those in the Orient or those in the United States, and then they naturally develop an interest in this country. A large amount of Hong Kong money has already been invested in British Columbia and much more will follow."

In his "sort of" retirement he will actively explore Victoria's recreation facilities as well.

In Hong Kong he had little time for relaxation.

"Businessmen work six days a week there and the Chinese work seven days. It is not like the system in Europe and North America where they work five days a week and quit early on Friday.

"My favorite activity for relaxation in Hong Kong was boating and I still own a boat there. It is much like Victoria in that regard. The potential for boating here is tremendous."

Bride-Bribe Term

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A Soviet woman who exacted thousands of rubles and expensive gifts in payment for her daughter's hand in marriage has been jailed for three years in Turkmenia, Soviet Central Asia, the newspaper Pravda reported. Authorities have been trying to stamp out the ancient tradition of "bride-money" in the Soviet province, the newspaper said.

Handicap Pension Freeze Predicted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Failure of the provincial government to pass on a $22.50 federal government payment to handicapped persons was not unexpected, a spokesman for the handicapped said Thursday.

"I've lived a very long time in this province and I'm aware that this is what happens all too often," said Lee Freeman, a planner for the the Social Planning and Review Council of British Columbia.

In the legislature Wednesday Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the federal government has been paying the province an extra $22.50 a month for each handicapped person since last October, but this money has not been added to pensions.

Replying to a question from Liberal Leader Gordon Gibson, Vander Zalm said the province adjusts its pension rates according to need rather than on the amount of money it has to spend.

Vander Zalm said the pension rates are being reviewed, but the review has been delayed because handicapped persons have not responded to requests for information.

But Hugh McLeod, a spokesman for the Handicapped Action Committee in Victoria, said today handicapped persons have responded "many, many times" over the past four months to such requests.

"I can see perhaps the review may have been delayed because of the responses, but most assuredly it has not been delayed through lack of response."

Outside the legislature, Vander Zalm said the social planning and review council had sent some information "but it was pretty disappointing."

"The minister bases allowances for handicapped on physical and economic need," said Freeman. "Our concept is that they should be based on equalization.

Mill Firm To Fight Rezoning

NORTH COWICHAN — Island Shake and Shingle Ltd. will ask the B.C. Supreme Court to squash a North Cowichan rezoning bylaw which would block the company's plans for a shingle mill on Cowichan Bay.

President Bert Rodenbush, following first reading of the bylaw earlier this week, said it's unfortunate council has decided to proceed.

"With the investment we have in this property, a few more dollars to fight in the courts is not going to make much of a difference."

Final adoption of the bylaw is expected at a council meeting Feb. 16.

Former Prince George Cruise Ship Up for Sale

The Wong brothers of Nanaimo are now trying to sell the former Canadian National cruise ship Prince George to a European or American buyer.

Efforts to sell the ship locally have failed.

The purchaser will have to be prepared to pay more than the $325,000 the Wongs gave to the provincial government for her last March.

Gunner Wong said today the ship, docked at the old Canadian Pacific Railway dock in Nanaimo, is costing around $500 a day for such things as insurance, a watchman and moorage.

Moorage, paid to the CPR's Marathon Realty, is about $2,000 a month, Wong said.

He estimates the ship has already cost he and his brothers $500,000.

"We want to get our money out," he said.

He said there have been "several local bids" on the ship but none of them high enough. This is why the Wongs are using ship brokers to try and make a sale in Europe or the United States.

The Wongs bought the 350-foot vessel and planned to make her into a seafood restaurant and convention centre but are unable to find anywhere to moor her permanently. The present location is available for a limited time, the Marathon Realty property being up for sale.

VIENNA CHOPPED

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada Friday announced suspension of service to Vienna effective March 25 as a result of insufficient traffic volume and escalating costs.

Canada's national airline said it would continue to maintain an office in Vienna and the route's economic viability would be periodically reassessed.

In late January Air Canada suspended its services to Brussels, Prague and Moscow.

KIDS LAUNCH CANDY BOYCOTT

PORT COQUITLAM (CP)—All members of an elementary class have decided to boycott candy bars because "we're just paying too much."

The youngsters have written a letter to the Anti-Inflation Board protesting increases in candy bars to 25 cents from 20 cents. They also plan to lecture other classes on the need for the boycott.

The group's letter to the Anti-Inflation Board says the pupils hope adults will join the protest.

Chocolate bars aren't particularly healthy, says Robin McGregor, 12, but they are a treat.

"But no one will get any treats if the prices are like that."

Class teacher Jim Polomerk said he had nothing to do with launching the protest.

Cheap Birds Seized By B.C. Board

VANCOUVER (CP) — Super-Valu will challenge the British Columbia Broiler Marketing Board's authority in British Columbia Supreme Court following board seizure of about 1,000 imported chickens, company spokesman Shirley Anne Brown said Friday.

Ms. Brown said it was the company's understanding that the board "has no authority over imported chickens."

The supermarket company began selling Missouri-grown birds on Wednesday at its 45 Vancouver-area stores as an "in-store special."

The imported chickens cost the store about 55 cents a pound, compared with a wholesale cost of 75 cents a pound from B.C. processors, and were to sell at 59 cents a pound.

Martin McNeil, a marketing board inspector, entered several stores Thursday and placed seizure tags on the birds, forbidding anyone to move them.

"We are simply carrying out our job as the consumers' buying agent," said Ms. Brown, reading from a statement Friday. "Our first responsibility is to our customers."

She said the chickens, which were cleared by federal health and agriculture authorities, are fresh, whole, U.S. department of agriculture grade A chickens.

Ms. Brown, noting that imported chickens have been sold in Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta, said the entire 20-cent saving Super-Valu made on the U.S. purchase was being passed on to consumers.

Bruce McAninch, a chicken farmer and chairman of the marketing board, said Kelly Douglas Co. Ltd. asked the board in November for permission to import U.S. chicken and was refused. The wholesaler is part of the Weston Food Group which owns Super-Valu.

McAninch said the board agreed to a joint study with the food industry of high B.C. chicken prices in December and understood the supermarkets would continue selling B.C. chicken while the study was being carried out.

The chicken seizure was followed Friday by local chicken farmers setting up picket lines at Super-Valu stores at two area shopping centres.

McAninch said Super-Valu's action could jeopardize the jobs of 1,000 workers in the B.C. processing industry, in addition to the 230 chicken-meat producers in the province.

"They (Super-Valu) are supposed to be a Canadian company doing something for the Canadian economy," said McAninch.

SOCCER FAN STABBED

— LONDON (Reuter) — A policeman was stabbed outside the Chelsea soccer ground today before the start of Chelsea's Second Division league match against Millwall.

Inside the ground, 12 mounted policemen were called into action to quell fighting in the crowd.

Police also had to move in to break up fights among spectators at two other London grounds, Charlton Athletic and Tottenham Hotspur.

No Dead Heroes, Please

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is interested in good citizens, not dead heroes.

Manager Brian Small said Friday the chamber doesn't have a pot of gold available "for onyone who's done the hero bit."

And it certainly isn't suggesting anyone grapple with an armed holdup man in an effort to earn a reward.

He was commenting on a reward fund announced earlier, suggested by businessman Sidney Kovnats as a way of increasing public interest in catching robbers, or helping police to track them down.

There have been 18 holdups or attempted holdups in Greater Victoria so far this year.

Chamber president Alan Emery endorsed the idea of the reward fund and said members would be canvassed.

Small said the chamber has rewarded acts of good citizenship in the past, paying $50 rewards to three boys several years ago after they caught vandals damaging gravemarkers in Ross Bay cemetery.

Emery said the first to benefit from the newly-established fund would be three boys who caught a would-be holdup man in Colwood Tuesday night.

Small said one of the three phoned him Friday, looking for his money. But the usual way for such matters to be handled is for a recommendation to be debated by the chamber's executive committee first, he said.

Meanwhile, one donation of $30 has come in toward the reward fund.

Pigs for Queen

APIA, Western Samoa (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth sipped a potent local brew and was ceremonially presented with pigs when she stepped ashore in Western Samoa today on her jubilee tour of the South Pacific.

Non-Metal Boats Get Reflectors

WINNIPEG (CP) — Non-metallic pleasure boats in Canada will be required to carry radar reflectors after Jan. 1 of next year, members of the Canadian Yachting Association were told Friday.

Michael O'Dowd of Toronto, a senior marine surveyor for the Ministry of Transport, told the group's annual meeting that exemptions would be available in cases where installation of reflectors is impractical and not essential for safety.

Radar reflectors would allow vessels equipped with radar to spot non-metallic boats. Sails, fibreglass and wood do not reflect radar signals.

EVEN THE QUEEN AFFECTED

Massive Copter Fraud

By BILL RICHARDS
Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Millions of dollars in potentially-substandard helicopter parts have been sold to foreign military helicopter fleets a knowledgeable industry informant has told authorities here.

These fleets provide, among other duties, NATO anti-submarine defence and personal transportation to heads of state such as the Queen of England, the Shah of Iran and Egyptian president Anwar Sadat, the informant has said.

The parts were sold with forged identification and misleading inspection documents in identifying them as top-quality, brand-name components, the source added.

Senior helicopter industry officials have called the allegations "serious" and "alarming" and investigations are under way here and in England to determine if they are true.

If the charges are accurate, officials say, they could cause the grounding of hundreds of European military helicopters.

Correcting the problem might cost as much as $100 million, experts say. In extensive interviews recently, the informant repeated his story to The Washington Post.

The Post also interviewed other officials familiar with all or part of the alleged scheme, and they confirmed the informant's story.

Two of the informants expressed fears for their personal safety because of the story, and all requested anonymity.

According to the allegations, company names or federally issued identification numbers have been forged on the parts indicating they came from — and met the standards of — the Bell Helicopter Co. of the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corp.

Actually, neither company made or inspected the parts, which were manufactured by other firms working without critical processing specifications, according to the allegations.

The parts were given what appeared to be U.S. Federal Aviation Administration airworthiness certification.

However, the certifications came from several FAA-licensed helicopter repair stations which were not equipped to give them full inspections nor authorized to issue the certifications.

Officials at one such station admitted to The Washington Post that they were not in a position to vouch for the parts' airworthiness even though they issued the certifications.

Misleading certification also was supplied by Bell-licensed inspection stations in Southern California.

The stations were licensed by Bell to install pre-tested Bell parts, but they were not equipped to do sophisticated testing on their own to prove the parts could meet Bell stress, metal-fatigue or heat-testing requirements.

Nor were the certifications authorized by Bell, according to a Bell official.

The suspect parts have allegedly ended up in at least 608 helicopters in the military fleets of Britain, West Germany, France, Belgium, Norway, Australia, Egypt, Qatar and Pakistan, and they also may have been sold to the military helicopter fleets of Iran and Holland.

A Bell official and a British military official in Washington said that if the charges are accurate they could require the grounding of virtually all of England's military helicopter fleet.

British and West Germany helicopters play a major role in NATO anti-submarine warfare defences, according to U.S. Defence Department officials.

The parts allegedly have also been installed on the personal helicopters of Queen Elizabeth and Egyptian President Sadat and on a military helicopter owned by the shah, according to the allegations.

In addition, the parts may

GOV'T GRABS A 'FORTUNE'

VANCOUVER (CP)—At the time, Bob Neumann thought the $360 he got from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board was a small fortune.

It was for the bruises, broken glasses and torn, blood-stained clothing that was a result of a mugging six months ago.

"Now, it seems like a helluva lot more money because (Provincial Human Resources Minister Bill) Vander Zalm is going to take it out of my handicapped allowance," Neumann said in an interview Friday.

Neumann, a construction laborer disabled by a back injury, lives on $265-a-month handicapped allowance and another $50 he earns hooking rugs.

His social worker told him this week he would probably miss one month's allowance and part of another to make up for the $300.

Neumann said he'll try to get by on his $100 renter's grant from the provincial government, the $40 he has in the bank and his rug money.

"I'll ask my landlord to trust me for a while and go round to the missions for some of my food."

Neumann got the $300 in January, five months after "two young punks punched me out twice in one night."

First, they banged on the door of his two-room shack in the city's skid road district. Killer, Neumann's mongrel dog, went barking after them and was kicked by the hoodlums.

"I went out and they worked me over."

When Neumann went out later to look for his dog, the youths drove by and pummelled him while he was writing down their car licence number.

Neumann said he spent his $300 this way: $75 on overdue rent for his $150-a-month dwelling; $65 owed to B.C. Hydro on a light and heat bill that averages $30 a month; $50 on clothes; $40 into the bank, and the rest on an improved diet.

"I ate shoulder steaks, chuck roasts, pork picnics and other stuff I can't usually afford."

Neumann said he applied for the criminal injuries payment last September after his social worker said it wouldn't be deducted from his allowance.

"Now she tells me the law has been changed and I'll have to pay it back."

A spokesman for the Human Resources Department in Victoria said the $300 "would probably be recoverable."

"This is, after all, taxpayers' money we are talking about," she said.

Sudden Thaw Threat to East

Times News Services

A sudden thaw coupled with rain threatened to set the eastern United States awash in melted snow and ice this weekend.

A flood watch was posted for western New York state, where Mayor Stanley Makowski of blizzard-shocked Buffalo cautioned: "There's a real potential for another disaster: flooding. There must be some massive preparations now."

But, in the West, the problem is lack of water. Wells and reservoirs are drying up. California is considering state-wide rationing. Grain and feed crops in the Midwest may shrivel, and some farmers are selling animals for slaughter because they can't water them.

Temperatures Friday were from four to 10 celsius through most of the East, in contrast to record-setting lows at the beginning of the month.

Major rivers are still well below flood levels because of ice buildups, but continued warm weather will melt that ice.

Ice still chokes a 63-mile stretch of the Mississippi above Cairo, Ill., where commercial river traffic has been stalled for nearly a month. Sunken barges are hampering tugs trying to punch through ice as thick as nine feet in some spots.

Temperatures above freezing were forecast for most of the U.S. throughout the weekend, with rain likely as well late today and Sunday. More showers are considered likely for Monday and Tuesday.

"This will cause continuous melting of snow and river ice through the weekend, and as a result the potential for movement and jamming of the ice will increase during the next several days," the U.S. weather service said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais Friday accepted a challenge to determine if newspapers can be delivered faster by pony express than by mail.

The challenge was initiated by the Manitoba Community Newspapers Association and conveyed to the minister in the Commons by Brandon MP Walter Dinsdale.

Blais said he is confident the mail will win despite association claims that pony express is faster than the current speed of mail delivery.

"The post office has no competition from pony express," Blais said in a lighthearted exchange with Dinsdale.

Although no date was set for the contest, Blaise said he understands the association prefers to wait until spring when snow would not hamper efforts by the four-footed mail carriers.

Soviet Static Is 'Bent' Radar

COPENHAGEN (WP) — A high-powered radio beam disrupting short-wave broadcasts all over northern Europe has been identified here as a new, Soviet radar system that "bends" with the curvature of the earth.

According to Danish military intelligence, the system appears to have been designed to pick up and target incoming low-flying aircraft or missiles that elude conventional radar screens. Two such targets, according to the Danes, would be the U.S. cruise missile and B-1 bomber, both still under development.

Danish technicians have established that the beams emanate from a radar-system and the device is essentially defensive, according to military sources. They rule out speculation that the transmissions are part of an offensive aimed at giving the Soviets a strike capability after a nuclear attack.

The Danes, however, readily acknowledge they are able to make only a limited examination of the Sovilet beams. The United States, with its satellites and other technically advanced equipment, is relied upon by Denmark and other NATO allies to deliver a definitive analysis.

The Danish Postal and Telegraph Administration first picked up the signals in August, according to Borge Nielsen, the chief engineer. Copenhagen sent routine complaints to the Soviet telecommunications authorities. These were ignored. So Denmark, with Norway, protested formally to the Soviet Foreign Ministry last November. That produced a reply of sorts. The Soviets said they were carrying out experiments and would make an effort to reduce the interference.

Identical messages were given other protesting nations, but the signals continue.

The signals continue to this day, appearing irregularly on different frequencies and at odd hours.

Nielsen said so far the interference has not caused any accidents involvng planes or ships using radio for communication and navigation. He added, however, he feared some disaster might occur if munication and navigation. He added, however, he feared some disaster might occur if the experiments are not brought under control.

One-Man Probe Into CS Bargaining

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government has appointed a one-man committee to review the public service collective bargaining structure and make recommendations for possible changes.

Carrying out the study is Richard Higgins, a retired government employee, who headed the five-man committee which recommended in late 1972 that public service employees be given collective bargaining rights.

The committee was appointed by the former NDP government and its recommendations resulted in the Public Service Labor Relations Act, passed by the legislature in the fall of 1973.

The legislation gave the employees the right to strike for the first time and established a two-tiered system of collective bargaining.

Higgins has been asked to determine whether the legislation has been properly implemented and whether further changes are necessary.

He has received briefs on the issue from five interested groups and next week those involved are to comment on the submissions of the other parties.

The groups involved are the B.C. Government Employees Union, the Professional Employees Association, the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association, acting as a unit, the Public Service Commission and the Government Employee Relations Bureau.

A source said Higgins is expected to have all the submissions by the end of the month and will likely have submitted his recommendations to the government by the middle of March.

If there are to be changes, both parties would like to see them brought in during the current legialative session, the source said.

Some dissatisfaction with the existing bargaining system was expressed by both sides following the end of negotiations last December for a contract for 33,000 public service employees in 13 components.

Under the two-tiered system, bargaining takes place for a master agreement on matters common to all groups and then there is a separate level of negotiations for wages and matters peculiar to each of the 13 occupational groups.

Mike Davison, vice-chairman of the Government Employee Relations Bureau, said in December he would like to see the two-tiered system scrapped because there is potential for strikes at 14 different levels — the one master agreement and the 13 component agreements.

BIOLOGIST, RECEPTIONIST DEAD

'Crime of Passion'—Police

By DEREK SIDENIUS

A tragic love affair is blamed for the murder of Antionette (Toni) Beltgens and apparent suicide of well-known wildlife biologist Ian Donald Smith.

Victoria and Saanich police said late Friday they consider the incident a "crime of passion," the action of an overwrought, jilted lover.

Miss Beltgens, 24, of 308-3142 Cedar Hill Roa dwas found in her car parked in the lot next to a medical-dental centre at 3040-44 Shelbourne where she worked as a receptionist. Police said she died of a single bullet wound to her head.

Her body was discovered at about 9:30 a.m. by a patient coming out of a dentist's office who noticed the driver's window of her car shattered.

Police believe she had been killed about half an hour earlier as she arrived to work.

Later in the morning, at about 10:30 a.m. two students walking to the top of Mount Tolmie to find a place to study stumbled on the body of Smith, lying behind a waist-high stone wall between the lookout parking lot and reservoir.

A Winchester 30-30 rifle lay across his body. Police said he put the rifle in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

Police found four spent cartridges near the body and presume he fired three rounds to bolster his courage before apparently turning the gun on himself.

His car was parked nearby, a box of shells under a quilted coat on the front seat, a red gun case folded on the back seat. On the rear bumper was a sticker that said: "There is no grass beyond the mountains."

Saanich police said Smith mailed a suicide note to a friend. It was handed in to police at 5 p.m. Friday. Insp. Robin Stewart would not reveal the contents.

The two deaths have left their friends and colleagues shocked, and baffled.

"I don't know how a person could be so distraught as to do a thing like that," said Dr. John Bandy, administration and planning head of the wildlife branch.

"Nobody had any notion Ian was under a lot of stress," said Jim Hatter, former director of the branch.

Smith, 37, of 218 Portsmouth, was in charge of wildlife inventory for B.C. at Victoria. He'd held the position since 1973. Before that he was regional wildlife biologist for Vancouver Island at Nanaimo for three years.

He was highly regarded by his co-workers.

"If he had one fault it was he tended to be academic in his approach," said Hatfer. "But it's a fault most of us in this business share."

Durirg his time in Nanaimo his marriage broke down and divorce followed. His wife has since remarried and is living up-Island.

Shortly after he moved to Victoria he met Miss Beltgens who was a clerk with the fish and wildlife branch at the time.

The two were frequently seen together but in recent months the affair seemed to have cooled.

Miss Beltgens quit her job with the government last year and five months ago went to work for Dr. John Campbell at the Shelbourne clinic as his medical receptionist.

Campbell described her as efficient, quiet, punctual.

"She did her job extremely well," and gave no hint of personal troubles, he said.

Campbell said he arrived at his office at about 9:15 a.m. to do some last-minute paperwork before catching the 11 a.m. ferry to go on a week's skiing vacation in Banff.

He pulled his car in alongside Miss Beltgens' but couldn't see the shattered window and didn't look inside.

He said he thought it unusual Miss Beltgens was not at her desk. He made a few phone calls and 15 minutes later left. As he was going out a man came up to him and told him about finding a body in a car in the lot.

"What a shock," he said. "You read about these sort of things in the newspaper or see it on TV but never think it will happen to you."

Smith was the author of one book — The Unknown Island, a pictorial representation of Vancouver Island — and was working on another dealing with the Queen Charlotte Islands. He was a frequent contributor to wildlife and outdoor journals.

While attending school and university, where he achieved top grades, Smith spent his summers as a reporter for the Times, between 1957 to 1962, and the Colonist in 1965 and 1966, working mainly in the sports department.

His parents are retired in Australia. His father, Lloyd Smith, was sanitary inspector in Victoria. He has one married sister in Vancouver.

Police don't know whether there will be an inquest or inquiry into the deaths. Much will depend on a ballistics check of the bullets that killed the pair. Tests are expected to be completed over the weekend.

Losing Battle For MDs

Regional planners are expected to override protests from some doctors and commit themselves Wednesday to building a new general hospital in View Royal.

They'll have the backing of Health Minister Bob McClelland who Friday accused Dr. Peter Banks, the most vocal opponent, of "absolutely incorrect" public statements on the issue.

McClelland said he thinks Banks is "playing games" on the whole matter of local hospital development.

In a letter to the Times editor this week Banks, former president of the Canadian Medical Association and a past chief of staff at Victoria General Hospital, said a yet-to-be-released consultant's report is opposed to splitting that hospital on two sites.

After years of debate, current plans call for Victoria General to be replaced eventually with a 500-bed hospital on Helmcken Road just north of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The new hospital would have 300 beds initially. Victoria General will continue operations until the new hospital is completed and then will likely be revamped to provide chronic care.

Banks wrote that it is not sensible to move the whole hospital out to Helmcken Road because the people Victoria General serves are overwhelmingly in the downtown and their numbers will increase.

In an advertisement in today's Times, McClelland says a consultant's study recommends moving Victoria General as far west as possible from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

It's taken 10 years of talking and more than $100,000 in consulting fees to reach current planning and it's time for action, the health minister says.

" . . . we have got the site. We have settled the immediate number of beds. We have got the capital funds — let's get the hospital built."

McClelland said contrary to what Banks claims, the latest consultant's report does not oppose splitting Victoria General. It has in fact recommended a split, with 350 beds going up on the Helmcken site. McClellan had earlier ruled the new hosptial will have 300 beds to start, about 500 eventually.

Last month the Victoria Medical Society launched a petition campaign urging McClelland not to divide the hospital over two sites.

The society, which has close to 500 doctors as members, argued that such a move would result in expensive duplication of medical services, lowered staff morale and oculd imperil patient care.

Dr. Norman Bailey, the society's president, said Friday its worst fears are about to be realized and the impossibility of dividing a hospital operation is about to be learned the hard way.

Petition signatures will be assembled early next week for presentation to the health minister, he said. They numbered about 4,000 in a count taken a week ago.

Target: School Bullies

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

An Oak Bay couple whose grade 6 son was kicked unconscious want parents to "come out of the woodwork" and tell school trustees there is widespread concern about school bullies.

John and Carolyn Fraser, 764 Transit, have two children attending Monterey elementary.

Fraser, a teacher in Saanich, said his son was working on the street crossing patrol recently when a bigger Grade 7 boy came up and demanded one of the crossing flags.

"My son gave it to him because he knew he was a bully and was afraid of him."

But the bully kicked him anyway. Fraser's son was kicked so severely in the groin he passed out, falling so his upper body was lying in the street.

He lay there until he regained consciousness, Fraser said.

"Our concern was that he very easily could have been run over," Fraser said.

The older boy is a well-known bully, Fraser said, but there isn't much teachers and the principal can do.

"Their hands are tied," he said.

As a teacher, Fraser said he knows how tough it is for schools to do anything about the problem.

"If you try and expel a student you get so much flak it's just not worth it. You feel as if you put your career on the line."

He said the attitude seems to be to wait it out, and soon the bully will pass on to another school.

"But meanwhile 30 or 40 kids go terrified to school every day," he said.

Monterey principal Leonard Lane confirmed there are some bullies at the school as there are at most.

Fraser said he and his wife will address the school board meeting Feb. 21, and he hopes other concerned parents will make their feelings known to trustees.

"Nothing's going to happen until parents try and change it," Fraser said.

15 Firms Eyeing Royal Oak

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said today about half the land south of Royal Oak just approved for light industry could be occupied by new company operations within a couple of years.

About 15 companies are interested in locating there and he believes some plans are already drawn, he said, but declined to name any of the firms.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen announced Friday the cabinet has allowed removal of 103 acres there from the agricultural land reserve.

The exclusion had been recommended by the B.C. Land Commission, he said. Both Saanich and regional plans had earmarked the area for light industry and warehouse use.

The area in question is flanked by the Northridge subdivision to the west, the Pat Bay Highway to the east, Kay Street to the south and Mann Avenue to the north. There is scattered housing but much of it is open land.

Nielsen said the commission did not dispute the agricultural capability of the land but noted it is already divided into small parcels under separate ownership and is surrounded by residential and light industrial development.

Neighborhood groups who opposed the development appeared uncertain today what moves, if any, are left to them. Laurie Cook, chairman of a concerned citizens' committee, said he believes the decision can be appealed back to the cabinet and that course will be considered.

Mrs. John Clay, president of the Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association, said opponents will remain vocal and have 46 questions they want council's lands, planning and housing committee to answer.

Tardy Cash May Mean Welfare

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Ten persons employed on a Local Initiatives Program project in the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin-Sooke area may be forced to apply for welfare because of a federal government delay in providing promised funds.

Nina Laczewska, co-ordinator of the project, which started Jan. 18, said Thursday that despite written assurances the group would get a grant of $38,250 from the federal job creation branch, it hasn't received a penny.

"It's come to the point where I've had to advise my people to go to human resources and apply for welfare," she said in an interview.

She said she and her co-workers have been getting by on $2,000 she has borrowed from a Colwood bank.

The money's gone and the bank won't extend her credit, she said, because Manpower refuses to guarantee any loan.

The group's plight has become so desperate that she's trying to make some arrangement to borrow money from another LIP project in the area.

"It's a ridiculous situation," she said. "I'm just waiting for the explosion to come when the provincial government finds out it may have to pay welfare because the federal government hasn't come through with a grant."

The project, called ACT — Access to Community Television — is set up to help residents in the western communities take advantage of free use of the local Channel 10 cablevision facilities.

Mrs. Laczewska said she submitted the project to the job creations branch in Victoria last September.

On Dec. 31 she got a letter from local NDP MP Tommy Douglas saying the project had been approved and a grant of $38,250 authorized, allowing her to hire nine persons at between $138 to $140 a week.

But there were problems from the start, she said.

It took her several days to find out when the project was to begin. Finally someone told her — Jan. 10. But by then it was too late to advertise the positions. The result — a delay of one week.

She said she has moved a 40-foot trailer next to the cablevision office on Sooke Road five miles west of Glen Lake. The rent is $200 a month. Stationery had to be bought, phone installed and propane for heating connected. None of the bills has been paid.

She said she has been told she won't get any money until a contract is signed and returned to her.

On Monday she signed the contract. It was then sent to Vancouver. She's still waiting for it to come back.

She said she's also been told it will take at least three weeks after the contract is returned before grant money is deposited in the project's bank account.

'Softer' Bumpers

B.C. Hydro buses will be fitted with new impact-absorbing bumpers, a spokesman said this week.

He said the large, black bumpers, made of rubber and polyurethene fill, are designed to reduce the chance of injury to passengers in the event of an accident.

BACKYARD BLAST PROBED IN OAK BAY

Oak Bay police are investigating an explosion that rattled the windows of homes in the 3000-block Cadboro Bay Road Friday night.

A police spokesman said the blast, reported at 10:30 p.m., came from the back yard of an elderly man who asked his name not be made public.

Police found a 12-inch hole in the yard and some shreds of paper, but were unable to tell what caused the explosion.

"We think it could have been a homemade bomb, possibly the work of kids, but that's just speculation," the spokesman said.

If You're a Non-Skier, V.I. Gives You the Best Deal

max low

So the warm rays from the sun make you cringe, eh?

You dashed out and bought all those goodies in the fall ski sales and you've been studying the skies ever since. Nothing. Zilch. Not a flake.

Dreams of schussing (not too sure what that is but it sounds fun) down the slopes have died, at least for another year. You've tired of clumping around your living room in giant boots and skis, leaving sitzmarks in the carpet instead of in the snow and occasionally poking holes in the chesterfield with your poles. So you've put them all away in the closet.

You're a non-skier. In fact, you're one of the best-equipped non-skiers around!

But at least you can thank your lucky ski boots you're a non-skier on Vancouver Island — instead of a non-skier on the Lower Mainland. Many of you can, anyway.

A hell of a lot of people spent a hell of a lot of money buying season's lift passes for Vancouver's popular Grouse Mountain. Adults' passes, for example, were $175. Youth passes were $120 and family passes $175 for the first person and $140 for each family member after that. So a family which paid for five people has spent over $700 for the privilege of noet skiing on Grouse Mountain.

The fact there has been no skiing isn't the operators' fault. It isn't anyone's fault. Except, perhaps, Uller the Snow God who has been a bit lax doing his thing as far as the Pacific Northwest is concerned.

But now all those who forked out a lot for nothing on Grouse have been told that nothing is what they're getting back, too. And there will be nothing knocked off next season's lift passes, either. In the words of Gary Kiefer, general manager of Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd.:

"I don't think we'll refund. You take a certain gamble when you buy a pass . . ."

Well skiers, you might be pleased to know you don't seem to have to take that "certain gamble" here on our Island.

Not one of the three Island resorts have managed to get in a single day's skiing in this crazy balmy winter. But none of them appear to be balking, either, at the thought of making sure the skiers themselves don't suffer financially.

This was to have been the third winter in operation for Mt. Arrowsmith near Port Alberni. They got very little snow the first two years but this one's been a disaster.

"We sold about 450 season's passes, including a lot for families," manager Tony Kiessling told me. "They cost $95 for adults and for families it's $175 for two adults and $40 for each child under 18.

"The passes themselves are non-refundable, but if there's no snow we would be in the position of taking money for nothing. The directors will have to approve this but I would say the passes will be carried forward to the next season at no extra cost."

I tracked down Forbidden Plateau manager Wolf Clar at Courtenay.

There, without a flake of snow in sight, they are, ironically, celebrating Winter Carnival Week. It ends tonight with the crowning of the Snow Queen at the Snow Ball. And I hope she doesn't melt!

Clar said the directors will make a decision at the end of April. But he felt that if there is no snow for the rest of the winter, the season passes would be carried over to next year.

Green Mountain, near Nanaimo, was the most fortunate of all. They hadn't sold any season's passes!

"We've had access problems and so people come up to see what it's like," explained president Walt Punnet of the Snow Birds Lift Society. "We sell a big percentage of our passes on the hill. But, of course, this year we haven't opened and so we haven't sold any."

If they had sold some then they'd make refunds, said Punnet. They need the goodwill. As Tony Kiessling explained:

"We rely very strongly on the local people and we intend to do everything we can to make it an equitable and fair settlement."

Well, the Grouse Mountain people don't have any qualms.

"When you buy a pass on a golf course and it rains and rains all season you just take it on the chin," said Kiefer. "No, I don't think we'll refund anybody."

Grouse people can be callous. They have such a big population to draw from. They can afford to turn a few thousand off. Our people can't.

Looks like we should chalk it up as another point in favor of life this side of the water.
